THAT FREEDOM

AGAIN the public hears extensively from the newspapers an urging from Mr. Walter Wanger that "a free press informs its readers on matters nearest their hearts and interprets the burning questions of the day. I cannot see why a free screen should not deal with such themes."

It is, according to the Associated Press report of Mr. Wanger's address to the American Library congress in San Francisco, his opinion that: "Democracies, unwisely fearing the power of this medium, have not allowed it to speak for democratic principles."

Developments may one day show that Mr. Wanger's persistent proclaimings have done a service for the liberation of the art of the screen. Assuredly his contention for new materials and new approaches in treatment are intended as constructive.

There is, however, possible a difference of opinion about what constitutes the restraints of which he complains.

There are just two factors of pressure affecting motion picture production in Mr. Wanger's Hollywood, importantly. Both are internal, of the industry's own voluntary adoption and application. First, by reason of experience with indiscretions, the organized American industry adopted a Production Code concerned entirely and exclusively with keeping the screen wares consistent with American mores and notions of plain decency. That assuredly is no handicap to Mr. Wanger, or his reputable contemporaries. Second, and most positively apart from any and all moral considerations, have been the political and economic expediencies and cautions self-dictated to an industry in international trade. Aggressive, important, promising picture materials have been shelved, held in cold storage, rejected or variously tossed aside for sheer trade reasons. If producers decide that it would be on the whole unprofitable to make such a picture as "It Can't Happen Here," or "Forty Days of Musa Dagh," that, as we have observed before, is a commercial decision, self-imposed.

SAYS Mr. Wanger, according to that same Associated Press report, "If restrictions on motion pictures were applied to literature, shelf after shelf would have to be stripped of its volumes."

That would only be true if publishers required the library to buy them a shelf full at a time and that the library required everybody who entered to read all the new books, or stay away.

The publisher has his freedom by his willingness to take his chances on a profit, book by book, on works that are not addressed to all the people all the time. Books are sufficiently inexpensively made to stand that. Also the stars of the library shelf, the authors, work on percentage, book by book, and nobody from publisher to author to vendor makes any money unless the customers in sufficient number like that particular book. The failures far outnumber the successes and the biggest losers on the failures are the stars and the producers, which is to say the authors and the publishers. Proportionately the author is the heaviest loser because he has less, far less, opportunity to average.

Also from the day the book emerges from the bindery everyone who buys it, from jobber to retailer, bookshop, drugstore or library, takes it on its individual merit and promise. The librarian is as much at liberty to select or reject as are the readers who come seeking pages of entertainment.

This endows the publisher with freedom, and acute responsibility, to his public or publics, to himself and, if he has them, his stockholders. Using this freedom he often loses money, sometimes encounters repression of his indecencies in print, gets a thrill out of his successes, and enjoys modest profits, if any. Anybody can write and publish a book, and it better be good, or else.

This, if one is to accept Mr. Wanger's analogies, has in a fashion some possible bearing on the state of the cinema, present and future.

Meanwhile, it is to be observed that on screen examination of wares currently available to the theatre, they do not seem to be so very hampered in their ideologies. The screen is its own master, making decisions of expediency. The gate is open for those who desire departures into new pastures.

GIFTS of MAGIC

IN its methodically organized showings of early films the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art is teaching the motion picture's more thoughtful workers, and a reasonable fraction of an interested public, what the medium is all about and how it got that way. One day such study may deliver the art from its rule-o'-thumb systems.

This week a showing was devoted, primarily on behalf of a gathering of magicians, to the early efforts of the late George Melies, of the Theatre Robert Houdin in Paris, maker of the famous "Melies Magic" pictures which established so much of what is today commonplace camera technique, but which was miracle in the days of '98.

The motion picture art has a large debt to the magicians among the founders and pioneers, including such persons as Albert E. Smith, one of the builders of Vitagraph, Alexander Victor, once "The Great Victor," and now a maker of equipment, and Paul Cinquevalli, greatest of the jugglers. Then we can remember that Houdini had his fling with the screen, too.

To them and their contemporaries the screen owes the origin of all that is known today as "trick photography."

Irrelevantly, it is to be recalled that M. Melies came to financial disaster in part because America "duped" his pictures instead of buying them, and that when he was taken into the protection of the Motion Picture Patents Company he failed some more, and finally, because he could not make "westerns," not even by sending a company to Texas.

SIX TO ONE

THE New York Herald Tribune has been looking into the buying habits of its readers and finds that 84 per cent of them patronize Broadway picture theatres, and that 97 per cent of them go somewhere to the movies on an average of three times a month. Some 89 per cent patronize the legitimate stage, 16.6 per cent once a month, while the average is six times a year.

More Than 500

At the start of the fountain pen and contract examining season exhibitors have been promised a total of between 500 and 512 features, including westerns, and 1,196 short subjects, including newsreels. A check of distributors shows that 79 per cent of the product promised for 1938-39 has been delivered to date with most of the balance either in production or awaiting release. Important in the producers' plans for the season are major increases in budgets, much of the additional expenditure being earmarked for "A" productions.

In addition to the current season product actually delivered, the studios in Hollywood this week had 64 features, another 13 per cent, completed. Thus the studios had ready 92 per cent of the 1938-39 productions, with nine weeks of the present season still to go.

outdraws the stage six to one, but, averaging prices, one discovers that the stage collects, per seat per show, about six dollars to the pictures' one dollar. And on, or in, the other hand, it is to be remembered that with its multiple performances the motion picture theatre probably averages at least two full capacities a day. And that cuts the per seat advantage in price for the stage in half.

Meanwhile, it all does indicate that there is yet something to be done about proving that "motion pictures are your best entertainment." What is to be done about that will have to be done picture-by-picture, the same way the customers buy them.

MR. LYNN FARNOL, in a reflective moment the other day, considering what he had been hearing about waning box office, summer slump and related maladies, hastened to call your editor for emphatic declaration that United Artists Corporation had decided the outlook was good enough to pour out in a four-week period beginning July 13 "The Man in the Iron Mask," "Winter Carnival," "Four Feathers" and "They Shall Have Music." Thumbing an altogether surprising file of ecstatic reviews, Mr. Farnol holds that this constitutes an event of the season.

Tax Victory

The British industry this week contemplated with calm its signal victory in the protest campaign against the excessive import and excise duties which were originally proposed in Sir John Simon's new budget and dropped almost immediately after the trade had launched an unprecedented appeal to the public through screen trailers and newspaper advertisements. Satisfaction was general over the fact the tax situation now remains about as it was before the new taxes were proposed with the single exception that the import duty is increased to five pence per linear foot.

The events leading up to the Government's decision to abandon the proposed increases are reported by Aubrey Flanagan on page 55.

Decoding the Code

The series of articles interpreting the proposed trade practice code in layman's language, which began last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, continues this week with a discussion of those clauses covering demand for exceptional features, preferred playing time, some run available, regular customers, short subjects and newsreels and score charges.

The article, by Louis Nizer, appears on page 30.

More Suits

Despite past, and scheduled, conferences by Department of Commerce officials with executives of virtually every branch of the motion picture industry, another arm of the Government, the United States Department of Justice, is reported as continuing a policy of "keeping right on suing." Semi-official information is that the trust busters shortly will file suit against two large independent circuits, in New York State and in Florida. Meanwhile, in New York City, the major company defendants in the Government's anti-trust action denied all of the charges. In Chicago, after hearing on July 7th, the Government's criminal contempt case against Balaban and Katz and the majors will be adjourned until September 5th.

Paramount Television

Paramount's interest in television was extended this week, when it applied to the Federal Communications Commission for a permit to build and operate an experimental transmitter in Hollywood, possibly on the studio property. The company already has approximately a half interest in the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, manufacturers of television equipment, and operators of a transmitter in the New York area. DuMont has applied to the FCC for permission to shift its transmitter from Passaic, New Jersey, to New York City, and to operate at full time and with 5,000 watts power instead of the 50 watts now employed; and has also asked for permission to build a transmitter in Washington, D. C., and operate a mobile unit.

Reminiscing

Gathered in a New York banquet room Thursday night were to be a group of over 90 men who began their motion picture careers 25 years ago or more. Entrance to the dining room was through a reconstructed nickelodeon front bearing one-sheets advertising the industry's first great screen epics and the cocktail and dinner conversation centered largely around a mood of mellow reminiscence. Thus was launched Picture Pioneers, a luncheon club, all of whose members can recall a quarter of a century of experience in the film industry. The club, conceived by Jack Cohn, president of Columbia, and largely brought into existence by his efforts, had immediate acceptance.

The story of the club's first conference and the future plans is on page 16 and starting on page 12 are pictorial evidences of the members' qualifications for membership.

New Amusement Head

Grover A. Whalen, president of the World's Fair (New York) Corporation, announced this week the appointment of Commander Howard M. Lammers, USN, retired, as chairman of the Fair's amusement control committee succeeding Jay Downer, who recently resigned.

Mr. Lammers' job will be that of overseer of all amusements except those operated by the Fair itself and the food and merchandise concessions. It was understood Mr. Lammers would be expected to maintain the same standards that prevail on Broadway.

Brandt Vaudeville

Vaudeville is "back again," and may be the answer to humdrum business in the subsequent runs, according to William Brandt, who, with his brother Harry, operates the Brandt circuit of independent theatres, in New York City. In announcing the success of a vaudeville policy at motion picture admission prices, in his Flatbush theatre this Spring, and the extension of the plan to other houses of the circuit, this September, and the probable inclusion of other independent theatre owners in a "vaudeville circuit," Mr. Brandt became optimistic about vaudeville's "return." Vaudeville is a "new entertainment form," Mr. Brandt says, to that generation which has grown since vaudeville virtually disappeared with the coming of the talking pictures. He also emphasized the familiarity with which present day audiences will greet vaudeville talent, because the radio, ordinarily a competitor of the theatre, has made these names known to most families.

Mr. Brandt is quoted on page 48.

Paramount Debentures

Arrangements for a $2,000,000 term loan at 3½ per cent with which to retire Paramount's six per cent debentures were completed with the First of Boston Corporation this week. Notice of the calling of the debentures will be published early next week.

There remains $1,930,000 of 6 per cent debentures outstanding of an original issue of $26,000,000. Paramount theatre subsidiaries under the direction of Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, have aided in the refunding of the entire amount at lower interest rates the past three years. Mullin and Pinanski Theatres of Boston is understood to be participant in the latest of the several refunding loans.

An annual interest saving of more than $700,000 will be effected, according to Paramount counsel, as a result of the retirement of the 6 per cent debentures.

Films for Television

The National Broadcasting Company has secured enough feature motion pictures to supply television schedules through the summer and fall, the first feature motion pictures NBC has been able to obtain since the start of regular television programming. For the most part the pictures are foreign productions including such French films as "Generals Without Buttons," "Ballerina" and "Carnival in Flanders," and such English films as "Edge of the World," "Peg of Old Drury" and "Old Curiosity Shop." It is understood that the films have been leased for single showings at a rental of approximately $150 a showing. The feature length films will replace all outdoor television programs starting July 4 under a new schedule, as the NBC mobile unit will be temporarily inoperative while additions and improvements are made.

Television news is on page 33.

James Roosevelt Signs

Two long term personnel contracts were signed by Samuel Goldwyn on Wednesday. The first was with James Roosevelt, in recognition, the announcement said, "of the work he has done in the production and distribution fields during his first six months as vice-president." The second was with Sam Wood, director, whose latest achievement was "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Mr. Woods' first assignment will be "Raffles."

Off Stage Noises

The intramural actors' union dispute which erupted last week into a near riot after a meeting called to register a vote of confidence in the officers of the American Federation of Actors, spread this week to a bitter three-cornered fight between Ralph Whitehead, Sophie Tucker and other officials of the AFA, a rebellious group within the Federation, and the American Association of Actors and Artistes, parent body of the various actors' unions.

The shouting and stamping are recorded on page 37.

Nut and Net

But slightly comforted were the 7,900 employees of the Works Progress Administration Federal Theatre Project when, on Tuesday, a Senate Appropriations Committee restored their project to life, after its extinction by the House two weeks ago, when that body passed the 1940 relief funds measure. The Senate "reprieve" is hedged by the provision that the project be continued only if local, as well as Federal, funds support it. Project supporters say this would make it inoperative. Protests by leaders in the theatre, literature, and politics were assumed to have caused the "slightly favorable" Senate action this week; and Senators Wagner, Downey, and Pepper were reported favoring an amendment to restore the project to its former sole Federal support.

This week, some 1,500 of the project personnel were dropped from the payroll in New York, where much of the project centered.

Testimony at the Senate hearings, has disclosed that the project spent $9,949,999 during the first ten months of this fiscal year; and had received $679,644, for the first nine months of the same year.

Anti-Protection

A Dominion-wide meeting of Canadian exhibitors to ratify the program of the recently organized Anti-Protection League is to be held soon, and it is expected that expansion of the original plans will be offered for endorsement by the League, which is sponsored by the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario.

The organization aims to set up an authority, whether self-regulatory or governmental, to outlaw unfair priority and protection, according to J. O. Scott, chairman of the League's central committee. "The League must among other things revamp or create new and suitable conciliation machinery or obtain government action," said Mr. Scott.

Mellow Reminiscence Is Mood At First 'Pioneers Conference'

Men Who Started Film Careers 25 Years Ago Gather at Dinner to Launch New Group

THERE was little seriousness, only banter, and some sentimentality at the gathering of almost one hundred men of the motion picture industry on Thursday evening at the Barberry Room, on 52nd Street, New York City.

It was the inaugural conference of the Picture Pioneers, a movement whose guiding spirit is Columbia Pictures' executive, Jack Cohn, and which now embraces over 90 men whose experience in the motion picture industry ranges back 25 years or more.

Guests at the conference—all future meetings of the New York group will be known by that name, it being "such a pastime" in this industry—were greeted in the lobby by a false front replica of an old-time nickelodeon. Through this front, upon which were plastered the titles of old pictures, they passed into the dining room. For about two hours, from cocktails through dinner, at a closed session, the guests exchanged reminiscences, and renewed acquaintances.

There were old-time songs and picture slides showing photos of the members taken 25 years, and more, ago. Among the speakers were Jack Cohn, Ned Depinet, George Schaefer, Barney Balaban.

"Out for No Good"

The organization, the founders of which purpose it to be a luncheon club with no dues and declare that "it's out for no good; it's out for laughs," was originally limited to a membership of about 75, but many more applications than that were received by the end of this week.

Though out-of-town units will be formed, several non-NewYorkers sent in reservations, among them Oscar Hanson, Clair Hague and Louis Rosenfeld, of Canada, Max Levey of Chicago, and A. C. Hayman of Buffalo.

Officers in the preliminary organization which functioned up to the dinner, were Mr. Cohn, as "house manager"; and Hal Hode, also of Columbia, as "ticket taker."

The "ticket taker" this week was very busy, indeed, handling a large share of the dinner arrangements. He was heard to urge that an "assistant house manager" was badly needed, and one was expected to be appointed shortly.

The Committee on Passes, in more seriously minded circles known as a "committee on membership," this week consisted of Herman Robbins, Ned Depinet, Joe Hornstein, George Schaefer, Barney Balaban, Ray Johnson, Martin Quigley and Ed Hatrick.

The guests saw a carefully selected show at the dinner, following the "serious" part of the evening. The talent was arranged for by Mr. Cohn, and Joe Vogel of Loew's.

Pictorial evidence of the qualifications of members of Picture Pioneers, showing them as they appeared at or about the time they directed the first timid steps of their business careers toward the motion picture industry appear on pages 12, 13, 14 and 15. The photographs are those submitted by the members with their membership acceptances.

The titles on the nickelodeon entrance to the dining room brought back some memories to the members. Among them were such moneymakers (and they were considered that in the old days) as "The Virgin's Dilemma," "Trapped by House Thieves," "The Brave Detective," "The New York Hat," "Broadway Bandits," "A Shot in the Night," "Sailor's Romance," "Mystery of the Hotel Detective," "The Little Lost Child," "The Life of a Fireman," "The Express Train Holdup," "The Cruel Stepmother," "The Bowery at Dark," "The Heart of a Sailor."

The old-time songs were well remembered, in effect, by most present, even if the words did not come to the tongue readily. Among them were "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "My Mother Was a Lady," "While the Old Mill Wheel Was Turning." They were projected on the screen, as in the old days.

Each member received a gold membership card and brown derbies which they were to wear through the dinner.

That the idea of a club consisting of only veterans has been well received in the ranks of the industry's notables is evidenced from an examination of the acceptance letters. Charles Pettijohn, general counsel to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said: "An organization of men who have been in the business 25 years or more is a grand idea. Out of the hundreds of years of combined experience that these men possess would come many things important to the business and to the next generation, and helpful to our country. Please 'include me in.'"

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures, wrote: "Count me in. There are so few of us left who have been in the business for 25 years that I'm sure such get-togethers will be a grand thing all the way around."

Dave Bernstein, vice-president of Loew's, commented, in accepting: "I think your idea is a good one. I am always for getting together in good fellowship."

Harry Buckley, vice-president of United Artists, indicated his approval, in writing, thus: "It has been a source of regret to me that the motion picture industry in New York has never been able to support even a modest luncheon club, and the failure of our two attempts to operate such an organization has always been a mystery to me. I think the idea of the Picture Pioneers, the members of which will be composed of those of us who have been in the business for many years, is excellent."

502 FEATURES FOR 1940; 79% OF 1939 DELIVERED

Larger Number Than in Current Season Planned Despite Increase of "A" Films and $30,000,000 Rise in Budget

The ten large companies, in their final plans for new product, stand committed to deliver to exhibitors in 1939-1940, a minimum of 500 and a maximum of 512 features, including westerns. In addition, they will have 12 serials, 98 two-reelers, 486 one-reelers, and the usual 520 single releases from the combined five newsreels, a total of 1,196 short subjects.

The 1939-40 totals of 500 minimum and 512 maximum, are 15 more than are on the present 1938-39 programs of 485 minimum and 493 maximum. This increase, slight as it is, comparatively, is notable in view of the announced plans of most of the companies to enlarge the number of higher-bracketed pictures for the new year, and to increase Class "A's" and decrease "B's." Hollywood-made estimates coming early in June from the studios counted 250 Class "A"s and specials for 1940, about half of the total programed, and a total season's budget increase of $30,000,000 over the $146,000,000 for the current season.

Eighty-two of the 512-maximum features scheduled for 1940 will be out-and-out westerns, a few in color, many with music. This represents 16 per cent of the total, about the same number coming from the ten large companies as this season.

The distributors have listed 12 serials, 486 one-reel subjects and 98 two-reelers for 1940—approximately the total of this year in each category.

The independent producers who will release on the states right market, not through major company channels, are still to be heard from as a group, and will add to the source of supply of features, westerns, serials and short subjects.

Six Plan Westerns; Three Have Serials

The western-film market among the large companies changes little from year to year, six of the companies standing committed to deliver action pictures in 1940: Columbia, with 16; Monogram, 16 (plus 16 reissues); Paramount, six; RKO, six; Republic, 24; and Universal, 14—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers not having any on their schedules, although each will have spatterings of outdoor pictures which cannot be classified as out-and-out westerns.

The old serial "standbys" remain Columbia, with four; Republic, with four, and Universal, producing the same. For the purpose of estimating short subject product available, the 16 serials, each of 12 chapters, can be counted as 192 two-reelers, to be added to the 98 straight two-reelers and 486 one-reelers promised, which, with the 520 newsreel issues; each equivalent to a one-reel film, would make a total of 1,196 shorts for 1940.

Monogram and Republic are the only companies of the ten large distributors with no short subjects, as in past years.

Columbia is the biggest distributor of short subjects, contributing 122 in 1940 (96 in one reel, 26 in two); RKO is second with 94 (70 singles, 24 doubles), followed by Warner Brothers, with 86 (68 singles, 18 doubles); Paramount, 85 (all in one reel); MGM, 79 (62 singles, 17 doubles); Universal, 56 (4 singles, 13 doubles); Twentieth Century-Fox, 52 (all one reelers), and United Artists, with ten single reels.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount are the only companies whose product commitments stand the same in the present season as in the new year coming up. Republic's 50 for 1940 is five less than 1939; Twentieth Century-Fox's 52 is two less than 1939; Warners' 48 is four less. On the up side, Columbia's 58 for 1940 is an increase of two over this year's; Monogram's 46 raises its number by four; RKO's 58 is 10 more; United Artists is down for two more, on a promise of 32.

By this weekend, the ten distributors will have completed and actually delivered 388 of the 493 maximum features promised for 1938-39, a total of 79 per cent, and a high one with the nine weeks of July and August still coming up to complete the season. In addition, 64 features, representing another 13 per cent, stand completed as of July 1st, for release after that date. This means that Hollywood studios have ready 92 per cent of the present season's product.

Columbia Pictures, with 56 promised for the current season, will have 40 actually delivered as of July 1st; MGM, 44 to 52 promised and 10 delivered; Monogram, 42 promised, 33 delivered; Paramount, 58 promised, 50 delivered; RKO, 48 promised, 37 delivered; Twentieth Century-Fox, 54 promised, 52 delivered; United Artists, 30 and 16 delivered; Universal, 46 and 37 delivered, and Warners, 52 and 43 delivered.

FILMS PREPARE GOODWILL PROGRAMS FOR SOUTH AMERICA AND EUROPE

Majors Will Start Broadcasting within Fortnight on Invitation of NBC and CBS to Use Their Facilities

The American motion picture industry within a fortnight will start broadcasting "goodwill" film messages to Latin America and Europe.

Losing no time in taking advantage of the offer by radio broadcasters to spread goodwill for films abroad, the majors not only have established the personnel in charge of conducting the programs, but this week were setting up machinery in New York and Hollywood to assure a steady flow of news and notes on pictures and personalities that will do the most good for Hollywood's product in Europe and throughout Latin America. There will be no charge to the motion picture business for the publicity, to be relayed by shortwave by both National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System.

Offers Accepted

CBS, three weeks ago, offered to make available to the industry a 15-minute, five-day weekly program on short waves to the Latin American countries and to Europe, to be given in a different language daily, in English, French, Italian, German, Spanish and Portuguese. NBC followed suit immediately, and last week, at a meeting of advertising and publicity directors of the large companies, in the New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., both offers were accepted and a committee appointed within the industry to handle the project. Headed by Charles E. McCarthy, advertising director of Twentieth Century-Fox, the committee is composed of Dave Blum, of the foreign publicity department of Loew's; Albert Deane, foreign publicity, Paramount, and Lester Thompson and Kenneth Clark, of the MPPDA.

The committee now is preparing sample scripts, the basic idea being to make the programs institutional and all-industry in character, to foster goodwill, understanding and support for American films. It is not intended to promote individual companies, their pictures or stars.

The working committee headed by Mr. McCarthy, now is formulating methods, including news sources, subjects to be covered, how to channel the material to the networks and so on. CBS and NBC reserve the right to approve the scripts.

Of the "Column" Order

The broadcasts, emanating from New York, will be of the column-of-the-air type. Included will be fan and trade information, news of new films, Hollywood anecdotes, humor and the like. The scripts will be factual. There will be no direct commercial "plugs."

The broadcast will be at a specified time each week, gauged to the best hours for foreign reception.

Definite policies and a program formula may not be established until after reaction is obtained to the first few broadcasts. A Hollywood clearing house for script material probably will be set up. Players and directors may be put on the air while visiting New York.

NON-ARYAN DECREE ISSUED IN PRAGUE

Following identically the lines laid down by the Nazis in Germany last year, which affected the motion picture industry there, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German "protector" for Bohemia and Moravia, issued a decree in Prague this week sharply curtailing the participation of non-Aryans in the commercial life of the protectorate and placing all their business activities directly under his control, including those in the motion picture business.

Under the decree non-Aryans are forbidden to acquire or lease real estate or to acquire any rights in such. They also are denied the right to acquire an interest in business undertakings or to purchase stocks and bonds. German courts will handle all violations of the new decree.

There were approximately 1,305 theatres in the protectorate, 48 distributors and importers, including representatives of American companies and some 23 producing companies, according to figures issued prior to Nazi control of Czechoslovakia.

$200,000 Less for Radio Commission

Reorganization of the Federal Communications Commission in Washington made impossible by the approaching end of the session, Congress this week was considering the appropriation of funds permitting the Commission to function during the coming fiscal year.

Faced with the fact that, unless money was provided, the FCC would go out of existence, the House Appropriations Committee on June 23rd approved a fund of $1,838,175 for the Commission in an urgent deficiency bill which the House, later that day, passed and sent to the Senate.

The appropriation is $93,175 more than the current fund of $1,745,000 enjoyed by the Commission during the year just ended, but $200,000 less than was requested.

Hearings before the Appropriations Committee as it prepared the bill developed that the cost of federal radio regulation may be expected to increase rapidly in the next few years, E. K. Jett, chief engineer of the Commission, testifying that within the next five years the FCC will need at least $5,000,000 a year.

The only debate on the Commission fund on the floor of the House related to the FCC's recent "censorship" order applying to international stations. It was explained, however, that the Commission would hold a hearing on that order during the next two or three weeks and that it would undoubtedly be revised not only to meet the protests of broadcasters, Congressmen and others, but to more clearly express the views of the Commission when it was adopted.

Warned by Representative Emmet O'Neal (Dem., Ky.), a member of the Appropriations Committee, that "I will never vote for a dime's worth of appropriation for any such un-American doctrine as that," Commissioner Thad H. Brown, acting chairman, explained at the hearings that the word "only" in the rule that "an international broadcast station shall render only an international service which will reflect the culture of this country," etc., did not refer to the program but was intended to mean that an international station "shall render only an international broadcast service" and that there was no intention of attempting to define programs.

The hearings also developed that the Commission is rapidly winding up its radio monopoly investigation and will have a report ready sometime in September.

Radio License Life Made a Year Longer

The Federal Communications Commission, in a surprise ruling last Thursday, extended the normal licensing period for standard broadcasting stations from six months to one year.

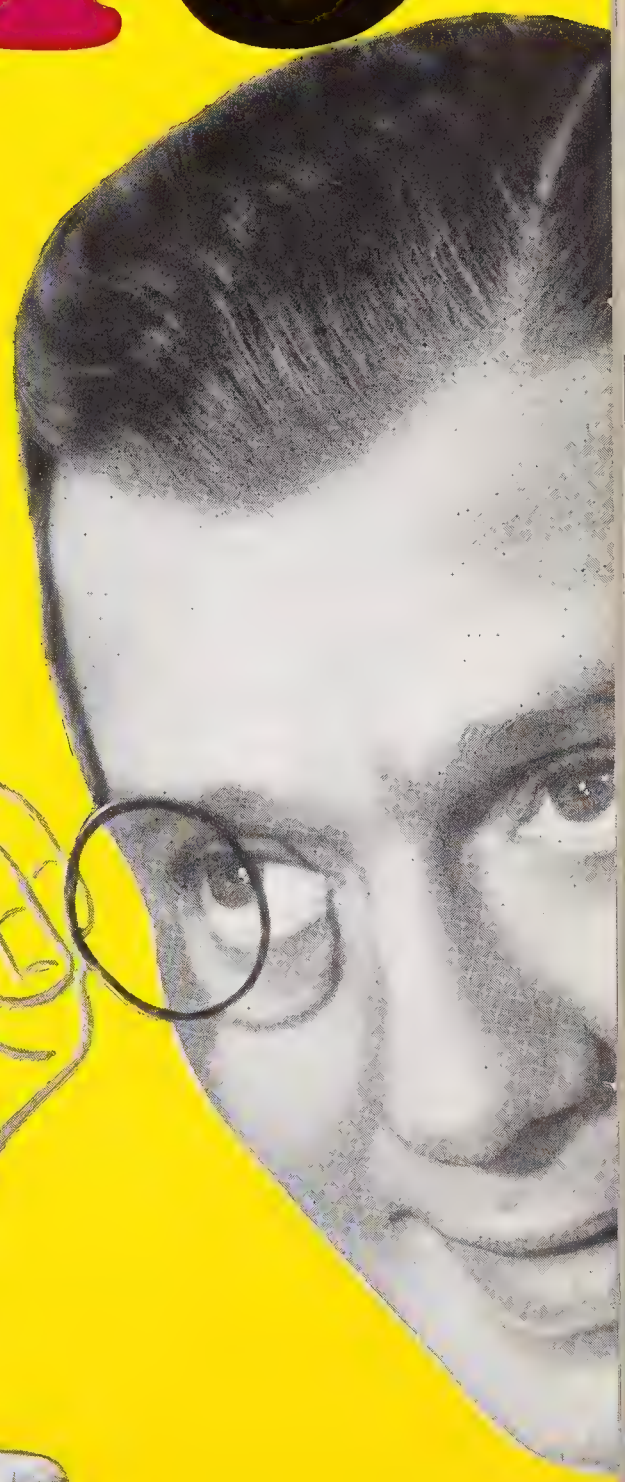
The action follows a campaign which broadcasting stations have been making ever since passage of the Radio Act in 1927 for the three-year licenses which are the maximum the law allows. Through all this 12-year period, however, the FCC and its predecessor stuck to the six-month license period.

In some quarters in Washington the action was taken as a Commission effort to set itself right with Congressional, journalistic and other critics who have been assailing it as seeking to set up an indirect censorship. Broadcasters have always held that the six-month license period operates as a form of indirect censorship,

Soviet Theatre Leader Arrested in Moscow

Vsevolod Meyerhold, Russian theatrical producer who became internationally famous through his futuristic stage technique, has been placed under arrest, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Moscow. Mr. Meyerhold is reported to have been taken from his Moscow home and placed in a cell at Lubiana prison.

Highly regarded in Russian circles as recently as three years ago for his productions of "Boris Gudonov" and "Queen of Spades," he was attacked late in 1937 by "Pravda," the Communist party organ, for producing anti-Soviet plays. Early in 1938 his theatre was closed and he was banned from the Soviet stage.



Changes in Soviet ranking theatrical personnel last week resulted in the appointment of Ivan Grigorivich as head of the motion picture section of the Council of People's Commissars, succeeding Semyen Dukelsky.

Set Famous Canadian Convention July 24

The annual theatre managers' conference of Famous Players Canadian Corporation is scheduled for the General Brock Hotel, Niagara Falls, Ontario, for four days starting July 24th.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president and managing director, will preside at the general meetings while the various district managers will be in charge of group and regional gatherings. N. L. Nathanson, president, will address the meeting on the final day, July 27th.

TRADE PRACTICE CODE POLISHED FOR FINAL LAUNCHING IN FIELD

Kent, Home from South America, Seconds Rodgers' Declaration That Distributors "Are Going Ahead with Program"

The trade practice agreement this week was being made ready for a final launching into the field.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox and chairman of the trade practice negotiating committee, returning from South America Monday, bore out the statement made earlier last week by William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales executive, to the effect that "We are going right ahead with the program." A formal statement was to be made by Mr. Rodgers on Thursday.

Said Mr. Kent, in effect, upon his return from his company's sales conventions in Buenos Aires and Trinidad:

Allied's rejection of the code was not unexpected.

He had, in fact, predicted such action by Allied, before sailing for South America several weeks ago.

He "would rather take chances with Thurman Arnold than with Abram Myers."

The distributors having made their final offer, the Code "may have to be tackled from another angle."

Says Arnold Has a Job

Mr. Kent said that Mr. Myers (general counsel of the national Allied States Association) was "presumptuous in expecting us to talk with him on divorcement. Such discussions cannot be binding on him, on us or on the United States Government." With respect to his statement on preferring to "take a chance" on Thurman Arnold (the assistant attorney general in charge of the anti-trust division of the United States Department of Justice, now pressing the Government's anti-trust suit against the majors) rather than Mr. Myers, Mr. Kent added that "Mr. Arnold has a job to do and we know that he is doing it the best he knows how."

It is anticipated that the code will be featured as a part of the 1939-40 contracts being offered exhibitors, and retroactively to include all contracts for new season product already signed, despite the flat rejection of the Code by National Allied and some of its state and regional affiliates.

Year After Negotiations Began

Reflected by other distributors, for the most part, were Mr. Kent's sentiments when he said: "Twentieth Century-Fox is going to offer the code to every exhibitor who wants it, as long as no legal difficulties restrain us from doing so." He added that he expected some of Allied's members to accept the pact, and saw no reason why "it should not be done now."

With the anticipated launching of the code falling just short of a year after the start of distributor-exhibitor negotiations were started last August, the attitude of distributor representatives is that they have given everything they can, on all points save arbitration, on which final concessions, one way or another, may still be made.

The chief revision asked for by the ITOA of New York and other independent groups is that in arbitration of disputes involving clearance the affiliated theatre and the distributor be represented by a single arbitrator instead of one for each as at present provided.

At an ITOA meeting in New York Wednesday, Harry Brandt, president, was critical of national Allied's procedure at its Minneapolis convention and urged exhibitors to sign the code "after it has been approved by the ITOA."

At the time of the Allied States Association Minneapolis convention, on June 13th, the distributors had expected the code to have what they termed "a fair hearing." Anti-code feeling at the meeting was so evident that on the closing day of the con-

Two Showmen's Groups Study Practice Code; Two Reject It

As distributor leaders in New York this week reiterated their determination to follow through on the provisions of the trade practice agreement, exhibitor bodies throughout the country met and planned their replies, favorable or not, to the document described by distributors as representing their "last concessions."

With some theatre owners on record as not yet having had a chance to thoroughly examine the code's provisions, others committed to a policy rejecting the code, and at the same time a definite body of exhibitor opinion firm in the belief that the concessions offered by the code warrant acceptance, unified group action by individual exhibitor organizations is moving ahead, although marked for the most part by a policy of watchful waiting.

Just prior to the close of their annual convention Tuesday, members of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma passed a resolution appointing a committee to study the code and make a report on it to the board of directors within 30 days. L. C. Griffith, head of the Griffith Amusement Company, had urged delay of any action until a further study had been made with half of the organization's members indicating that they had not had a chance to fully examine the code's provisions. In addition to Mr. Griffith, the committee consists of Homer Jones, Fred Pickrel, T. B. Noble, Jr. and Louis Groves.

A motion opposing passage of the Neely bill was passed, and telegrams will be sent Congressmen and Senators from Oklahoma, urging them to vote against the bill.

Morris Loewenstein, who has been president of the organization for more than 10 years, and is national secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was re-elected. Leonard White was elected secretary-treasurer; Max Brock, vice-president, and John Giffin, Ralph Talbot and J. C. Hunter were elected directors.

Allied Action Attacked

Edward Kuykendall, MPTOA president, attacking the action of Allied States in rejecting the code at Minneapolis, said, "At least 90 per cent of the Allied exhibitors present at the Minneapolis convention told me that they would individually sign the code, and said that they did not understand how a few Allied leaders could keep the code from being put up for their approval, which the board of directors refused to do."

Mr. Kuykendall also attacked members of Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma who had issued bulletins charging that the MPTOA was "controlled by the Hays office producer-distributors," and had urged independent theatre owners not to sign arbitration agreements under any condition.

In a telegram read at the convention Monday, William Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales head, expressed the appreciation of the code negotiatiators for the support and cooperation rendered by the Oklahoma association.

During their two day session, held in the Civic Room of the Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City, the delegates heard, in addition to Mr. Kuykendall and Mr. Loewenstein, talks by Dr. H. G. Bennett, president of Oklahoma A. and M. College; David Milstein, of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; Ralph Talbot, Paul Short of National Screen Service; C. B. Akers, general manager of Tad Screen Advertising; Earl Hull, chief engineer, station WKY; E. W. Smartt, chairman of the State Board of Affairs; Mrs. Besa Short, of the Interstate circuit; Bill Moore, theatre architect, and R. J. O'Donnell, general manager of Interstate. Local exchange managers also spoke on 1939-40 product, as did Charles Kessnick, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, southern district manager, and E. Walker, of K. Lee Williams Film Exchange.

Two Units Second Allied

After E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of New York Allied, had given a full convention report, the Syracuse unit of New York Allied endorsed the action of the national organization in rejecting the code, at a meeting held last Thursday in Syracuse.

Also seconding the action of national Allied in its rejection of the code were the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, who, at a general membership meeting held last week at Pittsburgh's William Penn Hotel, went on record as approving the action of the national board of directors.

At the meeting, it was the consensus, according to Fred Herrington, secretary of the organization, that "when—and if—the vention, at the "open forum," it was apparent that the distributors, represented there by Abe Montague, Columbia sales manager; Gradwell Sears, sales manager of Warners; and William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, and others, would not have an opportunity to see the code accepted.

The sales managers learned, on that day, that the organization's negotiating committee report rejecting the code had been approved by the board of directors, even at the beginning of the convention.

Inasmuch as many of the individual exhibitor organizations of the country have approved the code, the distributors now feel that securing of individual exhibitor acceptance "should not be hard." Expressions of exhibitor sentiment seemed for the most part to have these thoughts in common: that the code was better than no code, that its arbitration clauses, while not perfect, were better than no arbitration, and that some form of self regulation was better than governmental regulation.

Rodgers To Proceed In Spite of "Slap"

The determination of the distributors to carry the trade practice program through with or without Allied support was expressed by William F. Rodgers, speaking on Wednesday at a testimonial luncheon in New York to Leo Abrams of Universal. He said in part:

"Even though I was slightly slapped I don't propose to stay down. In the main most of us in the business, exhibitors and distributors, have a kindly feeling toward each other but there are a few who seek to sow the seeds of discontent.

"In a short time we will have a program that will make all of us happy. The attacks made on me will not deter me or the committee in the least in carrying the trade practice program to accomplishment."

The luncheon was tendered by the Motion Picture Associates to Mr. Abrams in honor of his transfer from the New York branch managership to short subjects sales manager. David Levy, his successor, also was a guest of honor. Speakers included besides Mr. Rodgers, Harry Brandt, Jack Ellis, Louis Nizer and Max Cohen.

Warners Begin Redemption of 6% Convertible Debentures

Warner Brothers on Thursday began cash redemption of about $6,000,000 optional 6 per cent convertible debentures redeemable Sept. 1, 1939, with accrued interest from March 1, 1939, to date. This will complete the refunding or retirement of an original amount of $29,400,000 debentures outstanding. Of this amount, $19,400,000 has been exchanged for new debentures maturing in 1948 and bearing the same rate of interest. In connection with the retirement of the bonds not deposited for exchange, the company has availed itself of $6,000,000 provided for in a credit agreement with three banks.

Dissatisfaction with National Policy Voiced by Local Units of Allied producers present a code that will be both equitable and acceptable to Allied States Association, Western Pennsylvania will go along with the National Board."

National Allied's rejection was scheduled to come up for ratification, also, at the Philadelphia meeting, Thursday, of the Allied Independent Theatres Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania. Sidney Samuelson, business head of the unit, and former president of National Allied, was expected to explain the reasons governing rejection of the code.

The Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain region have agreed to a discussion of the code at a later date, after more study of the provisions.

Allied of the Northwest, which was to have held its convention concurrently with that of the national body, and also in Minneapolis, but which postponed it due to insufficient representation, is reported to be facing a threat to its existence, due to dissension within the membership. Dissatisfaction has been voiced with the policy of concentration on national, rather, than local, issues, and W. A. Steffes has been reported as saying that he would not accept re-election.

Meanwhile, members are reported to feel that no one else could provide effective leadership; and the convention, now slated for July 11th, is expected to bring to a head the threat of Sol Lebedoff, at present a dissenting member, to form a new exhibitor organization without Allied affiliations.

Connecticut Protests Rentals

Independent exhibitors of Connecticut met on Tuesday at New Haven; both the state MPTO and the Allied were represented. Increased rentals have been considered out of line with lowered grosses and the exhibitors were reported preparing a vigorous resolution and procedures.

New York State Allied will meet in Syracuse on July 6, at which time the president of the New York City unit, Max Cohen, promises that "something very interesting will result."

That Mr. Cohen's promise may be born out is indicated by the reaction generally of the New York State unit, which has been reported differing with the national Allied policy on the code. Mr. Cohen this week said New York Allied would fight for "further negotiations for a bill of rights, without Governmental regulations." This attitude differs from that of the national organization, which, by its rejection of the code, caused the distributor spokesmen to assert they never would deal with Allied again, as an organization.

Mr. Cohen also said he did not favor theatre divorcement, which the national organization wanted included in the trade practice program.

New Organization Seen

Reports were about this week that the New York Independent Theatre Owners, headed by Harry Brandt, and Max Cohen, and whatever members of his own organization agreed with him, might form a third national exhibitor organization. Mr. Cohen would not issue a statement on this; and Mr. Brandt deprecated it by saying that, if such an organization were formed, he would not be the promoter of it. He did add that he believed national Allied "dead," and that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the other existing national organization, was "not representative of exhibitor rank and file."

The New York ITOA will hold its annual outing on July 25, at Indian Point.

September, in Atlantic City, has been set as the time and place of the New Jersey Allied convention. Charles Robinson has been named executive secretary of the unit.

In conjunction with this convention, Eastern District Number One of Allied will also meet.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania last week protested, by letter, to local distributor offices, against service of non-theatrical accounts. Many of the local offices have assured the organization that requests by such accounts will be rejected in the future.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana will hold their second annual summer outing at Spink Wauwausee, Indiana, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, of next week.

Billboard Curb Modified

The City Planning Commission, in New York, has modified provisions governing signs and billboards after a series of protests from business, real estate and labor interests. The Broadway Association consisting of theatre owners and others, filed a protest with the commission against giving such wide discretionary powers over signs and billboards to the Board of Standards and Appeals.

The RKO Palace theatre in the loop district of Chicago closed its doors on Thursday, attributing the decision to a shortage of outstanding product.

"Daughters" Held Over

Warner Brothers' "Daughters Courageous," which finished its first week at the New York Strand to the best summer business in the history of the house, according to the company, will be held for at least two more weeks. The first week's gross was $49,000, topping that of "Dodge City," the company said.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has accepted an invitation to address the annual convention of the National Education Association in San Francisco on July 4th. Mr. Fairbanks will speak at the banquet of the Elementary School Principals division.

St. Louis Union Selects Tomsen

Robert Tomsen, chief witness at the ouster hearing against John P. Nick and Clyde A. Weston, and former business manager of the Moving Picture Operators Union, No. 143, was elected president of the St. Louis union at a meeting of members last Friday at the Melbourne Hotel there. It was the first election since July, 1935, when Mr. Nick took charge of the union.

Other officers elected are William Robinson, vice-president; O. R. Myers, secretary-treasurer; Ernest D. James, recording secretary; Jules Anthony, sergeant-at-arms, and George Hess, Lester C. Chambers and Homer Tong, trustees. All were elected unanimously except Mr. Tomsen. One vote for president was cast for William Canavan, former international president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees.

Union members said no supporters of the ousted leader were present. A spokesman for the group headed by Mr. Canavan said that those who support Mr. Nick and oppose the receivership declined to recognize the validity of the election by participating in it. By absenting themselves from the meeting they continued their opposition to those who obtained the receivership.

After the meeting, detectives arrested John (Buddy) Lugar, who received a working permit as an operator when Mr. Nick and Mr. Weston dominated the union, and Danny J. O'Connell, former chauffeur for the leader. Both were held for investigation.

The new officers will serve until December 31, 1940, unless the receivership is terminated before that date, in which case a new election will be held.

Warners Transfer Television Stock

Warner Brothers has disposed of its holdings in, and its obligations to, the Transamerican Broadcasting and Television Corporation, having transferred all of the common and preferred stock it owned in the television company to Associated Music Publishers, in exchange for $100,000 par value of five per cent second preferred stock of American Music Publishers, Inc., operators of the Muzak system of recorded music.

Warners, in 1938, acquired a 50 per cent interest in American Music Publishers, and now owns approximately 40 per cent of the firm, due to an increase in the number of stockholders.

Transamerican has issued new shares, raising its stock issue from 2,000 shares, no par value, to 3,500 shares, with 1,000 common, no par, and 2,500 preferred with par value of $100 each. John L. Clark is president of the company and E. J. Rosenberg is vice-president an treasurer.

At a meeting in Stockholm recently, Ragnar Allberg, Svensk Filmindustri, was elected president, and Dr. Gosta Werner, secretary, of Filmpublicisternas Forening (The Association of the Film Journalists). The organization is composed of the publicity managers of the Swedish film business.

WELCOME ROTHACKER

The appointment of Watterson R. Rothacker as vice-president of Quigley Publications, resident in Hollywood, has been followed by a flood of congratulatory letters and telegrams to both Mr. Rothacker and Martin Quigley from executives in all branches of the motion picture industry. Excerpts from a few follow:

Germans Tour MGM Studio

Eleven German newspapermen, in this country on a goodwill mission, this week toured the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Hollywood. Leaders of the group were Carl Cranz, Heinz Beller, director of the German Library of Information in New York; Dr. Peter Winkelnkemper and Erich Scheyder. Mr. Cranz, Mr. Winkelnkemper and Mr. Scheyder are editors of important Nazi newspapers in Germany.

Michalove to Australia

Dan Michalove, assistant to S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, leaves for Australia in August or September in an advisory capacity on operations of the new General Theatre circuit, which will consist of the merged Hoyts and Greater Union interests. He probably will be there two years. Mr. Michalove spent about five months in Australia last year in connection with a survey of the Hoyts theatres.

U. S. SUITS AGAINST INDEPENDENT THEATRE CIRCUITS ARE INTIMATED

Schine Group and Florida Unit Reported Targets in Justice Department's Move to Act on All Complaints Received

That the United States Department of Justice is determined to continue prosecution of any and all in the motion picture industry against whom it has received charges of "collusive" and "coercive" actions, is shown by the semi-official report that it soon will file suits against a large western New York independent circuit and a Florida independent circuit. The actions are expected to be taken, despite the purported efforts of the Department of Commerce and industry executives to "settle" differences "over the conference table."

Over 50 Actions Pending

The new actions will add to the total of over 50 anti-trust actions now pending in federal district courts. More than 30 of them have been filed within the year since the Government started its anti-trust actions in New York against the major companies.

The Schine circuit has been mentioned as the "large western New York independent circuit" which the Government will prosecute. The suit is expected to parallel the Government's anti-trust action in Oklahoma against the Griffith circuit, and is expected to be the result of a desire on the part of Department of Justice officials to show that the major companies are not being singled out. Numerous complaints have been registered with the Department by western and upper New York state exhibitors, and particularly, it is reported, by members of New York Allied. The Government suit probably will be filed in Buffalo.

The expected Florida suit will be following the trail of one anti-trust action already pending in that state: the Herman Weingarten enterprises suit against Paramount Enterprises, Wometco Theatres and the majors. In this suit triple damages of $42,000 are sought on charges of overbuying and unreasonable clearance.

Calling U. S. Figures Inaccurate

Meanwhile, in the New York anti-trust action by the Justice Department against the major companies, the defendants were to answer separately, on Thursday, the Government's bill of complaint and, in these answers to ask dismissal of the Government suit, to deny its charges, to allege that the Government figures are inaccurate. Columbia and United Artists were not expected to answer the Government bill this week.

The Government case has been beleaguered by the demands of the defendants in the New York City federal court these past several weeks that the Government file additional particulars. When the Government did file more particulars last Monday, the defendants made additional complaints that the particulars were still incomplete and inaccurate.

The defendants on last Monday were ordered to file answers to the Government complaint "within 10 days."

Changes in RKO Case

On Saturday the Department of Justice indicated it would allow the dropping of certain RKO defendants, former directors of the old RKO board. These are Merlin H. Aylesworth, formerly board chairman; Cornelius H. Bliss, DeWitt Milhauser, David Sarnoff, Maurice Goodman, Frederick Strauss, and Courtland Smith. Upon final approval by Federal Judge William Bondy of the new board of directors in the RKO reorganization, the new board will be added to the list of defendants.

In Chicago, the Government has agreed to postpone until the fall its criminal contempt action against Balaban and Katz and the majors. The final hearing will be on July 7th, Edgar Eldredge, special master, announced on Friday. Following this, the case will be adjourned until September 5th.

Facilitating Examination

Conferences were being held this week between attorneys for both sides to facilitate examination of thousands of documents requisitioned by the Government. The hearing this week was on Wednesday. Tom Gilliam of Vitagraph, James Donohue of Paramount, Irving Schlank of United Artists, and Clyde Eckhardt of 20th Century-Fox, testified on contracts and clearance schedules.

Last week the Government produced two witnesses: H. C. Van Pelt, an investigator of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told of his audit of the Balaban and Katz records. Tom Gillian, a Warner branch manager, described exchange operations.

The Government opened its case on Thursday. Mr. Wright reviewed the film situation and practices in the Chicago territory. He noted the situations in 1928, when the equity suit first was brought; in 1932, when the consent decree was signed; in 1935, when violations, he said, were first noted; in 1938, when the Government filed the present contempt action, and on May 1st of this year.

Because defendant attorneys have been involved in the Government suit, the case of the independents against Balaban and Katz and the majors is reported to be in line for a similar Summer postponement.

Sam E. Morris, vice-president of Warner Brothers in charge of foreign activities, will sail for South America late this month for a general checkup.

Kuykendall Gives Views

Meeting with Department of Commerce officials last week, in line with Secretary Harry Hopkins' announced intention of rounding up the opinions and viewpoints prevailing in all branches in the industry, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was the first exhibitor representative to confer with the Government department.

Meanwhile, with delegates from National Allied expected in Washington early next month to confer with members of Secretary Hopkins' department, and a conference also scheduled for July 18th with Harry Brandt, president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, J. H. Hazen, Warner Brothers vice-president and contact man for the distributors in the conferences with the Department of Commerce, arrived in Washington last Friday to see Ernest Tupper, Department statistician.

Continuing the individual meetings with Mr. Tupper, Mr. Hazen presented additional information on industry statistics, as requested by Commerce officials. A date for the next meeting with other distributor representatives, including Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has not as yet been set.

Guy P. Morgan, who manages United Artists business in Chile, Argentina and Uruguay, arrived in New York this week from Buenos Aires.

HOLLYWOOD BUYS 45 MORE STORIES TO ADD TO 1940 FEATURE PROGRAMS

Twenty-nine of Month's Purchases Are Originals; Also Three Subjects Made Into Films in Earlier Years

With preparations for the coming season's product practically completed and announced by all large producing companies, now that RKO Radio has wound up the majors' sales conventions, 45 stories and plays were purchased in the month of May by 12 Hollywood producers.

Originals Retain Lead

For the 10th consecutive month, originals led all the other forms of literary material, accounting for 29 of the 45 properties, or 64 per cent of the total. Included in the total were subjects filmed earlier: "The Patent Leather Kid," a First National picture released September 1st, 1927, which had starred Richard Barthelmess, now to be filmed by Warner Brothers; "Queen Kelly," an unreleased Gloria Swanson film, purchased by Walter Futter for a reported $10,000, and "The Royal Box," a German picture, purchased by Boris Morros.

Universal, with nine properties bought, was the largest single purchaser, followed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with eight and Warner Brothers with six. All of the Universal purchases were originals, while the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer purchases included four magazine stories, three books and one original.

Remarque's Novel to MGM

Among the outstanding purchases were Erich Maria Remarque's novel, "Heroes," bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for a reported $55,000. Mr. Remarque's earlier books include "All Quiet on the Western Front," made into a film by Universal in 1930; "The Road Back," also a Universal film, made in 1937, and "Three Comrades," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made as a picture last year.

Thornton Wilder's play, "Our Town," a Pulitzer Prize winner, was bought by Sol Lesser for production as one of his first United Artists releases, and will be filmed under the supervision of Ernst Lubitsch. Another Pulitzer Prize winner, Maxwell Anderson, will write an original for a Leo McCarey production at RKO.

The Titles and Credits

The month's purchases, with all available production credits, follow:

ACADEMY WINNER, original by Crane Wilbur, purchased by Universal.

RKO Heads See "Career" Premiere

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, will head a home office delegation to the twin premiere of "Career" in Des Moines Sunday. Others in the New York group will be Cresson Smith, western sales manager; S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director; Arthur Willi, head of the eastern talent department and Ralph Rolan.

Also expected are Walter Branson, midwest district manager with headquarters in Chicago; Jack Osserman, Chicago branch manager, and other midwest branch managers.

Almost the entire cast of "Career," including Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis, Leon Errol and John Archer and Alice Eden, winners in the "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent quest, will be in Des Moines. Also Jean Hersholt, Patricia Ellis, Bob Breen, Jean Parker, Joy Hodges and other players.

The Hollywood contingent also will include Jesse Lasky and eight candidates in the "Gateway to Hollywood" second finals; Phil Stong, author of "Career," and Mrs. Stong; Leigh Jason, director; Robert Palmer, casting director; Paul Snell, publicity representative for Mr. Lasky, and Frank Healy of the coast publicity staff.

Two of the eight finalists in the "Gateway to Hollywood" quest will be selected at a broadcast of the Lasky program over the Columbia Broadcasting System just before the premiere of the film. They will be awarded roles in RKO's "Three Sons" and will adopt the names of Robert Stanton and Virginia Vale.

Louis Alleman and Charles Levy of RKO's publicity department are in Des Moines handling arrangements.

Fairbanks Opposes 'Compromise' Films

Hollywood's "compromise entertainment" is on the way out and "a cure is in sight for anemic screen literature which spells box office shortage," according to Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., now starring in Frank Lloyd's "Rulers of the Sea."

"Roughly speaking," said Fairbanks, "Hollywood makes three types of pictures—one each for adults, juveniles, and the one which compromises between adults and juveniles. The major mistakes lie in this third classification because it constitutes a jarring compromise."

"Many a good adult story has been sacrificed by an attempt to inject angles which will appeal to juvenile minds and, conversely, many good productions which would be worthwhile entertainment for juveniles have had their entertainment values impaired by an effort to inject an adult slant," he said.

"As a result," he says, "the effort to satisfy everyone from seven to 70 has in some cases yielded a product 'watered' to the point of becoming anemic screen literature.

"If all great novelists and playwrights were forced to make similar compromises, books and plays could never make healthy contributors to literature."

Fairbanks suggested a national exhibitors' meeting to devise a new system of showing pictures.

"As their discretion dictates," he declared, "they may find it possible for certain hours of certain days to be set aside for children's matinees. Or a plan under which separate houses for children and adults are designated may prove workable. Perhaps an information service, telling in advance the nature of a forthcoming picture, thus sharing responsibility with parents themselves, is the right answer."

"The time has come to stop trying to walk a tight-rope," he declared.

E. J. Smith has resigned from Imperial Distributing Company and Imperial Pictures, Inc.

More Political And Sex Film Censor Actions

"Ecstasy," "The Birth of a Baby" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" continue to figure prominently in news on censorship, for reasons of political or moral content.

In Cuba, Warner Brothers gained ground with their "Nazi Spy" picture, when a censorship ban imposed last Tuesday night was lifted following a private screening of the film for Cuban cabinet members and the American ambassador.

In Buenos Aires, Warners will appeal the ban on "Nazi Spy" to the Ministry of Justice of Argentina. The ban was ordered by the Mayor of Buenos Aires. Although the censorship officially applies only to the capital, exhibition elsewhere in the country is doubtful unless the ban is lifted. It is believed official circles there wish to avoid any conflict with the German Embassy.

Ask Bill of Particulars

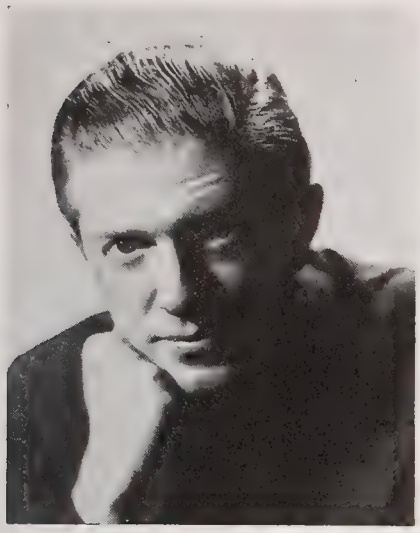
Meanwhile in New York Warner Brothers on Friday will apply for an order in federal court compelling Fritz Kuhn to serve and file a detailed bill of particulars in his suit for an injunction against "Nazi Spy" and for $5,000,000 damages for libel in allegedly depicting him and the German-American Bund as disloyal.

Act on "Ecstasy"

The hearing on "Ecstasy," denied censorship approval in Philadelphia, started Monday in common pleas court there before Judge Heiligman. Elizabeth E. Craven, member of the mayor's board of theatrical control, and Mrs. Hazel Lowenstein, lawyer associated with the Legal Aid Society, defended the film while Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the Pennsylvania board of censors, called certain scenes "positively indecent."

A decision by the appellate division of the New York supreme court is to be handed down when the court convenes in the second week in July. The American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., and Sam Citron are appealing action of the Board of Regents and Irwin Esmond in refusing to license the film.

Censor Board Bill Dropped in Illinois



A bill to create a state censor board to pass on motion pictures was killed in the Illinois Senate this week when its sponsor, Senator Joseph Mendell of Chicago had it stricken from the calendar. Mr. Mendell also struck two other bills which would prohibit children attending late shows and prohibit producers and distributors from having an interest in theatres.

Stricken in the House was the Gibbs bill prohibiting the showing of pictures in which appeared persons who had been divorced more than twice.

Ohio Censor Answers Charges of Baldwin

"There is nothing political about Ohio censorship, and no film ever has been censored for political content, although they have been when containing propaganda," Roy Reichelderfer, chief censor, said in Columbus this week in answer to charges of Roger Baldwin, New York, national director, American Civil Liberties Union, who appealed to the Cleveland branch of the Union for abolishment of the censor board, "or at least the banishment of political type of censorship."

Nizer Also Discusses Public Demand for Exceptional Features, also Score Charges, Short Subjects, "Regular Customers"

by LOUIS NIZER

This is the second of a series by Louis Nizer, motion picture lawyer, interpreting in lay language the motion picture code as drafted by the majors.

In the first installment, appearing last week—June 24th issue, page 31—the following clauses were interpreted:

I—Exclusion Privileges—Cancellations.

II—Trade Announcement.

This week, Clauses III to VIII are interpreted.

Clause III—
Public Demand for Exceptional Feature

This section gives certain rights to the exhibitor under certain conditions to obtain a contract for an exceptional feature.

What Is Exceptional Feature: An exceptional feature is a picture which has such an exceptional and outstanding appeal as to create a natural and spontaneous national public demand.

When Section Applies: If there is a spontaneous and natural public demand in the town, city or section of the metropolitan city in which the exhibitor's theatre is located for an exceptional feature, which feature would not be shown there unless licensed for exhibition to the exhibitor, then this section applies.

Conditions Under Which This Section Applies: If the exhibitor in such a case requests of the distributor a license for a run in any situation of such a feature, and distributor offers a greater number of features than the exhibitor can play (because his playing time is so absorbed by previous commitments that he cannot reasonably exhibit these features without changing his operating policy), then the distributor must offer to the exhibitor a lesser number of features including the exceptional feature as may be agreed upon.

Arbitration Under Section: If, in such a case, the exhibitor and distributor cannot agree upon the lesser number of pictures, such number may be determined by arbitration to be the maximum number of features which can reasonably be exhibited by exhibitor in such a situation.

Right to License to Other Exhibitors: At any time before the arbitrators have made their award under this section, the distributor has the right to offer or license all or any of its features to any other exhibitor.

When This Section Does Not Apply: An exhibitor has been a customer of the distributor and who has refused to contract for the distributor's features for the situation involved, has no right to attempt to use this section to compel the distributor to license to him its exceptional features.

Time of Arbitration: Any dispute as to whether a certain picture is an exceptional feature or as to the maximum number of features which can be exhibited by the exhibitor, shall be submitted to arbitration by exhibitor within fourteen (14) days after the refusal by the distributor to license the number of features requested.

Clause IV—Preferred Playing Time

(1) Flat Rentals and Guarantees. The distributor has no right to designate preferred playing time if the feature is bought

(a) for a flat rental, or

(b) for a minimum guarantee and a percentage. Preferred playing time can only be designated if features are bought on a straight percentage basis.

(2) Features Unsuitable for Preferred Playing Time. Even if a feature is bought on a straight percentage basis and the distributor has the right to designate preferred playing time, the exhibitor may submit to arbitration the question as to whether a particular feature is suitable for the playing time designated.

Contents of Notice. To exercise his rights in such a case, the exhibitor must give written notice to the distributor of his objections to the designated preferred playing time and his reasons therefor.

Time of Notice. Such notice must be given by a first run exhibitor within seven (7) days after the mailing of the notice of designation of preferred playing time. Such notice must be given by a subsequent run exhibitor within seven (7) days after the close of the first run exhibition in the exchange city from which the exhibitor is served or the mailing of the notice of designation, whichever is later.

Rejection by Distributor. Unless the distributor rejects exhibitor's notice within seven (7) days after mailing by the exhibitor, he is deemed to have withdrawn the designated playing time.

Time of Arbitration. If the distributor rejects the claim, the exhibitor must begin arbitration proceedings within seven (7) days after the mailing of the notice of rejection.

Substituted Designation. If the arbitrators decide that the feature is unsuitable for the designated preferred playing time, or if the designation is withdrawn by the distributor, he may either

(a) designate the same feature to be exhibited on other days of the week, or

(b) then or at a later date, substitute another feature to be exhibited on preferred playing time on the same terms as the original feature which was objected to.

Price Brackets Not Affected. Nothing in this section shall decrease or increase the number of features in each bracket as set forth in the contract.

Clause V—Some Run Available

To meet objections against exclusive selling, every exhibitor may obtain from a distributor a run of its features in any situation, which run must be designated by the distributor.

Three Conditions Upon Which Right Is Granted. The three conditions upon which this right is granted are:

(a) Agreement between the distributor and exhiibtor upon the number of features to be bought and other terms and conditions.

(b) The exhibitor's theatre must not be obsolete, must be in good condition, operated under a policy which is not destructive, and which will not substantially reduce the distributor's revenue from any other run. In other words, the exhibitor's policy must be established under methods of competition which are normal and fair in such a situation.

(c) The exhibitor must be of good reputation as a customer, or if he has not been an exhibitor, of good reputation and financially responsible.

Questions Arbitrated. Any dispute concerning sub-divisions (b) and (c) which refer to the condition of the exhibitor's theatre, the fairness of his policy and the exhibitor's reputation, can be submitted to arbitration. No dispute under sub-division (a) concerning the agreement of the distributor and exhibitor on the terms of the contract can be submitted to arbitration. Each distributor states in the code that it will be its policy not to request unreasonable prices or other terms or conditions for the purpose of defeating this clause.

Clause VI—Regular Customer

To meet objections against selling away to a circuit, a distributor must not refuse to sell its features to its regular customer, who is not a circuit, in order to sell them for the same run in the same competitive area to another exhibitor solely because such other exhibitor is a circuit customer.

Definition of a Circuit Customer. A circuit customer is a customer who is a circuit or is part of a circuit, a buying combine, a booking combine or a cooperative.

Conditions on Which Right Is Based. The following three conditions must exist before the regular customer can exercise his rights:

(a) He must have substantially performed his previous contracts with the distributor

(b) He must maintain and operate his theatre in a modern manner, and

(c) He must be financially responsible.

Notice by Distributor. If the distributor decides to sell its features to a circuit exhibitor, who is not its current customer, he must send to such current customer a telegram advising him of this fact.

Right to Arbitration. The current customer then has the right to submit to arbitration the question as to whether the distributor has so refused to sell its features to its regular customer.

Time of Arbitration. The current customer must begin his arbitration proceedings within five (5) days after the sending by the distributor of his telegram. If he doesn't, he waives all claims under this clause.

Clause VII—Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.

In order to obtain features from a distributor, the exhibitor must not be required to buy shorts from him.

Definition of Shorts. Shorts are news reels, trailers, serials, re-issues, westerns, foreign pictures or short subjects.

Time of Protest. If an exhibitor wishes to protest his entering into a contract for features on the ground that he was required to buy shorts, he must mail to the distributor at its home office, written notice of such a claim and the grounds for it within 48 hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application for the shorts.

Powers of Arbitrators. Any dispute concerning this matter must be submitted to arbitration. The arbitrators have only two powers:

(a) They may make a finding as to whether or not the features were obtained on condition that shorts be bought. If they find that this is the fact, then

(b) They may make an award cancelling the shorts.

Clause VIII—Score Charges

1938-39 Season. No score charges for flat rental features in the 1938-39 season must be added to and consolidated with the price of the feature.

1939-40 Season. Beginning with the 1939-40 season, there shall be no separate score charge for features which are bought either on a flat rental or on a percentage basis.

TELEVISION A HOME ELEMENT, SAYS SARNOFF; 25,000 SETS SEEN IN YEAR

And Editor of Radio and Television Publication Declares That It Will All Depend upon the Programs Presented

Although only 300 television receivers are estimated to have been sold in the New York area, 800 in the United States, since April 30th, when the National Broadcasting Company began its first regular television service to the public and the manufacturing companies began to ballyhoo their apparatus for public sale, television industry executives are coming out with fresh plans and prognostications on the "new art."

Two Predictions

In the July issue of the Journal of Applied Physics and the June 8 issue of the Printers' Ink appear, respectively, "Probable Influences of Television on Society," by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, and "Television as Seen from the Business Side," by O. Reed Rost, editor of Radio and Television Retailing, a business publication, who predicts 25,000 television installations within a year.

Mr. Sarnoff admits the difficulty of forecasting the effects of television on society; but, with the example of radio's effect on society during its comparatively short life, nevertheless ventures some predictions, among them these:

That, with a population whose interests, he says, are increasingly being centered in the home, radio-television will become a "vital element."

"It may become their principal source of entertainment, education and news. It will link together in mind and spirit these vast numbers of individual homes, as the high speed automobile roads and airways will link them together physically."

"We may also anticipate a rising standard of culture, with universal education of both adults and children. . . . What this may mean in terms of type of material to be broadcast, and its place in the cultural life of the community is stimulating to the imagination," he continues.

Effects on Cultural Media

As for the effects of television on existing cultural media, Mr. Sarnoff has this to say:

That "the motion picture industry may become an important source of supply of recorded programs to television broadcasters, where such recordings may serve the purposes of program material more conveniently than direct transmission of living actors. There are other possibilities, too, for cooperation between the motion picture industry and television."

That there will be an increase in the number of creative artists, and a re-birth of local community theatres.

That school systems will increasingly use television.

That churches will also use the medium.

That politicians will find television a great help.

On this point Mr. Sarnoff halts to remark that "the advent of television (in this connection) makes it even more imperative than heretofore to preserve for radio broadcasting in our country the precious right to freedom of discussion, and to guard against its exploitation for transmitting propaganda intended to arouse destructive class struggles, racial animosities, or religious hatreds."

Mr. Sarnoff asserts that undoubtedly one of the most important services of television will be to bring news and sporting events directly to the public.

On the function of advertising, he remarks that television will not mean, necessarily, an extension of 'sales talks"; but, in fact, probably the reverse, because picturization naturally tells the message in a shorter time than strictly aural announcement.

Again, reverting to the role which motion pictures will play in the presentation of television, Mr. Sarnoff says this:

"While some television dramas may be recorded on film, for convenience or for network distribution, it is not certain that the standards, methods, or artistic ideas of the present-day motion picture industry will control the material presented. Radio has always been an independent force, and has broken new ground in what it has done. A first class radio program is like no theatrical or motion presentation that ever was. It is a new thing in the world. Similarly, it is quite likely that television drama will be a new development, using the best of the theatre and motion pictures."

Rost's Analysis

Mr. Rost's analysis of television as a business develops the following points:

That, especially in the beginning, television advertising will cost much; but that the results will eventually justify the cost.

That, a year from now, there will probably be about 25,000 sets in use.

That the audience will be "quality," because of the receiver set expense.

That most sets will be in home use.

That apartment house owners of sets will turn to group antennas, because of the cost of individual installations.

That, because of the expense factors, the type of audience that television will have, will be "natural prey" for sponsors of quality goods.

That, because of the sight-plus-sound elements, advertisers will have to use especial care in advertising "plugs."

That great responsibility rests upon those now supplying entertainment; they must keep public interest alive.

That telecasting of special events, as noted in England, is helpful to set sales.

That the higher income rate in New York City, contrasted with London, should result in considerably more set sales in the former area.

In conclusion, Mr. Rost says: "It must be ever emphasized that the program gods hold the fate of television as an industry and television as an advertising medium in the hollow of their hands.

Developments of a Fortnight

Meanwhile, as television proceeds as a new industry, the following developments were recorded in the last fortnight:

The decision by the National Broadcasting Company to make a series of telecasts from Manhattan Beach, following its policy of presenting as many sports events as practicable. One such telecast was that of the Women's Swimming Association championship meet. Other sports events to be telecast are softball, handball, tennis, boxing, pingpong and lacrosse.

Broadcasting of special events via telephone line by the NBC. This was done recently, at the six-day bicycle races at Madison Square Garden. The project was experimental, but points the way towards linkage of various cities by telephone line, as is done with radio stations; the method being cheaper than the use of relay stations.

Signing of four unnamed sponsors of commercial films, by the American Television Company, which plans a department store "network."

The reviewing by over 15,000 persons of the television demonstrations at the Marshall Field and Company store, in Chicago.

Probable rejection by the television committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of the proposal that the British Broadcasting Corporation be allowed to use old short subjects for telecasting. The report of the committee, expected to contain rejection, is anticipated within a week. The rejection is in line with the stand of motion picture industry, generally, against aid to an industry which may become its rival.

Other pertinent television news items were the reorganization of the stock setup of the TransAmerican Broadcasting and Television Corporation; a demand by British radio manufacturers and retailers to the English Postmaster General, for a television service to the provinces, and to Scotland; the telecasting of the return of King George and Queen Elizabeth to London, this being received on Baird apparatus in three Gaumont British theatres: the choosing of television as the chief subject at the annual Summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, in Blackpool, England, this week.

At this meeting, main speakers were to be Major H. C. Bell, on television; Reginald Stamp, entertainment chief of the London County Council, on theatre licensing; and Captain Richard Norton, on production.

BROADWAY SEES BUSINESS GAIN

An optimistic message from the Broadway Association to its members, some of whom have been complaining that the World's Fair has been ruining their business, was issued this week by H. Frederick Bright, managing director, who said that, with a new influx of visitors, "the long-awaited good times" are now at hand.

Mr. Bright's message, published in the association's current bulletin, furnished an explanation for the recent slackness in the Times Square entertainment business and his reasons for thinking that a small boom now is just around the corner.

Open New Theatre In Stamford, Conn.

The 730-seat de luxe Avon theatre in Stamford, Conn., operated by the Weiss Amusement Company, was opened this week with a reception at the theatre and a party at the Women's Club nearby. Sam Weiss, Harold Eskin and others received the guests, who included Mayor Ward of Stamford, other city notables and many film men from New York and Connecticut.

Merchants in the Bedford section of the city cooperated with banners and contests in welcoming the new theatre. A single feature policy will be adopted, with admission at 65 cents for reserved seats, 40 cents top otherwise.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Upspring

In a midsummer week that saw 50 pictures shooting, 78 editing and 15 preparing, Hollywood started 14 and finished 11 productions. This total, considerably greater in all respects than was the case last year, is factual evidence that executives were not talking through their hats when they declared that inauguration of the 1939-40 entertainment-making season would mark the most intensive manufacturing season the film capital ever knew. Meanwhile five shorts were started, one was completed, and six were in preparation for early work.

Paramount, where four features started, was the busiest lot. On location in Texas, work started on the filming of Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed." Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Dudley Digges, Ernest Cossart and Muriel Angelus are listed as principals in a cast that will include hundreds. Also on location, Harry Sherman started "Argentina." It will present William Boyd, Steffi Duna, Russell Hayden, Sidney Toler and The King's Men. On the stages, work began on "Seventeen," Booth Tarkington's story of puppy love, in which Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Otto Kruger, Ann Shoemaker and Mary Jane Nelson will be seen. Its companion on the lot is "Our Neighbors—The Carters," a vehicle for Fay Bainter, Frank Craven, Edmund Lowe, Gloria Carter and Joyce Arleen.

Two Start at Metro

MGM was one of the three studios to start two pictures. Both are subjects of more than usual importance. Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Walter Woolf King, Dalies Frantz, Joyce Compton and Lionel Atwill will be principals in "Balalaika." The star of "Blackmail" is Edward G. Robinson. Ruth Hussey, Guinn Williams, Arthur Hohl and John Wray will also appear.

One of the new RKO-Radio pictures, "Conspiracy" is a melodrama. It will offer Allan Lane, Linda Hayes, Robert Barrat, Charlie Foy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Lionel Royce, Lester Matthews and Solly Ward. The comedy, "The Day the Bookies Wept," is a picture for Joe Penner, Betty Grable, Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy and Jack Arnold.

Both Republic starters are outdoor action films. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, George Hayes, Billy Lee, Jonathan Hale and William Hall will be teamed in "In Old Monterey." The last of the present "Three Mesquiteers" series, "Raiders of the Wasteland," will have John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton and Phyllis Isley heading the cast.

"Hawaiian Nights," a romance with music, started at Universal. Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan, Samuel S. Hinds, Etienne Girardot, Thurston Hall and Matty Malneck's band are the name values.

For United Artists distribution, Hal Roach began filming "Housekeeper's Daughter." Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, George E. Stone, John Hubbard, Peggy Wood and J. Farrell MacDonald are the featured and principal support players.

Sol Lesser started "Everything's on Ice," which will feature the child ice skating sensation, Irene Dare, in the company of Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy and Mary Hart.

CHAPLIN IN ACTION AFTER THREE YEARS

The sounds of carpenters hammering and sawing after three years, in the cacophony now prevalent at Sunset Boulevard and La Brea Avenue, Hollywood, suggested a peek into the Chaplin Studio at that intersection.

There "The Great Dictator," as it's now called, Charlie's first picture since "Modern Times," is being started. Although Charlie has been working on the story for a long time, not much is known about it. This secrecy is in line with the artist's policy of many years.

Still, a few things are known. The most important intelligence is that it will mark Charlie's debut in an all-talking picture, even though he indulged in a lot of musical gibberish in "Modern Times." It's rumored that the picture will have a modern topical theme and confirmed that the production will be a comedy. With the exception of Paulette Goddard, who will be the star's leading women, no cast assignments have been made. However, Ira Morgan and Rollie Toteroh, who were in charge of the photography on "Modern Times," again will man the cameras.

Immediately on the heels of completion of "Winter Carnival," Walter Wanger gave "Eternally Yours" the starting signal. Loretta Young, David Niven, Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Virginia Field, Eve Arden, Broderick Crawford, Raymond Walburn and Zasu Pitts are in a cast that will include scores.

Eleven Finished

Of the 11 completed pictures, Columbia accounted for three. "Golden Boy," most important of the three, will present Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolph Menjou, Joseph Calleia, Ed Brophy, Sam Levene, Beatrice Blinn, Lee Dobb, Don Beddoe and Robert Sterling. "Coast Guard" will present Randolph Scott, Walter Connolly, Ralph Bellamy, Frances Dee, Warren Hymer and Edmund MacDonald. The usual family three, Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms, will have the company of Elizabeth Dunne, Robert Wilcox and Thomas Ross in "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

Monogram completed two productions. The series picture, "Mr. Wong in Chinatown," will offer Boris Karloff, Grant Withers, Marjorie Reynolds, Huntly Gordon and Peter George Lynn as principals. Ed Finney's "The Man from Texas" has Tex Ritter as its star, with Hal Price, Charles Wood, Vic Dermoruelle, Jr., Roy Barcroft, Frank Wayne, Kenneth Duncan, Ruth Rogers and Tom London.

MGM matched the Monogram pace. The weird "Miracles for Sale" will present Robert Young, Florence Rice, Henry Hull, Lee Bowman, Astrid Alwyn, Frank Craven, Armand Kaliz, Gloria Holden and Frederick Worlock. Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr are the stars of "Lady of the Tropics." Joseph Schildkraut, Ernest Cossart, Gloria Franklin, Mary Taylor, Paul Porcasi, Abner Bibberman, Margaret Padula, Grace Hayle, Elsie Cavonna and Donald Kenardi also will be seen.

"The Double Dyed Deceiver," a Harry Sherman production for Paramount, features Tito Guizar with Emma Dunn, Alan Mowbray, Gale Sondergaard, June Clayton, Miner Watson, Harry Worth, Anna Demetriok, Chris Pin Martin and Glen Strange.

"Rains Came" Completed

After having its budget increased, "The Rains Came," a story of Mother India, was completed by 20th Century-Fox. The stellar cast features Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent, with Joseph Schildkraut, Jane Darwell, Henry Travers, Marie Ouspenskaya, Montague Show, H. B. Warner, Nigel Bruce, Marjorie Rambeau, Mary Narsh, Laura Hope Crews, William Royle and Abner Bibberman.

Hal Roach wound up a four-reel featurette, "Chump at Oxford," which features the reunited Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

Warners' contribution to the completed work is "Kid Nightingale," the story of a prizefighting singer, in which will be seen John Payne, Jane Wyman, Ed Brophy, Walter Catlett, Charles D. Brown, Harry Burns, William Haade and Winifred Harris.

News in Brief

With "The Great Canadian" set as the first picture for Clark Gable at MGM upon his return from Selznick International and "Gone with the Wind," "Spur of Pride" will be the star's third picture of the year.

After two years in Hollywood, Dolly Haas, continental actress, will make her American screen debut in Warner's "We Are Not Alone," Paul Muni starring vehicle which starts July 5 with Edmund Goulding directing.

June 21st, the longest day in the year, was the shortest so far as production shooting was concerned. Samuel Goldwyn's "The Real Glory" was able to get only a couple hours in the sunshine because of the unusual California fog.

Bidding for increased distribution in Latin America, E. B. Derr will produce "The Girl From Rio," which will star Movita in English and Spanish. Spanish language will be limited to songs in the Latin version.

Walter Wanger will continue to produce his pictures on the Samuel Goldwyn—formerly United Artists—lot for another year.

Aiming at record breaking production activity, Warners will place 20 films in work within the next four months. "We Are Not Alone," "20,000 Years In Sing Sing," "The World Moves On," "All This And Heaven, Too," "And It All Came True," "The Bishop Who Walked With God," "The Fighting 69th," "John Paul Jones" and "The Sea Hawk" are among the big budget pictures listed.

MGM assigned Wallace Beery to the leading role in "Bonanza," a story based on silver mining in Mexico in the early 1900's.

ACTORS ENLARGE ARENA OF FIGHT, ADDING A SIDE BATTLE OF "REBELS"

Charges of Misadministration Against Sophie Tucker and Ralph Whitehead To Be Tried by AAAA July 10th

The actors' dispute—a fight originally behind-the-scenes, between leadership of the American Federation of Actors and its parent organization, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, but the cause of a riot last week in a New York hotel, thereby erupting into front page news, grew in bitterness this week.

And a Side Battle

The tilt, primarily between the AFA and AAAA, has also developed a side battle between the AFA officers and a rebellious unit known as "The Ferret," who met early Tuesday at the Palm Gardens, New York, and adopted four resolutions: approval of the AAAA investigation into the AFA; a request that Miss Tucker, AFA president, Mr. Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, and the whole organization council resign if they are found guilty at trial by the AAAA on July 10; a plea that the persons mentioned abide by the decision of the parent organization; and a request for a hearing by the AAAA of the grievances of "insurgent" AFA members.

The scheduled trial of the AFA leadership is the result of an investigation asked some months ago by Mr. Whitehead, who desired, publicly, that his administration be cleared of "ugly rumors." The investigating committee of the AAAA several weeks ago ordered Mr. Whitehead to stand trial, for charges of maladministration, most salient of which was the charge that relief monies had been diverted to other channels, some of them personal.

A meeting of the AFA membership, called last Tuesday morning by Miss Tucker and Mr. Whitehead, whose purpose was to gain a vote of confidence, resulted, instead, in an almost public brawl, when "insurgents" dominated the scene. The meeting broke up with no vote of confidence, but with much newspaper publicity.

Disciplinary Action Threatened

The AFA had been ordered by the AAAA to answer the charges of maladministration, in writing, by last Saturday. At mid-week, it had not done so, and the AAAA was reported considering disciplinary action.

In a prepared document, the AFA leadership this week challenged the AAAA jurisdiction, and power, to bring charges against a member union.

Mr. Whitehead, in the statement, was reported asserting that the challenge was "forced" upon the AFA because there was "the strongest kind of indication" that the AFA would not receive a fair trial on July 10.

The challenge was officially presented in a letter by Abraham J. Halprin, attorney for the AFA, to the AAAA, on June 23, in which he asks that organization to denote what section of the constitution and by-laws authorizes a trial board or confers the power to formulate charges or hold trial; and in which he also asks for a fuller bill of particulars, instead of the "vague and very general complaint" in existence.

This complaint, in summary, consisted of the following:

The AFA is charged with obstructing the work of the investigating committeee, paying organizers on a percentage basis; failing to use democratic methods; failing to organize presentation houses; organizing circuit people who are not eligible for AAAA membership; failure to use moneys received from benefit performances for relief purposes; failing to cooperate in the organization drive of the 4-A's in unorganized fields; becoming involved in jurisdictional disputes; using "ungentlemanly tactics" in organizing in specified cases; poor administration of coast branches; procuring an AFL representative to assist improperly in internal affairs.

Mr. Whitehead was to appear before the AAAA board Thursday, to explain charges that the parent union had neither power nor justification to bring the AFA to trial. On Monday, a committee of six from the AFA "insurgents" is to appear before the AAAA board.

Board Named

This week, the AAAA named the board which will conduct the trial, on July 10, on the charges enumerated above.

Besides the AFA representatives, which are to be named, the trial jury will include:

Actors' Equity: Walter N. Greaza, Reed Brown, Jr., Maida Reade; Winifred Lenihan, Benjamin S. Lackland, alternates.

Screen Actors Guild: Lucille Gleason, Richard Bishop, Frank McNellis.

American Federation of Radio Artists: Alex McKee, Mark Smith, Mrs. Emily Holt; Wilfred Lytell, Ted Corsia, alternates.

Hebrew Actors Union: Jean Greenfield, Reuben Guskin, Charles Cohan.

Hungarian Actors and Artists Assn.: Tibor Garthy and Lily de Lyse.

Brother Artists Assn.: Thomas J. Phillips and Pat Kearney.

Italian Actors Union will be represented by Ario Dramis and the Hebrew Chorus Union by Michael Zwiback.

Seizure of Books Denied

This week, the AFA made public a letter from Robert H. Thayer, New York assistant district attorney, denying that he had seized the books and record of the union, or that he had subpoenaed officers of the union as rumored.

The AAAA, in appointing its trial board, decided not to include any of the original investigating committee, which had consisted of Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative of the Screen Actors' Guild, chairman; Paul Dulzell, George Heller, Paul Turner, Frank Gillmore, and Henry Jaffe, who is of counsel to the committee.

The AFA may carry the battle into the AAAA camp, as indicated by the fact that control of the parent body depends upon per capita payments for members in good standing, with one vote for each 300 members. Mr. Whitehead has charged that the AFA now has a paid up membership of 8,850, which would entitle it to 29 votes, instead of the present 22. He further charged that the Screen Actors' Guild, which now has 34 votes, and constitutes the largest union, is not entitled to that number of votes, because it has been reducing its membership.

Present strength of the unions within the AAAA is tabulated as follows:

American Federation of Radio Artists, 12; Actors' Equity, 11; Screen Guild of Musical Artists, three; Chorus Equity, three; Hebrew Actors, two; Italian Actors, two; Hungarian Actors, one; Burlesque Artists, one; and the Hebrew Chorus, one; these being exclusive of the two unions above mentioned.

A move is underway by the AAAA to reduce the Guild strength by limiting the vote of any union to one-third of the total; however, action is not expected on this before the scheduled trial on July 10, of the AFA.

Sophie Tucker Answers Cantor

Miss Tucker, who defended her and Mr. Whitehead's administration at the meeting on last Tuesday, which ended in a near-riot, has since defended herself, by public statement, against charges that she is being used as a "catspaw." At the meeting, Miss Tucker declared that her "character" was being attacked, for the first time in her career. When it was protested by the various personalities attacking the AFA leadership that Miss Tucker was not being attacked personally, but merely her defense of the present leadership, Miss Tucker re-

Studios and Others Affected by NLRB Rule Aiding Employers

Last week's decision of the National Labor Relations Board in Washington amending NLRB rules and regulations granting employers the right to petition the board for elections where two or more bonafide labor organizations were claiming a majority but none had petitioned the board for certification, applies to studio, producer and other employers in the motion picture business as well as those in other lines.

Although eligible to take advantage of the amendment, distributors and exhibitors have had no great occasion to petition the National Labor Relations Board, nor have the various unions and crafts therein been greatly involved in NLRB actions. Hollywood has, however, the last instance, which is still pending, involving the Screen Writers Guild in its fight against the Screen Playwrights for recognition at the studios, which recognition was fought by the producers.

Another amendment just made by the NLRB advances the period of notice of hearing in unfair labor practice cases from five to ten days, giving the producer, or other employer, a longer chance to prepare his side of the case.

While both House and Senate hailed the amendments, Congressional critics of the Board let it be known that the changes would have no effect on their movement for revising the Wagner Labor Act.

Actors Federation Leaders Plead for Fair Treatment

plied, to one charge, in particular, that of Eddie Cantor, the comedian, who had called upon her to resign, in this fashion:

"In his wire, Eddie Cantor calls upon me to resign as president of the AFA. After all these years, Eddie ought to know Sophie Tucker well enough to know that she would never desert a friend about whom enemies are spreading nasty gossip. It is not very American to find a defendant guilty, as he professes to find the AFA, without hearing both sides of the case."

Fred Keating, former president of the AFA, had charged, in a public letter that Miss Tucker was being used as a "Charlie McCarthy," and said that he "resented" it.

The June issue of the "AFA Reporter," making its appearance last week, shortly after Miss Tucker's and Mr. Whitehead's ill-fated endeavor to obtain a vote of confidence from an unruly membership at the Tuesday meeting, reported the disruption of that endeavor as having been accomplished by "a group of well-rehearsed hecklers, employing the tactics of the old-fashioned anti-labor agitators, hired by union-busting employers."

Whitehead Appeals

In the same issue, Mr. Whitehead appealed to the AFA membership to "keep an open mind with respect to this entire matter until all evidence is finally heard and disposed of. I shall reserve my answers to these ridiculous charges," he said, "for the proper time and before the proper tribunal."

Also in the same issue of the AFA house organ, an editorial, entitled "Truth Stranger Than Fiction," charges that Mr. Whitehead "asked for this investigation because he KNEW there was nothing wrong." The editorial also says that "whatever the depths to which its enemies may stoop, the AFA still believes a union should not wash dirty linen in public."

The editorial then declares that the AFA will "get a clean bill of health" when "all the evidence is in," and will receive this "if not from the Four A's International Board, then from a higher and impartial tribunal."

The AFA side, the editorial says, is that of "the truth—the simple account of what we have done for five years, an uninteresting recital of days and nights of plugging at the dull routine of union labors."

Another editorial in the same issue says that "when Kenneth Thomson (executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild) was sipping cocktails at the Essex House, the AFA's executive secretary (Ralph Whitehead) was stopping in roadside cabins to cut union expenses."

Further on, this same editorial charges that "the Four A's swivel chair dilettante union leaders can no more appreciate an AFA picket line or the AFA's dynamic fight for better working conditions for the actor than they can understand the aspirations of the American labor movement."

Lewis Leaves Paramount

Albert Lewis has resigned as an associate producer at Paramount, as a result of the studio's refusal to film "Knights of the Round Table," on which Mr. Lewis has spent eight months in research. Under the terms of the amicable settlement of his contract, Mr. Lewis retains his options on "Knights of the Round Table" and "Gettysburg," the latter recently announced as a high budget picture by the company.

Exclude Film Theatre

The application of the City Bank-Farmers Trust Company, as owner, to erect a motion picture theatre at 645-647 Madison Avenue, New York, has been denied by the Board of Standards and Appeals. The application was opposed on the ground that a precedent would be established whereby any or all property owners with deteriorated or unprofitable structures on their hands could demand a similar exception in what is a restricted retail district. Similar disputes and court actions have occurred on adjoining Park Avenue. The Normandie theatre, recently opened, is on Park Avenue, with the entrance, however, on 53rd Street.

Eckels Joins Universal

Eddy Eckels, former RKO studio publicity director, has joined the Universal's publicity staff on the coast.

Handling "Time" Publicity

Don Higgins, who formerly handled "March of Time" radio publicity, is now handling publicity for the reel.

The Griffith-Dickinson theatre circuit home offices are now in 3525 Broadway, Kansas City.

Lois Jacoby, Samuel Goldwyn's eastern talent representative, has resigned.

Local 37 Members Absorbed by Five IATSE Unions

With the disappearance as a corporate unit of Local 37 of the Studio Technicians Union, despite legal efforts on the part of its officers to keep it intact after its dissolution by the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, more than half of its 6,000 members have been absorbed in five new studio locals established by the IATSE.

The remaining members are expected to be taken into the new unions shortly. It is expected that the new unions will demand closed shop agreements.

Meanwhile, in the trial now in progress in Los Angeles Superior Court, on the question of Local 37's status, its attorney A. Brigham Rose closed the presentation of his testimony Monday by attacking the validity of a telegram purportedly sent by George Browne, IATSE head, ordering the seizure of the Local's premises and books last March. The Local's testimony seeks to set aside the IATSE cancellation of the charter and have autonomy restored to it.

According to recent testimony taken from Mr. Browne, all he knows about any alleged payments by Hollywood to William Bioff, his former personal aid, is what he read in the newspapers. Later admitting that he had made laudatory remarks about Bioff in the 1938 IATSE convention in Cleveland, Mr. Browne said that he had declared, in part, "No man ever worked harder and accomplished as much as he did, fighting producers tooth and nail."

Attorneys for two IATSE officers in charge of Hollywood affairs opened the defense case Tuesday morning.

Confirmation Asked by Local 306

Proceedings have been filed in New York Supreme Court by Local 306, projectionists union, asking for a decree confirming a decision by Ben Golden, acting as arbitrator, in which Mr. Golden's decision restrained the Bell Amusement Corporation, operator of the Hudson Playhouse, from hiring any but Local 306 operators, and fined the Corporation $656 for violation of contract.

A neutral arbitrator will be appointed by Local 306 and the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes to act as the fifth member of a committee which will arbitrate demands of the operators' union. David Weinstock and W. French Githens represent the exhibitors. Joseph Basson and Charles Kielhurn act for the union.

Negotiations Resumed

Negotiations have been resumed between the Five Boro Circuit, New York, and the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union for a contract covering wage and hour schedules for manager and assistants.

Union Sued

W. T. Coy and Ernest Lindgren, owners of the Center Theatre at White Center, Seattle, are asking damages of $25 a day from Local 154 of the operators' union. They assert that unoin pickets are forcibly preventing people from buying tickets because the theatre's projectionists have not joined the union.

Secondary Picketing Banned

As a result of a decision handed down by the Illinois Supreme Court, Illinois theatres may no longer be subjected to secondary picketing. The effect of the decision is to rule out theatre picketing in the event of a strike called by workers of another company which may be selling the theatre supplies or merchandise.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Babes in Arms

(MGM)

Comedy

Set in the period that marked the passing of vaudeville, "Babes in Arms" will tell the story of the brave attempt made by a group of former "two-a-day" headliners to recapture fleeting fame and fortune with a comeback tour, and the audacious manner in which their children, born to the stage, come to their rescue.

Adapted from one of the most successful Broadway comedy hits of the noted composer-author team of Rodgers and Hart, the theme is a blend of comedy and light melodrama, offset by several of the original musical numbers and a half dozen especially written melodies.

Mickey Rooney will be seen as the youthful author-composer-producer, who, knowing that the oldsters' brand of entertainment is outdated, sets out to prove that moderns want modern ideas. Two distinct shows will be shown within the show. One, in the nature of a minstrel show, takes place in a barn with Rooney impersonating the noted Eddie Leonard in song and dance, while in blackface he and the support relive many other famous minstrel folk. The concluding number an extravagant juvenile revue, will feature the entire cast and about 15 young specialty performers.

Adolescents predominate in the cast. Featured with Rooney will be Judy Garland, Betty Jaynes, Douglas McPhail, June Preisser and Ran Brooks. The other players concerned are Charles Winninger, Margaret Hamilton, Guy Kibbee and Henry Hull. Busby Berkeley is directing.

The Real Glory

(UA-Goldwyn)

Military Adventure

Except for "The Hurricane" and "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which in the last analysis were spectacles, Samuel Goldwyn's recent production record has not included any out-and-out action-adventure films. For that reason, "The Real Glory," which basically is a super action-adventure story, becomes a matter of more than ordinary importance to exhibitors.

The photoplay will tell a story of patient American courage and heroism in conflict with native fanatic savagery. The locale is Mindanao, an island in the Philippine group. The time is just after the Spanish-American war, when American troops were evacuating the islands, and coincident with the establishment of the Philippine Constabulary. Of all the wild island tribes the Mohammedan Moro tribe had remained unconquered for three centuries. Feared by Spaniards and Americans, they were also dreaded by Christian, peace-loving natives. How they were subjugated by an American Army doctor's courage and the heroism of an American girl constitutes the theme of the story, with the combative romance between the doctor and the girl. The many hand-to-hand fights and mass battles, culminating in the dynamiting of a dam, simultaneously with a fanatic siege of an undermanned fort, provide the spectacles.

In most Goldwyn pictures in which he appears, Gary Cooper's importance as a box office draw takes precedence over practically all other commercial values. That importance will have significance in the case of "The Real Glory" just as much as will the Goldwyn reputation for making quality entertainment no matter into what field he ventures. But the appeal of the story, which has to do with one of the most noted episodes in modern American history, should not be ignored. Then, too, there is the prestige of others in the cast, principally Andrea Leeds, who, since her first picture, "Stage Door," and through "Goldwyn Follies" and "Letter of Introduction," has risen high in public esteem; David Niven, Reginald Owen, Broderick Crawford, Russell Hicks, Vladimar Sokoloff and Henry Kolker.

To bring to screen realism this stirring adventure story, based on Charles Clifford's novel of the same title, with all its factual authenticity and fictional counterpart, Mr. Goldwyn chose as director Henry Hathaway, whose career is studded with many thrill pictures, among them "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Souls at Sea," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Spawn of the North."

Our Leading Citizen

(Paramount)

Topical Melodrama

"Our Leading Citizen" probably will prove to be the picture in which Bob Burns is established as a screen personality of greater importance than has been his lot to date. In substance the photoplay, which is based on an Irvin S. Cobb story, stresses the importance of being an American and it essentially is newspaper headline material. Leaning neither to right or left, but straight down the middle, as it treats sociological, political and economic events that are transpiring in almost every American city today, it is a story of rugged old fashioned honesty in conflict with the forces of industrial and financial greed and invested privilege and the various radical "isms" that take root when social classes clash and the rich grow richer while the poor are ground down to become further discontented. It's meaty stuff, yet supplied with comedy, love interest and human interest.

Coming within that classification of picture entertainment which some producing organizations have decided is a bit too delicate to concern themselves with at this time, the picture is a bit too delicate to concern themselves with at this time, the picture is being made in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion with the direct objective of being absorbing timely and meaningful entertainment and by no means either propaganda or educational presentation. To support Burns, Paramount and the producer, George Arthur, have rounded up an exceptionally strong cast, among them the studio's new discovery, Suzan Heyward, now in "Beau Geste," Joseph Allen, Jr., Elizabeth Patterson, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, Charles Bickford, Paul Guilfoyle, Clarence Kolb, Fay Helm and Otto Hoffman.

Direction is in the hands of Alfred Santell, who made Burns' "The Arkansas Traveller" and had experience with this type of material when he directed "Winterset" and "The Life of Vergie Winters."

Release date: August 11, 1939.

Hotel for Women

(20th Century-Fox)

Exploitation Show

Although the thematic structure of "Hotel for Women" will follow the path of a multi-angled romance melodrama prior to its happy ending, exhibitors, for many patent reasons, most likely will consider it an unique exploitation show. The major locale, as the title denotes, is a New York City hotel for women, so rigidly administered that a member of the sterner sex hardly dares stick his nose inside the front door. It is populated by models, and the heroine is one of them. Its contact woman is the widely publicized party giver, Elsa Maxwell, who, in addition to having served as technical director on the film and helped write the story with Kathryn Scola and Darrell Ware, will appear in it and sing a song she wrote

Secondly, "Hotel for Women," while it will present a score or more of well known screen personalities, will also serve as the screen debut of two promising newcomers, Linda Darnell and Katherine Aldridge, a photographer's model. For more familiar names the picture will feature James Ellison, Ann Sothern, who did something for herself in MGM's "Maisie," Miss Maxwell, John Halliday, Lynn Bari, Alan Dinehart, Jean Rogers, June Gale, Mary Healy, Joyce Compton, Amanda Diff, Sidney Blackmer, Chick Chandler, Ivan Lebedeff and Barnett Parker, and many others.

The film is being directed by Gregory Ratoff, whose latest credits are "Wife, Husband and Friend" and "Rose of Washington Square." Raymond Griffith is assuming responsibilities of production.

Release date: To be determined.

These Glamour Girls

(MGM)

Collegiate Romance

Entertainment for youthful audience groups, those in the ages between adolesence and early maturity, is the aim of "These Glamour Girls." Regarded as one of the fictional hits of the season when published in Cosmopolitan, the story in which comedy and light melodrama have been combined to generate human interest is being brought to the screen by S. Sylvan Simon, whose record as a MGM director includes "Spring Madness," "Four Girls in White" and "The Kid from Texas." Production supervision is by Sam Zimbalist, who made "Tarzan Finds a Son," "The Crowd Roars" and "Navy Blue and Gold."

Although the theme will not concern itself with an athlete or cheer-leader, it nevertheless is a college story. Mainly it will treat of the experiences of a taxi-dancer who, bidden by a young blue blood, during a tipsy escapade, to a weekend fraternity house party, invades the environs of a tradition-shrouded college to find herself in conflict with Park Avenue debutante glamour girls. It will detail how she bests her snobbish rivals in all competition. Further it will show how she proved herself a real women when the student who forgot that he invited her is the victim of misfortune and needs an understanding friend.

Although Lew Ayres, who will play the leading role, can hardly be considered a youngster, the cast is made up of a platoon of Hollywood's younger players. The heroine, Lana Turner, was with Ayres in "Calling Dr. Kildare," while others assigned important roles are Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Owen Davis, Jr., Anne Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes, Marsha Hunt, Jane Bryan and Dennie Moore.

Release date: To be determined.

Thunder Afloat

(MGM)

Naval War Melodrama

It's axiomatic that good war pictures usually make money. That being the case, the omens are favorable for "Thunder Afloat." The picture will be a spirited and meaty story of an heroic chapter in American naval annals. In background it will detail how, during the World War, enemy submarines invading the eastern seaboard, played havoc with merchant and naval shipping. Directly it will treat the exploits of an irascible down east tugboat captain who didn't think the war was any of his business until a U-boat sunk his beloved craft. Then this Yankee individualist, wanting to fight the war all by himself, becomes the central figure in those decoy fishing schooner-subchaser episodes that broke up the blockade. The love interest involves the hero's daughter and a rival tugboat captain.

For names the picture will have Wallace Beery, back in the type of role that fitted him so well in "Min and Bill" and "Tugboat Annie," with a dash of "Slave Ship" thrown in. He will have as principal supports Chester Morris, who was with him in "The Big House," and Virginia Grey. Other names of consequence are Regis Toomey, Carl Esmond, John Qualen, Clem Bevans, Douglass Dumbrille, Phillip Terry and Charles Lane.

The picture, based on a story by Ralph Wheelwright and Commander Harvey Haislip, USN, will be directed by George Seitz, maker of most of the "Judge Hardy" series and such action film as "Last of the Mohicans."

Release date: To be determined.

Mr. Wong in Chinatown

(Monogram)

Mystery Melodrama

"Mr. Wong in Chinatown" will be the third picture in Monogram's series of weird mystery melodramas based on the Hugh Wiley "James Lee Wong" stories that appeared in Collier's. As in the earlier two, "Mr. Wong, Detective" and "The Mystery of Mr. Wong," Boris Karloff and Grant Withers are featured. The supporting cast is made up of players new to the series.

As in the predecessors, the story will be a tightly wrapped murder mystery with the killings stemming from an attempt to steal $500,000 deposited in a bank by the first victim. Substantiating detail, baffling and annoying to the oriental detective, "Wong," as they are to an American sleuth, "Street," promise to be equally mystifying yet entertaining. "Wong's" acts in endeavoring to solve the duel murder, assay the possible guilt of two suspects, meanwhile building up a case against the real killer, are expected to be a vivid demonstration of the phrase, "give a criminal enough rope and he will hang himself."

The locale is San Francisco's Chinatown and the adjacent waterfront. The producer director team of William T. Lackey and William Nigh, which turned out the first two pictures, is again in charge. For names to supplement Karloff and Withers, the picture will offer Marjorie Reynolds, Peter George Lynn, William Royle, Huntly Gordon, James Flavin, Lotus Long, Guy Usher, and Chinese character players.

Release date: August 7, 1939.

My Fifth Avenue Girl

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

A while back, with "My Man Godfrey," Gregory LaCava was among those who pioneered the modern scatterbrain farce comedy entertainment idea. And though he has concerned himself with such "cross-section-of-life" pictures as "Private Worlds" and "Stage Door," he here, under his dual producer-director contract with RKO-Radio, is returning to the type of "My Man Godfrey," "Affairs of Cellini" and "She Married Her Boss." In theme "My Fifth Avenue Girl" is an hilarious story of how a quick thinking shop girl straightens out the multiple troubles of a millionaire's family. How she brings happiness to an old man whose family thinks he is a one man mind and knocks sense into the respective heads of a wife who wants a divorce to marry a playboy, a son who neglects business for sports and galavanting around, and a daughter who hangs out with gangs of goldfish gulpers, is the substance of the plot.

The "Girl" will be Ginger Rogers, now being seen in "Bachelor Mother," and the wealthy "Borden" family is made up of Water Connolly, currently in "Good Girls Go to Paris," Verree Teasdale, last seen in "Topper Takes a Trip," Tim Holt and a newcomer, Kathryn Adams. Other principals are James Ellison, now in "Hotel for Women," Franklyn Pangborn, Cornelius Keefe, Louis Calhern, Ferike Boris, who was seen in "Love Affair," and Manda Lane.

Release date: To be determined.

Vitaphone To Release Twelve Shorts in July

Vitaphone has ready for release during the month of July 12 short subjects, including two two-reelers and ten of one reel.

The two-reel subjects are "Quiet Please" in color and "A Swing Opera," both from the Broadway Brevities classification. The one reel product includes two Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventures" numbers, "Lives in Peril" and "Three Minute Fuse"; three from the Merrie Melody classification, "Old Glory," "Snow Man's Land" and "Dangerous Dan McFoo"; two Melody Masters featuring the orchestras of Rita Rio and Will Osborne; "Porky's Picnic," a Looney Tune; a Color Classic entitled "Modern Methods" and "Witness Trouble" from the Vitaphone Variety group.

Atlantic City Station Moving to New York

The Federal Communications Commission has approved the application to transfer radio station WPG, owned by Atlantic City, to New York City.

The Greater New York Broadcasting Corporation, headed by Arde Bulova, proposes to acquire WPG and transfer it to New York. The Greater New York Broadcasting Corporation then would consolidate WPG, WOV and WBIL into one full-time station.

The Gregory circuit, operating 29 houses in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, has been taken over by Alliance Theatre Company, headed by Herbert L. Stern and T. J. Dee. The deal was said to involve $1,500,000. S. J. Gregory will be in charge of the circuit.

Air Express shipments, including films, of Railway Express Agency increased 20.8 per cent in April, 1939, over April, last year. Shipments for the first four months of 1939 increased 19 per cent.

Berkowitz Returns Republic Franchise

Jack Berkowitz has turned back his Republic franchise for Albany, Buffalo and Detroit to Republic Pictures. He has been the company's distributor in these territories for four years.

Sam Seplowin remains as manager of the Detroit branch. Arthur J. Newman succeeds Bernie Mills as manager of the Albany branch, while Nat Marcus will manage the Buffalo branch. Mr. Berkowitz handled the Buffalo office.

Mr. Berkowitz was president of Republic Distributing Corporation of Upper New York and Republic Pictures Corporation of Michigan. The franchise dissolution was on a basis satisfactory to all concerned, according to Republic.

Five territorial offices are now handled by the home office. In addition to the Albany, Buffalo and Detroit franchise, the franchise for Los Angeles and San Francisco was recently turned back by Floyd St. John.

Hays Acts as Best Man For Son's Wedding

Will H. Hays, president of the M. P. P. D. A. was best man at the marriage of his son, Will, Jr., on Tuesday to Margaret Louise Chapin of Indianapolis. The ceremony was performed at the Episcopal Church of the Advent in that city. Two of the groom's cousins, John T. and Charles Edward Hays of Sullivan, Ind., were ushers. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pond Chapin of Indianapolis. She attended DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind. After a motor trip to the West Coast, the couple will live in New Haven where the groom is completing his final year at the Yale School of Law.

Mr. Hays, Sr., planned to leave at the end of the week for the Coast where he intends to pass the remainder of the summer at his Hidden Valley ranch. Before leaving New York, he was to preside at the adjourned meeting of the M. P. P. D. A. board scheduled for Friday.

Anderson Acquires Four

Charles A. Anderson, of the Alpine Theatre Circuit, Pittsburgh, has added four more houses to his circuit: the Lincoln theatre, Chester, W. Va.; Brighton, New Brighton, Pa.; Strand, Zelienople, Pa., and the Pleasant, Point Pleasant, W. Va. The theatres were formerly operated by Vogel and Davis.

Wangberg Promoted

RKO Radio has promoted John Wangberg, office manager at the exchange in Kansas City for two years, to the position of home office representative, with supervision at the New Orleans, Charlotte, Atlanta and Dallas exchanges. A luncheon in his honor was given last week in Kansas City by the Variety Club.

Louis Davidson, former newspaperman, is the new assistant to Rodney Bush, recently appointed head of publicity and exploitation for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Bachelor Mother

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy of Errors

This is a gay, glib and frequently uproarious comedy about a girl who finds a baby in an orphanage doorway and has a condition tantamount to motherhood thrust upon her by circumstance and association. Ginger Rogers as the synthetic mother and David Niven as her sympathetic employer, who finds paternity thrust upon him in turn, are superb in the principal roles and receive excellent assistance from Charles Coburn, Frank Albertson, Ferike Boros and the others in support. Dealt with hilariously but in good taste, the subject matter is worked up into a delightful piece of modern entertainment for grownups.

Garson Kanin, rapidly becoming known as the director who makes no mistakes, gave producer B. G. DeSylva a superlative demonstration of his singularly commonsense talent. Norman Krasna's screen play, from a story by Felix Jackson, is likewise a product of intelligence as well as wit. There is about the sum of their combined efforts an intimacy of appeal and a directness of point seldom come upon in filmed fiction and met with most often in the heavier type of material. It is tremendously effective as applied here to comedy.

The story, curiously, could as well have served a melodrama. A department store clerk is given her notice, befriends a baby on her lunch hour and is reemployed when orphanage attendants convince her employer that poverty has impelled her to abandon her child. Repeated denials of the alleged maternity bring only threats of persecution, so she accepts the situation and concocts a story about a worthless husband. Her employer's interest in the case ripens into friendliness and then love, although he does not realize this last until his father, led to believe that the baby is the grandson he long has wanted, commands the young man to marry the girl. Both attempt to prove the baby is not theirs, but ultimately decide to get married anyway. The film ends with the girl saying over the man's shoulder into the lens, "Oh, have I got a surprise for you," which plunged the Hollywood preview audience into convulsions.

Treated exclusively for laugh purposes, the material yields a series of increasingly amusing situations, several of them so effective that audience laughter drowns out stretches of dialogue. A New Year Eve party with Miss Rogers and Mr. Niven speaking counterfeit Swedish is a comedy classic. Comedy grounded in such commonly serious matters as questionable maternity, disputed paternity and alleged illegitimacy is so expertly handled as to seem wholly orthodox.

The scene is New York and the time could be now. The film has a special asset in the presence of chubby Elbert Copelen, Jr., as the baby in the case, and a special timeliness in the first successful use of the Jitterbug variety of dance mania, a passing but potent sequence. It is an extremely diverting picture for adults, although based in large part upon subjects the youngsters are not supposed to know all about.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to a predominantly adult audience which laughed itself into the aisles.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by RKO-Radio Pictures. Director, Garson Kanin. Producer, B. G. DeSylva. Pandro S. Berman in charge of production. Screen play, Norman Krasna. Story, Felix Jackson. The Man in the Iron Mask

(UA-Small)

Period Melodrama

Producer Edward Small has provided showmen with much to talk to the customers about in behalf of this production. Perhaps the first thing to announce is that it's Alexander Dumas' renowned novel filmed in all its swashbuckling vigor. Then there is plenty to be said of the brilliant performance of the dual lead by Louis Hayward. The names of James Whale as director and George Bruce as screen playwright have known exploitation significance and the cast contains more live copy names than most marquees can accommodate. By way of a clinching finale for exhibitor ad copy it can be said that for this production Mr. Small dipped back into the bag of tricks he used for his sensational "Count of Monte Cristo," and if that doesn't bring them in to see the picture the first night there's no use talking to the customers in the first place.

It is quite true that Mr. Small does go back to "Monte Cristo" for the better parts of this venture. The film is at its best in the sequences of dashing sword play and violence, in the cross country chases and the shadowy prison adventures. It is occasionally dull between these high points, somewhat overly quiet and polite in the explanatory interludes and a little passive on the romantic side. It becomes high tension melodrama, however, when action supplants dialogue and blades leap out of scabbards.

Mr. Hayward's differentiation between the twin portrayals which served James K. Hackett and other great American actors so successfully in the footlight era is a fine demonstration of his acting ability. He does it without makeup, relying upon voice and characterization. Few have handled a dual role so well, none better. Warren William as D'Artagnan and Joseph Schildkraut as the villainous statesman contribute other standout performances, while Marian Martin registers solidly in meager footage as the king's mistress.

It will be remembered that the story is about Louis XIV of France and his twin brother Philippe, whom he imprisoned in the Bastile with an iron mask clamped over his head, according to Dumas, keeping him there until rescue by musketeers enabled him to supplant Louis as king and marry Maria Teresa of Spain in his stead. Plots and counter plots pertaining to this ultimately happy outcome make up a highly adventurous and thrilling tale.

Mr. Small has produced the picture expensively and with manifest respect for realism of detail as well as mass. It is a widely known work and all or most of the incidents familiar to readers of the novel are in the picture. The exact nature of the relationship between Louis and his mistress is not specified so clearly as to distract the attention of youngsters interested in the fighting.

The Forgotten Woman

(Universal)

Character Melodrama

Sigrid Gurie stands out vividly as the best showmanship bet in "The Forgotten Woman." Although plot ramifications involve Donald Briggs, Paul Harvey, Eve Arden and Donnie Dunagan to a great extent, the title character and the player who won much favorable note accrued as a result of performances in "Adventures of Marco Polo" and "Algiers," dominates the show.

Seen for the first time as a modern woman, she seems a composite of several popular screen personalities. While the story provided by John Kober and adapted by Lionel Houser and Harold Buchman is not unprecedented in screen annals, the quality of staging as produced by Edmund Grainger and contrasting moods developed by Harold Young's direction give the star and support ample opportunity to deliver convincing and sometimes moving performances.

Somber in tone, with but little alleviating humor, the picture arouses honest sympathy for a persecuted woman. Jailed by circumstantial evidence and legal skullduggery in an effort to build a political empire, "Anne Kennedy" is forced to spend three years in jail and bear a child there when evidence establishing her innocence is hidden. An unwanted woman, unable to get a job upon release, she surrenders the child, "Terry," to adoption, meanwhile vowing vengeance upon the prosecutor, "Burke." But when the political boss, "Courtenay," tries to sandbag "Burke" with proof that he was a party to keeping "Anne" jailed in order to prevent prosecution of the boss and friends in a bank wrecking case, "Anne," who learns that "Burke" and his sister have adopted the boy, makes a false but convincing confession that she was an accessory in the crime for which she had been imprisoned. Paying off kindness with kindness that prevents further judicial piracy, "Anne" and "Burke" vision happiness with "Terry."

While the theme of a persecuted, sacrificing woman has often been a film subject, the manner in which it is presented in "The Forgotten Woman" gives it fresh appeal, and the way Miss Gurie carries the role gives the plot a more intimate appeal. It can be anticipated that women patrons will find the production unusually interesting and that any adult audience can understand just how the things that happen in this film might happen to anyone.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Cal. The adult audience quickly caught the spirit of the show and watched and listened attentively throughout. The applause at the conclusion was a sincere tribute to worthwhile entertainment.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Mickey The Kid

(Republic)

Father-Son Melodrama

For youngsters, because a young lad is the hero, "Mickey the Kid" is an interesting attraction. Grownups may consider it a repetition of many things they previously have seen, although the incidents included are dressed up anew. The sequence which climaxes the production, too, may or may not have lost its topical value, inasmuch as the factual episode which it reenacts happened long ago.

Generally melodramatic, but not without a human interest content which is alternately sympathetic and humorous, the show is another version of the father-and-son theme. Directed by Arthur Lubin from a story by Alice Altschuler, which Doris Malloy and Gordon Kahn adapted, the featured players, Bruce Cabot, Tommy Ryan, Ralph Byrd, Jessie Ralph, Zasu Pitts, June Storey and Scotty Beckett, are seen in convincing performances.

Children of approximately the same age as young Ryan are the picture's first market. There seem to be enough thrills, action and excitement in it, as well as a few bits of good old fashioned moral, to hold this interest.

The Saint in London

(RKO-Radio)

Melodrama

Showmen whose customers go in for the smarter type of detective films have in this one a quite special inducement to offer under more than the normal spread of sail. "The Saint in London" is by far the best of the "Saint" pictures and requires of its observers no familiarity with its predecessors or the central character. It is the best detective melodrama of recent months.

George Sanders' portrayal of the well dressed detective who poses as an international criminal is a masterful impersonation. He is suave, glib, active yet composed, in a weird chain of events having to do with a plot to circulate in London fraudulently printed currency of an unnamed nation. So that the picture might have the stamp of authenticity, it was produced in England by William Sistrom with John Paddy Carstairs directing a cast largely composed of extraordinarily accomplished British players. The screen play by Lynn Root and Frank Fenton is a finely polished adaptation of "The Million Pound Day," a story by Leslie Charteris.

Sally Gray, as a young woman enamoured of "The Saint" and of the adventurous activities his profession entails, turns in a charming and convincing performance. David Burns is extremely amusing as the American ex-convict inadvertently enlisted on the side of the law, and Athene Seyler is proportionately so in somewhat lesser footage. Gordon McLeod makes a much married Scotland Yard inspector a standout character.

Stunt Pilot

(Monogram)

Aviation Adventure

Produced with the intention to satisfy youthful followers of Hal Forrest's "Tailspin Tommy" cartoon, "Stunt Pilot" is a lively mixture of thrills in the air and conspiracy and mystery on the ground. Again featuring four principals of the first picture in the series, "Mystery Plane"—John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds, Milburn Stone and Jason Robards—the production is a worthy sequel to the initial film. Though some of the dialogue and situations in the early reels are a bit stereotyped, the excitement in the closing action more than makes up for the inconsistencies.

The story concerns the time tested triumph of heroism over villainy and involves a spectacular chase by plane and train, the trapping of the villain and his final conviction of murder through evidence supplied by a youthful amateur photographer. Romantic interest is at a minimum.

The screen play by Scott Darling and Joseph West has caught the spirit of Forrest's drawings, and the capable acting of the principals and the supporting cast, under George Waggner's direction, together with Fred Jackman's spectacular aerial action photography, endows the film with plenty of appeal for youngsters.

Previewed at the Lido theatre, Los Angeles. The audience, which seemed to think the picture a littel amateurish at the start, soon found more than enough thrills and excitement to interest it. —GUS MCCARTHY.

Maisie

(MGM)

Quite a Girl

Strictly speaking, in the accepted sense of "Postian" postulates, "Maisie" is no lady. On one count, she is a bit rough, a trifle tough and altogether too lower class to be considered a finished Junior Leaguer. But, for all her flash veneer, the young miss under consideration and the colonel's lady are sisterly akin under the skin. Besides, the stagey appellation affected by the girl is really not her own but one adopted for professional purposes. As identified by herself, "Maisie Ravier" was first christened with the Celtec billing of "Mary Anastasia O'Connor" and under such nominal sponsorship the lass must be true blue, or green to give her the proper national colors.

The offering is chiefly comic in intention and execution and the sale slogans should capitalize on this motif. However, the narrative structure has been appended with further entertainment ingredients, chiefly a western locale, some cowboy vocalization, natural romance that shows up a distasteful triangle setup in comparison, and a murder trial. The cast roster is personalized with some accomplished comedy and straight players, including Ann Sothern in the title role, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Ian Hunter and Cliff Edwards. Acting honors go to Miss Sothern, who continues to display her comedienne forte, recently discovered in "Trade Winds." Mr. Young, usually pictured as the brash young man, plays practically straight man for Miss Sothern. Mary C. McCall, Jr., who has a reputation for being a wielder of sharp, smart screen stories, has matched Miss Sothern's decorative outlines with some sprightly dialogue lines. Director Edwin L. Marin wisely did not allow the more serious moments of the story to interfere with the fast and funny pace of the plot.

"Maisie," a showgirl stranded in a cow town, promotes for herself the job of lady's maid for the "Sybil Ames," who is visiting with her husband their ranch property. The employment arranges does not meet the full approval of "Slim Martin," ranch foreman, who, besides being a confirmed woman hater as the result of a previous and unfortunate romance, is none too friendly with "Maisie" because of an embarrassing situation with the young lady as pictured in the opening sequences of the film. That's just the beginning of a tumult of action.

On Borrowed Time

(MGM)

Death Up a Tree

Many mortals regard the treatment of death as the business of religion or a matter of personal philosophy. Such a section of the public hardly would classify demise as being in the category of screen fare entertainment. But it is upon this theme that the narrative of "On Borrowed Time" depends. There is nothing musty or morbid about the handling of the subject. It is treated charmingly, gayly and what is most important, entertainingly. A viewing of the picture will leave the audience in a mellow, misty mood. There should be no spectator not touched by the whimsical appeal of the fantasy-story, the innate naturalness of the leading characters, especially "Gramps," "Granny" and "Pud" and the altogether wholesomeness of the picture's effects.

The cast is superb individually and collectively. Special accolades of praise should be directed to Lionel Barrymore in a role reminiscent of his grandfather assignment in "You Can't Take It With You," and to Bobs Watson, the beguiling "Pee Wee" of "Boys' Town" memory, in the part of the youngster, "Pud." Besides, Beulah Bondi demonstrates her amazing range of acting ability in her playing of the endearing old lady character of "Granny" or as "Gramps" calls her, "Miss Nellie." Sir Cedric Hardwicke, British thespian of note on both sides of the Atlantic, plays the thankless role of a personalized death or, as he is identified, "Mr. Brink," in a polished and beautifully enunciated style.

Harold S. Bucquet has handled the difficult theme with smooth directorial skill that has endowed the whimsical nature of the story with a wholly credible air of being real. A knowing trio of penmen, Alice D. G. Miller, Frank O'Neill and Claudine West, has adapted for the screen the Paul Osborn play from a novel by Lawrence Edward Watkin and the entire collaboration results in a unified and moving script.

Naughty but Nice

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy, Romance, Music

"Naughty but Nice" is concerned with the adventures of a small town professor of music in New York's Tin Pan Alley. The professor is the retiring sort, grown to manhood under the watchful eyes of three spinster aunts. His visit to New York is for the purpose of getting his musical masterpiece published. The piece emerges as a swing concoction, "Hooray for Spinach," much to the professor's discomfiture.

Dick Powell plays the professor, and capably. Worthy of marquee notice, too, is Warner's current glamour or "oomph" girl, Ann Sheridan. She is the girl usually responsible for the predicaments to which the professor finds himself heir. The script writers have given her the "but definitely" type of lines with a vengeance. Gale Page is a writer of lyrics, collaborator with the professor on several hit songs.

Others in the cast are Zasu Pitts as one of the three spinster aunts; Helen Broderick, as the fourth aunt who ran away to marry a musician; Ronald Reagan, a song publisher; Allen Jenkins, a song writer, and Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, as the completely daffy cook, housekeeper and general all around handy man for the professor's "Aunt Martha."

Although the picture doesn't move with the desired fluency, laughs are plentiful.

Miss Sheridan, Miss Page and Powell sing several songs, including the above mentioned "Hooray for Spinach" and "I'm Happy About the Whole Thing."

Crime Does Not Pay Series

The objective is a revelation of the employment racket as it is worked by fraudulent agencies. With the aid of a job foreman the agency places new men on a job. The agency's commission for giving the new man work is half of what he makes the first month. At the end of the month he is fired by the foreman who gets a percentage on each new man employed. In this way the agency and the foreman have a continuous financial profit at the expense of the working man. An interesting and absorbing melodrama.—Running time, 21 minutes.

in London

Wynyard Returns

Diana Wynyard returns to the screen in "On the Night of the Fire" being made at Denham. For her debut in British films Miss Wynyard will co-star with Ralph Richardson in one of the year's best-selling novels.

Credit for bringing these two personalities together goes to Josef Somlo and Richard Norton who plan to make "On the Night of the Fire" the outstanding picture of their programme, in fact one of the most ambitious British pictures of the year. Brian Desmond Hurst, who was responsible for "Sensation" and "Prison Without Bars" is directing.

"On the Night of the Fire" is the second of a series of films which Richard Norton and Josef Somlo are producing at Denham. "A Window in London," the first, is now nearing completion while "The Arsenal Stadium Mystery," a film with the Arsenal football team as a background, will shortly go into production.

Invasion

In "An Englishman's Home," being produced by Aldwych Film Productions at Denham, Mary Maguire plays the daughter of a typical English suburban family. The story tells of a sudden invasion of London by an enemy power. It is being made on a spectacular scale and will cost £100,000. Edmund Gwenn, Richard Ainley and Geoffrey Toone are heading the cast with Mary Maguire. The director is Albert de Courville and Neville E. Neville is the producer.

Robeson in 'Goliath'

Paul Robeson, who announced on the completion of his last film that he would retire from the screen until he found a subject suitable to his philosophy, has now agreed to play the leading role in a new Michael Balcon production "David Goliath," to be directed by Pen Tennyson, who recently directed "There Ain't No Justice."

"David Goliath" is an original by an ex-colleague of Sergei Eisenstein, Herbert Marshall, and has a background of industrial Wales.

Robeson's role does not accent the fact that he is a Negro, but casts him as a stoker who lands penniless in Wales, becomes a tramp and then a miner and befriends a poverty stricken Welsh family whose life he shares.

Carstairs to Direct

RKO Radio announces that John Paddy Carstairs has been assigned to direct "Archer Plus Twenty," adaptation of Hugh Clevely's best-selling novel, which is to be produced in Great Britain under the guidance of William Sistrom. As with "The Saint in London," which had the same producer-director team, an entire British technical unit will be used.

Karen Verne plays a star role in her first picture, "Ten Days in Paris," being produced at Denham by Irving Asher.

Asher Busy

Irving Asher is busy producing "Ten Days in Paris" at Denham. Tim Whelan is directing and as he has made some of the most successful films that ever came from England we may expect a repeat success with this one. Rex Harrison, who is starring, plays the part of a young man suffering from amnesia, and a new screen find, Karen Verne, previously without film experience, will play opposite to Harrison.

Karen Verne has been signed for a long term contract by Irving Asher, who considers her the most important of recent screen finds.

Indian Trek

Film making in the jungles of India and in process of a 20,000 mile motor tour, is the World Window unit, led by Count and Countess Keller, with Hans Nieter director, John Hanau producer, and Jack Cardiff, who is supervising the color photography.

The sixth subject of the trek has already been concluded by the unit and it titled "Village Picture."

Ingram as "Djinn"

Rex Ingram, the negro actor famous for his part as "de Lawd" in the screen version of Marc Connelly's "Green Pastures" and for his more recent part in "Huckleberry Finn," has agreed with Mr. Korda to come to Denham to play the part of the Djinn in "The Thief of Baghdad."

CEA Views "Pen"

Associated British Picture Corporation showed the new Elstree production "Poison Pen" to the CEA Conference delegates at Blackpool with a gala performance at the Princess Cinema on Tuesday, June 27th.

Arthur Dent, director in charge of distribution, made this decision after the recent sales conference during which this picture was viewed before completion. The work of Flora Robson in a powerful, topical story whose strength is the more remarkable for its contrast with an English village background, puts the film into a class of its own. The film is directed by Paul Stein.

Following the gala performance, a reception and dance were held by Associated British at the Metropole Hotel, to which all CEA delegates with their wives were invited.

Documentary Films

Latest total of documentary films of all kinds available to schools in the United Kingdom is 2,400, according to a British Film Institute estimate. Of these nearly 300 deal with Dominion and Colonial subjects. The Empire and G.P.O. Film Library, sponsored by Government grant, contains over 2,000 prints of 560 documentarys and educationals, all of these dealing with the Empire. Most of them have been contributed to the Library, which is attached to the Imperial Institute, by various overseas Governments. They are circulated without charge to 3,500 schools, educationalist institutions and societies.

According to the same source, 1,259 film projectors are used currently in schools in England and Wales. Of these 716 are elementary or preparatory schools, 277 are provided in secondary schools and 121 are provided by local education authorities for general use.

Seven local authorities in England and Wales have established documentary film libraries.

Departures

John W. Hicks, Jr., Paramount vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, was scheduled to leave New York Friday by train bound for Vancouver, British Columbia, and will leave Vancouver July 5th for Australia. In Honolulu he will meet Adolph Zukor, Paramount board chairman, and Mr. Hicks and Mr. Zukor will hold a company convention in Sydney August 2nd.

The two company officers, accompanied by Mrs. Zukor, Mrs. Hicks and John W. Hicks 3rd, will sail from Sydney August 18th and arrive in Los Angeles September 5th, after having visited Adelaide, Melbourne and Brisbane.

VAUDEVILLE IS BACK, SAYS WILLIAM BRANDT

New York Circuit Operator Plans to Revive Old Style Acts in Ten Film Theatres

Vaudeville with films is back again, says William Brandt, independent circuit owner of New York and brother of Harry, who is president of the New York I.T.O.A.

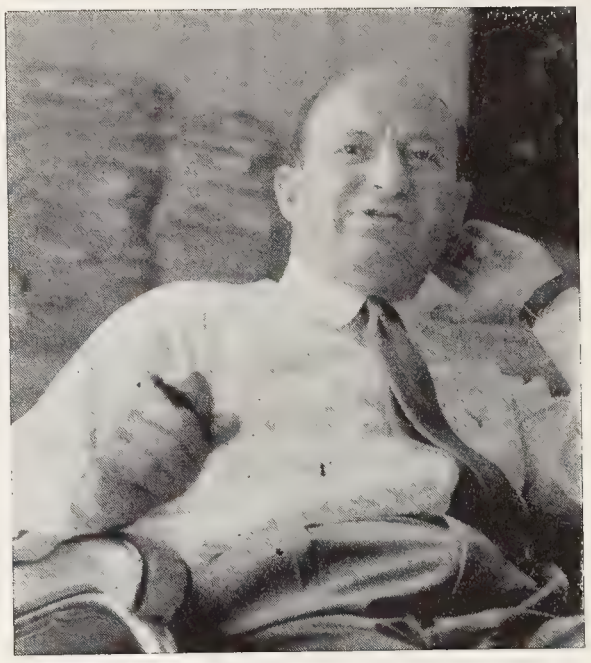
It is back because it is to be offered at the same admission prices as the motion pictures; because it is a "new entertainment" to the generation that grew up since the "old vaudeville" vanished; because it is the "only" logical method of re-employing the thousands of musicians, stagehands and the like thrown out of work with the advent of talking pictures; because it now uses personalities developed by the radio and familiar to every family; and because it offers the only method of training "new faces" for radio, stage and screen—all this, according to Mr. Brandt, who, with his brother Harry, operates the Brandt circuit of independent theatres in New York City, and who, like his brother, Harry, the president, is active in the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York City.

Tests at Flatbush Theatre

On the question corollary to all of his new plans, the assent of the union stagehands, musicians and actors, Mr. Brandt said he expected no difficulties. The American Federation of Musicians has been campaigning to induce major and independent circuits to bring back "live music" to their orchestra pits.

Mr. Brandt has tried out, for the 13 weeks beginning March 17, and ending with the summer closing of the theatre, the "new type" of vaudeville at the Flatbush theatre, Brooklyn. Its success was "phenomenal," he says, and, together with the reasons enumerated above, determined the Brandt circuit to spread vaudeville to other Brandt theatres, beginning September 21.

The admission prices at the Flatbush were 25 cents for daytime; 40 cents for evenings. The admission price scale, identical with that used by the house, and competitive houses, for strictly motion picture shows, will be observed with some variation at the other circuit houses to use vaudeville.



Some of the other theatres will be the Windsor, in the Bronx; the Audubon, in Washington Heights; and the Carlton, in Jamaica. They are "full-week" houses. One "split-week" house will be used: the Bayside, in Bayside, Queens.

Ten Theatres Aim

The "vaudeville circuit" plan will be extended to other houses, until a total of ten is reached, Mr. Brandt said. These other houses may include the Hippodrome, of Baltimore, belonging to Izzy Rappaport; the Rialto, Newark, operated by Dave Weinstock; and the State, Hartford, operated by Dr. Harris. Further houses may be brought into the "circuit" to make a total of 20.

"At least," said Mr. Brandt, "the vaudeville artist at the very start will be guaranteed a total of ten weeks' playing time. Later, that will be 20 weeks. The time should come when he will have a full year's booking from us."

The plan calls for the introduction of the "new vaudeville" at the Flatbush on September 21. After the first week, the acts will go to the other theatres. Mr. Brandt points out that any flaws discovered in the acts at the Flatbush will automatically have been "ironed" out when they reach the other houses.

As an example of the type talent that the "new vaudeville" offers the theatre of today, Mr. Brandt pointed at the list of acts which played the Flatbush at its trial of vaudeville. Among these acts were Paul Whiteman, Abbott and Costello, Willie and Eugene Howard, Harry Richman, Lou Holtz, Jimmy Dorsey, and Helen Morgan.

'Yes, when we get through, we're going to be able to offer these and other artists a whole seasons' work," Mr. Brandt said.

"We really have a definite idea," he explained, "and that is, that a lot of theatres at present are using last run motion pictures, re-issues, Screeno, double features, and what-not—everything but the show business.

"We're of the opinion that if you give the people a real stage show at an admission price they can afford to pay, comparable to that charged in strictly motion picture houses, they will turn to this new form of entertainment.

It was at this turn in the conversation that Mr. Brandt explained his definition of vaudeville as "new," thus: "It is new, in that the old form had a pit band, while the new form employs all the radio personalities that have sprung up with the new bands. For instance, we had a show with Vincent Lopez, and his orchestra, Patricia Ellis, and Betty Hutton. That show combined all elements of entertainment, and was worth 25 cents of anybody's money, that being the afternoon price, and 40 cents, being the evening price.

"There is another element," he explained further, "and that is, that because vaudeville passed out, virtually, in 1927, with the coming of the talkies, it is a brand new policy to that generation which has not seen vaudeville since then."

"Finally," he concluded, "our vaudeville plans will give a considerable amount of work to musicians, stagehands, scenery workers and actors."

The Indiana and Illinois Theatre circuit, expanding in Chicago, is taking over the Lexington theatre there, which was formerly under the Warner circuit management.

Wanger Protests Curbs on Product

Addressing the 61st annual American Library Congress in San Francisco last Friday, Walter Wanger, producer, described motion pictures as one of the greatest weapons for the safeguarding of Democracy, but said that they should be free of the shackles of censorship.

Speaking on "What Happens to Books in Hollywood and Why," Mr. Wanger said, "Films which attempt to be informative and which interpret burning questions of the day should not be hobbled or haltered. If films cannot speak truthfully and freely where great issues are involved, then they can be used as a weapon against democracies."

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Pictures

Of 15 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week nine were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Clouds Over Europe," "Four Feathers," "Grand Jury's Secrets," "In Old Caliente," "Land of Liberty," "Mountain Rhythm," "Mutiny on the Blackhawk," "Tarzan Finds a Son," "Western Caravans." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Good Girls Go to Paris," "The Magnificent Fraud," "Man About Town," "Naughty But Nice." Class C, Condemned: "Children of the Sun," "The Pace That Kills."

Tex Ritter, Monogram musical western star, will start a personal appearance tour July 13th after completion of "Man from Texas."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

When a film salesman in England goes a-calling on his exhibitor customers in his automobile, he uses a lingo that's strange indeed.

If something goes wrong, the Britisher gets out and lifts his "bonnet"—that's not tipping his hat, but lifting the hood of his car. If he "crashes a Bobby's arm," no first aid is called for. It's merely his way of saying that he passed a stop sign.

When the British film salesman on the road asks a service man to "top up" his car, it means fill the battery with water. The Englishman "revs up" when he steps on the gas and when he really gets going at top speed he's "flat out." His sedan is a "saloon," although our saloon to him is not a sedan.

The front fenders are "wings." He keeps his baggage in a "luggage boot," trunk to us, and looks through a "windscreen" instead of a windshield.

The Fox-Lyons theatre, in Lyons, Kansas, has an idea that looks pretty good as a goodwill builder. It's a Chick Project for girls and boys of the vicinity, and is designed to build up support among the farm trade.

Cooperating merchants donate $2.50 for each unit in the Chick Project, each merchant taking as many units as he feels that his budget will stand. This money buys baby chicks in flocks of 100, the chicks being distributed to any boy or girl in the community who is interested in raising a good flock of chickens and who is unable to finance himself. When the chickens are sold in the fall, all or part of the merchants' investment is returned to them.

Milwaukee censors gave permission for a local theatre to show the New York-banned "Birth of a Baby" sex picture, but refused permission for a re-issue showing of "The Birth of a Nation."

FOR THE BENEFIT of those armies of theatre men arriving in New York as visitors to the World's Fair, or who are contemplating a visit thereto, and who may be interested in trying some of the town's many favorite restaurants, we set down herewith the names and descriptions of some Far Eastern dishes.

New York has considerable numbers of Turkish, Armenian and East Indian restaurants, for example, but the average exhibitor has not the faintest idea of what to order. Since the waiter's English is likely to be very sketchy, the customary method is to select and point, then hope for the best, and the best that comes is not always the best.

East Indian dishes are characterized chiefly by their seasoning of curry. Lamb, shrimp, chicken, eggs (Indians do not serve beef or pork), are made hot with that inevitable spice. Some of the names are in English; others appear as Kabab, meat balls of lamb; Giri Giri, chicken giblets; Bombay Duck, a small dried fish, toasted and served with rice and curry; Chichuri, fried rice with green peas. A Parsee-Bombay restaurant (there are said to be only two Parsees in New York, and very proud and haughty they are) features "Indian Tiffin," a "Bengal Dinner," and a "Bombay Supper." Appearing on the menu are Badami, a soup with almonds, cocoanut, etc.; Tukari, Indian vegetables; Copra, fried cocoanut; Dhal, Indian lentils; Pappadum, Indian bean wafers; Kachoomber, an Indian salad; Akouri, a tomato omelette; Kroepoek, a delicacy of Java.

Some Indian desserts are Jalabe, a pastry soaked with honey; Haluwa, a rice pudding with nuts, raisins and spices; Hindu Honey Cake, pastry filled with nuts and honey. Rose Petal Coffee is a black Indian coffee served with preserved rose petals.

On Armenian and Turkish menus, the many variations of Kebab are all lamb in one form or another. Shish Kebab Domatessli is lamb, and fresh tomatoes broiled on skewers; Patlijan Cheop Kebab is lamb, egg plant and tomatoes, baked on skewers; Deuner Kebab is plain lamb, broiled over a charcoal fire; Khediviye Kebab is lamb pot roast with green peas and tomato sauce; Kehad Kebab is lamb wrapped in parchment paper and roasted; Tass Kebab is potted lamb with tomato sauce. Other lamb delicacies are Kouzou Boughoulama (steamed lamb); Bash Fouroun (baked lamb's head); Sham Kavourma (braised lamb with onions); Patlijan Silkme (braised lamb with egg plant).

Armenians have a weakness for stuffing things with rice, meat, pine nuts, currants, chopped onions, and the like. These dishes appear on the menu as Patlijan Dolma (stuffed egg plant); Midia Dolma (stuffed mussels); Yalanji Dolma (stuffed grape leaves); Domates Dolma (stuffed tomatoes); Kabak Dolma (stuffed Oriental squash); Tavouk Dolma (stuffed chicken). Pilaff is steamed rice and is served with most meat dishes.

Among the desserts are Ekmek Kadayiff, Armenian breadcake cooked in syrup and topped with Kaymak (concentrated cream); Paklava (otherwise spelled Baklava or Baklawa), that fabulous 40-layer pastry full of nuts and soaked with syrup or honey; rose petal jelly and Turkish coffee.

Ian C. Javal, of Baird Televsion, Ltd., now in this country preparing to introduce television in motion picture theatres, has received cabled advice from London that John L. Baird, president of the company, has developed a "Magic Eye" for use in airplanes and ships.

Airplanes, they say, will be able to see 50 to 100 miles in any direction depending on the height of the plane from the ground. The apparatus picks up the terrain and reflects it on an adjustable ground glass plate fitted in the dashboard of the plane where it can be seen by the pilot. The apparatus has undergone secret tests over London and is claimed to be successful. Because of its value in war time the apparatus is being closely guarded.

This same apparatus has also been tried out on boats and found to penetrate fog to a certain distance. This is hailed as a boon in the elimination of collisions.

Charles M. Hatch, head of the Hatch Advertising Company, has a daughter, and the other day she asked him what an asterisk was. An asterisk, he told her, is a symbol resembling a six-petalled daisy which is used by advertising copywriters.

Most copywriters use it, he explained, at a strategic point in an ad, as sort of a set rule, to make the reading of ads a game. It is supposed to keep the reader from being bored with the over-long selling descriptive copy which usually follows an asterisk. Instead, at the sign of the asterisk, the reader starts looking about the page for the line or so that is always set in the tiniest type. When he finds it, at long last, he is as proud as Barrymore with his fourth divorce.

Junior Programs, non-commercial enterprise providing theatrical fare for children in the U. S. and Canada, is urging its half-million juvenile members to join their "Joop" club.

The "Joop" club is named after a three-year-old reticulated giraffe brought over from East Africa by Frank Buck and endowed with the name of "Joop." It was christened the other day at the World's Fair.

"Joop," the Giraffe, was selected as mascot for the "Joop" clubs because a giraffe is supposed to be generously endowed with qualities of the perfect audience. The giraffe never utters a sound, is gentle and peaceable, mingling on easy terms with its own kind and other species; can go long periods without a drink, obviating the necessity of jostling neighbors to go out; has no difficulty seeing everything that goes on.

We recommend "Joop" clubs for some of those neighborhood movies where the kids go ranting and panding up and down the aisles.

AUSTRALIANS SEES TRADE PEACE IN NEW FILM EXHIBITORS COUNCIL

Board Will Cooperate with Gov. Commission to Achieve Harmony in Relations Between Showmen and Distributors

by LIN ENDEAN
in Sydney

With Leon S. Snider, co-managing director of the Snider and Dean major theatre circuit, who recently returned from a world-industry study, as a prime mover and with endorsement and membership including Greater Union Theatres and Hoyts Theatres as well as other circuit and independent exhibitor representatives, the Film Exhibitors Council of Australia has been formed. Its hopes are to operate as a constructive trade force, and, besides advancing the exhibitors' cause, to promote "complete cooperation and better understanding between film exhibiting and distributing interests; to assist in the regulation and resisting of any unfair trade practises, whether by exhibitor or distributor; to stabilize and protect investments in the industry, and to investigate and promote as well as develop such activities as are considered conducive to the interests of the exhibitors," and it also urges "the creation of better public entertainment."

Cooperating with N. S. W. Commission

Broadly, the foregoing were also the objects of the recently disbanded Flm Board of Trade, embracing both distributor and exhibitor membership, and the new organization declares that, with a solely exhibitor representation, it can achieve what the Board failed to bring about. That is eloquently evidenced by the claim that "the new move is the most constructive yet made in Australia to provide a medium for cooperation and settlement on trade differences," as the statement continues.

Significant also, is the revelation that the organization will cooperate closely with the N. S. W. Theatres and Films Commission (the government body controlling the operation of various industry practises) in its aims to compel a harmonious equity within the motion picture ranks.

As the arrangement has been handled wholly by exhibitor forces, naturally distributors are simply looking on with interest, at the same time hoping that the Council develops into a power of general and not sectional, or biased, concern in its activities.

Equity the Chief Point

That it should be the easiest and most logical thing in the world for exhibitors and distributors, in this territory at least, to work in harmony for their common advancement, is a belief which Mr. Snider himself endorsed in discussing the new organization several months before the official announcement of establishment of the Council.

The one point to be decided is that of equity in transactions; exhibitors say they do not wish to exploit distributors, and vice versa, but each group figures there is sharpshooting by the other. Leaders of the two sections are frank in admitting that the disturbing elements are not solely confined to one side, and with the Council functioning as an authoritative voice of exhibitors, and as a disciplinary power to decide rights and wrongs on its side, distributors, through the Motion Picture Distributors Association, their official organization, will be able to get down to cases. There, they feel, lies the possibility of ironing out many problems without inviting outside forces to arbitrate and decide them.

Order Merging RCA Suits Is Affirmed

An order consolidating all stockholders' suit against Radio Corporation of America in the New York supreme court and appointing Abraham L. Pomerantz general counsel for stockholders was affirmed last week by the appellate division of the New York supreme court. The court, however, struck out a provision of the order which directed stockholders to employ Max D. Steuer as their trial counsel.

The suit, brought against RCA, its officers and directors, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and General Electric Company, includes in its complaint a charge that $80,000,000 of preferred stock was issued for $17,000,000.

Dismiss Stockholders' Suit

John W. Clancy, federal judge, this week in New York dismissed a stockholders' suit brought by Mannes Fuld and Norman Wolf against Loew's, Inc., and its officers and directors because of lack of jurisdiction. The plaintiff, who consented to the dismissal, announced that they would file a new suit in the New York supreme court.

Optical Corporation Suit

A suit was filed this week in New York supreme court for an injunction, an accounting and damages, by Optical Development Corporation, manufacturer of "monotone viewing filter," against Burleigh Brooks, Inc. A temporary injunction pending trial is also sought.

Indianapolis Case Award

Howard M. Goldin and P. A. DeCenzie won a case in civil court in Indianapolis, Ind., from S. S. Millard on June 6th over the rights of a film "Body Beautiful." Judgment of $400 and a return of a print of the film was awarded the defendants Goldin and DeCenzie. Further suit of $5,000 is being sought against the Justice of the Peace who served the court order of seizure of the film while it was playing at an Indianapolis theatre, and the judge who signed the order as it was not, it is claimed, in accordance with the law. Mr. Millard was charged with mutilating the film.

Stone Library Sues

Charging loss of negatives and master positives of 10 films, Stone Film Library filed suit in New York supreme court this week for $52,400 damages against the DeLuxe Laboratories, Inc. The negatives were destroyed by fire in 1937.

Milton Herbert Gropper has filed suit in New York against Warner Brothers charging plagiarism of his play "Ex-Racketeer" in the film "Alcatraz Prison."

Paramount Takes Jack Benny Home To Waukegan, Ill.

They gave the keys of Waukegan, Illinois, on Sunday, to Jack Benny, Paramount star of the screen and Jello star of the air, and Benny used them to open a floodgate of festival and fun as rollicking as the town on the north shore of Lake Michigan ever has known. (Picture on page 10.)

"They" were the City Fathers, the boyhood pals of Benny, who draped the place in multicolored banners and bunting to observe Jack's homecoming and the first public showing of Paramount's new Jack Benny motion picture, "Man About Town."

It was like New Year Eve, "Big Game Day" and the Fourth of July all rolled into one for nearly 150,000 locals and visitors from Lake County and northern Illinois, who went there to participate and see the film and radio stars who attended Benny—Dorothy Lamour, the "Sarong-girl," Andy Devine, Mary (Mrs. Jack Benny) Livingston, Phil Harris and "His Gang," Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, Gertrude Niesen, Tony Martin. It was a large slice of Hollywood for Waukegan.

The premiere of "Man About Town" at the Genessee theatre was the climax of five days of celebration. The mobs on the last day stormed the Main Street to see the celebrities parade.

Sunday night they witnessed an opening a la Hollywood. They saw, too, one of their first national broadcasts—Benny's Jello Hour, sent direct from the stage of the theatre.

Master of ceremonies was Mancel Talcot, Mayor of Waukegan.

Paramount and General Foods, Benny's sponsor, and part-sponsor of the Waukegan event, at the last minute had to get two other houses for simultaneous openings, at the Academy and the Rialto, with the broadcast, going out from the Genessee, hooking into the other two theatres by direct wire. The Academy and Rialto ran continuously to four in the morning.

U. S. soldiers from Fort Sheridan, U. S. sailors from Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Illinois motorcycle police, Boy Scouts and an augmented local police force, added to the color, to keep order—estimates placing the added policing at 2,337—in a town with a normal population of 30,000.

Some 250 newspaper men and women and radio writers were on hand. Local merchants estimated that the influx of more than 100,000 persons spent $200,000 during the five days. RKO, Paramount, General Foods and others spent $125,000 to put on the show.

Cliff Lewis, Paramount studio publicity director, was in charge of the Waukegan celebration, assisted by Carl Krueger and Terry de Lapp, also of the studio.

First civic duty Benny performed after the welcoming ceremonies was planting the Fred Allen cactus tree directly in front of the City Hall building. The cactus, which Benny claims resembles Allen, now rests side by side with the elm tree Allen dedicated to Benny in 1937.

Benny drove about the streets of Waukegan in his Maxwell 1912 sport racing model which sometimes attained a speed of 12 miles per hour. He had a motorcycle police escort.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Pleased two small audiences. Played May 31-June 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

NORTH OF THE YUKON: Charles Starrett, Linda Winters—A wonderful out-of-doors drama that had very good photography. Plenty of action and enough music to make it enjoyable. Running time, 64 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Thomas Mitchell, Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Richard Barthelmess, Rita Hayworth—Here's one to really sink your teeth into for all you've got in promotion. Will back up anything you say about it. Don't undersell. Mitchell's pie all the way. Grant and Arthur swell as usual; should say Grant's best yet. Barthelmess should deserve a new line to sign; and send Rita here to me! Played solid week on two holdovers. And don't forget Hawks means bucks out front for a 100 per cent job. Running time, 121 minutes. Played June 11-17.—C. A. Skelly, New Arcade Theatre, Newark, Ohio. General patronage.

First National

CODE OF THE SECRET SERVICE: Ronald Reagan, Rosella Towne—Counterfeiters working out of Mexico with the U. S. agents tracking them down. Action lovers will go for this one. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 4.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edw. G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—A very good propaganda message that is being well received by our audiences. Something entirely different from anything we have ever shown but we feel that it is being taken very well. Were afraid of it but took courage and are not disappointed. A picture that every one should show his public and let them decide for themselves. Running time, 102 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, REPORTER: Bonita Granville, John Litel—Good comedy mystery. This little lady is getting better in every picture. John Litel good, as usual. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T GET AWAY WITH MURDER: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page—A very good production but heaven save us from this avalanche of crime dramas. The audiences are all crying "Help." As a result of this crime theme our box office is suffering a great deal. A wonderful picture that was not appreciated by our audiences. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Grand National

LONG SHOT: Gordon Jones, Marsha Hunt—A horse racing drama with a refreshing plot. While racing dramas have to follow certain formulas, this has enough originality to strike a new note. It is much better than many of the major "B" pictures. This was doubled with "Always in Trouble."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—Very, very good. Holds 1939 box office record for me so far.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BROADWAY SERENADE: Jeanette MacDonald, Lew Ayres, Frank Morgan—Excellent. Good story and fine cast. Lew Ayres gives a fine performance while Frank Morgan is, as usual, tops. The old time night club was especially good. The Busby Berkeley dance ensemble was very good, although it was anything but beautiful. Running time, 113 minutes. Played June 2-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey—Entertaining programer. Good action and you need not be afraid of it. It will please generally. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lana Turner, Laraine Day—The second of the series held up in quality, but not at the box office. The two girls mentioned, Miss Day and Miss Turner, did nice work in their small bits.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres—Good. Entertains all the way. Everyone pleased, even McPhee, and that's all the guarantee you need. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker—Good picture, good business. Should please all and draw big in any spot. Played June 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Victor McLaglen, Lionel Barrymore—Nelson Eddy, supported by a cast that cost plenty, took the most disastrous nosedive at the box office of any picture of this year of supposedly equal calibre. I think that Metro will find out that Eddy gets by only on his voice, and not his acting ability. In this case, he did not have Jeanette MacDonald to carry him along. Which goes to prove that he has not enough on the ball alone to head a cast. Another case of overmatching, as they did Lew Ayres in "Broadway Serenade."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LUCKY NIGHT: Myrna Loy, Robert Taylor—Foolish and silly. Pleased no one here or anywhere else and never will. Implausible story that couldn't and never will. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SHINING HOUR: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Melvyn Douglas—A star studded picture that has class. Played it one night only to make way for "Dodge City." Pleased the few who saw it. Played June 6. Running time, 76 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan—A perfect disappointment with a ridiculous story which you couldn't blame all our farmers for ridiculing. We are looking forward with great anticipation to such hits as "The Great Waltz," "Marie Antoinette" and "Idiot's Delight." By the time these are played we hope Metro will at least send us flowers, as this exhibitor expects to be confined to his bed from not being able to take it. Many small town exhibitors, I believe, would willingly contribute to a pension fund for Garbo, Joan Crawford and Luise Rainer rather than play them.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Paramount

ARKANSAS TRAVELER, THE: Bob Burns, Fay Bainter, Jean Parker—Did good business and pleased. Would like to see Paramount make another with same stars and with continuance of same story.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN: Patricia Ellis, Wallace Ford—I never, never, have run a worse picture than this one, and only due to the fact that I could not fill my date was it run. And how Paramount shouted about it. They seem to have lost all sense of value as to what makes an audience picture. It has been so all through the season.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—Just an ordinary program picture not suited to small towns. I would have done better with a western. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 10-11.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, No. Dakota. Small town and rural patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Donald Woods, Evelyn Venable—Good picture, good business. Played June 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—You just wonder where the brains are in the producing end, when you run this one, and you'll figure there are none.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY, THE: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Just a run of the mill program picture. It starts all right, bogs down in the middle and finishes the trite way that you expect: the hard-boiled Raft coming around to see eye to eye with the lady that owns the horse, with the usual happy ending. I see the producers made plenty of jack. They had better spend a little of it on product, and then perhaps the exhibitor can gather a little in. I have taken a beating on more poor pictures this season than in any time of my experience. You got to fill your dates, but if that trade practice comes through with 20 per cent cancellation, I for one will pick up two more contracts and use the cancellations. And, believe me, I'll watch the previews, and if I get the duds, then that will be my fault.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—Good comedy suitable in any spot. Martha Raye much better than she used to be. Running time, 85 minutes. —P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross—Here is one of the best box office stars if they would only give him stories to work with. Why not give him some stories on the order of "Rhythm on the Range." That was the best picture he ever made. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 3-4.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, No. Dak. Small town and rural patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff—Average weekend business. If they like Bing they will enjoy this one. Akim Tamiroff supplies plenty of laughs. Nice comment throughout. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 28-29.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—An ordinary programmer that the crime fans will enjoy. Nothing sensational, but steady entertainment. Played May 30. Running time, 70 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour —Below average Sunday business. Title should sell better. Not much comment either way. Just another picture. Running time, 87 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour —This is a little better than the average picture and will do some extra business. Running time, 90 minutes.—H. M. Berger, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, No. Dak. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—You can always depend on the combination of Gene and Smiley to please your audience and this one in particular will not fail. With Gene's good singing and plenty of laughs from Smiley, turned out to be one of their best. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis—This is a repeat showing and easily one of the best Autry has made for some time. A wow.—Geo. Khatter, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

ROUGH RIDERS ROUND-UP: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Did four times as much business in two days as we did on "Sweethearts," which we played four days.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can. General patronage.

ROUGH RIDERS' ROUND-UP: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Raymond Hatton—This boy is a "comer" and the more I see of him the better I like him. Raymond Hatton draws well with us. These Rogers pictures belong in the top class of the westerns for us country folks. Running time, 56 minutes. Played June 2-3.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

FLYING IRISHMAN: Douglas Corrigan, Paul Kelly, Robert Armstrong—Patrons went the "wrong way" on this one. Corrigan an aviator but strictly not an actor. A picture that's just a picture and that's all. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 4-5.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—This may be a great production but it was just another loss to me. My customers just don't appreciate these historical pictures and show it by staying away. They say it cost two and one-half million dollars to make this. In my opinion two million dollars of it was wasted as they could have made a more entertaining picture for the half million. Played May 27-28.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, No. Dak. Small town and rural patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Very good picture that failed to draw. I guess the title was the fault of that. Running time, 116 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer, Lee Bowman—Not quite up to Dunne's standard but a swell picture. Boyer no draw here. We can't get 'em in on high class stuff like this. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 30-June 1.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers—The office boy must have cooked this up while the rest were out to lunch. It was all padded out two-reel slapstick comedy material without any rhyme or reason as to logical plot material. A few stories like that for Jane Withers will surely kill the drawing power of this popular star. We had a real cool Sunday, so naturally business on this was fair.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—News cameramen attempting to solve the mystery behind Arabs revolting against the French furnishes a number of thrills and laughs in good form. Good for weekends. Running time, 59 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—I will add my mite of praise to his and say that it deserves all the nice things said about it. Some kind of Academy Award is most certainly deserving for the work of Walter Brennan in this. And now to get off my chest my pet peeve; killing a lovable character when there is no need of it. Why could they not have allowed Walter Brennan to enjoy his triumph, winning the Kentucky Derby? True, he would object to Richard Greene marrying Loretta Young, but would he not be willing to forgive anything to the one who won for him the Kentucky Derby? On two of Zanuck's epics, "Suez," and this, he ends it up with funerals for the most beloved characters. Business on this slightly above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ROAD DEMON: Henry Arthur, Joan Valerie—Good to the smallest Saturday night business in our history. Played May 27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—They tried to make this a world beater but as box office at this theatre it fell with a dull thud. The early part of the picture is draggy. The big scenes, building the canal, and the storm scene, they are gigantic, but why did they have to kill Annabella? A lovelier character is seldom pictured. It is true that the storm killed many, but many others were left alive. Her death was not needed to clear up a triangle. They also gave full details such as lowering her into the grave, a nice entertaining morsel. Could Annabella's death have anything to do with the lack of drawing power in this, I wonder?—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Adolphe Menjou, Jack Oakie, Jack Haley, Binnie Barnes—Gave satisfaction to very small audience. Played May 24-25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon—This one has about everything from night clubs to rodeos and Palm Beach mansions to Montana ranch houses. Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon are very good, with a supporting cast that includes Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd and Emma Dunn, while Henry Davenport almost steals the show. This one seemed to please them all. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 9-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey—Hollywood don't make them any better. From every standpoint it measures up as a big production. It gradually builds up to terrific suspense and climax. Raymond Massey is outstanding as the cruel plotter. Color, sound and production values are of the best. The trailer on this with India scenes and parts of the picture might keep some away. I would suggest to leave trailer out and get behind it in other ways. Business on this was fair for the time of the year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—This picture fell short of what was expected of it. There was not enough action. Deals with sports and romance, and does not give enough of the other side of West Point. Public in general was disappointed. Running time, 104 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Haywood, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Grand picture. Stand alone in any spot large or small. One of the best of this kind ever produced, and McPhee knows for he has run them all. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel—Good program picture. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel—Very fine picture. Menjou excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart—Some liked it, and some didn't. Not a picture for children. Personally, I thought it was a good picture. Played June 9-11.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier—Entertaining but we did nothing with it. Life at its very worst, hard, cruel, lacks the entertaining qualities which my patrons demand for a hit. One of those well acted pictures, that's all. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Universal

GAMBLING SHIP: Robert Wilcox, Helen Mack—Pretty good if used on a double bill. Running time, 67 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HIS EXCITING NIGHT: Charles Ruggles, Ona Munson—Fairly good comedy to very ordinary business. We never have played to such small audiences as we have since early January. Played June 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LAST WARNING, THE: Preston Foster, Frank Jenks—Good mystery drama. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

SWING, SISTER, SWING: Ken Murray, Johnny Downs, Eddie Quillan—Better than average program calibre dealing with the jitterbug craze, but not too much of it. A real pleasing picture. I was glad to see Eddie Quillan back and hope to see him more often. This was doubled with "Drums."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

"PUTTING IN HIS TWO CENTS WORTH"

This—my first contribution to this Department—is prompted not only by a swell picture, but by a genuine desire to put in my two cents to help a real outfit—Columbia. So I will greatly appreciate your printing this in the first possible issue.—C. A. SKELLY, New Arcade Theatre, Newark, Ohio.

Warner Brothers

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter—Double billed this and it pleased.—Geo. Khatter, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan—Yeah, boy, this is it, Vitagraph's contribution to the saga of the West and what a saga it is. Outclasses "Union Pacific" a mile, and then some. Percentage, of course, but what of that? I gladly send them their end, to have once more a satisfied audience. It is rough and rowdy, but from the business this picture did, that seems to be what they want for a change. Further, Vitagraph has shown more improvement in their product this season than I expected. Alan Hale to the fore again; swell performance as Errol's stooge.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan—Played this four days in town population 600. Picked up every day. Comment from clients 100% satisfactory. A natural for top coin in any spot. Running time, 104 minutes. Played, June 7-8-9-10.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Kay Francis, Humphrey Bogart—Another smash and one that can't help but do your box office some good. By all means get your hands on those great pictures of Warners. Played, June 12-13.—Geo. Khatter, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Very fine western. Warners, what about a sequel, "The Oklahoma Kid Returns," on new product, with Cagney?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PUBLIC WEDDING: Jane Wyman, William Hopper—A dandy. Warners should have given this a better title and it would have drawn double the crowds that came to see it. Played, June 7-8.—Geo. Khatter, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, May Robson—Another Warner hit. A swell comedy that pleased and did well at the box office. Running time, 86 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 10: The Basil Rathbone's charity ball that brought out all of Hollywood's illustrious makes this an outstanding short. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: Three Stooges—Three Stooges, enough said, and they all laughed. What else do you want from a comedy? Good. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Educational

FEMININE FORM: Very poor print. Poorest short subject that I have received from any company.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CLOWN PRINCES: Our Gang—The best of this always good series. "Alfalfa" sings in this one, so everyone was pleased. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Average Travel Talk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NEW REPORTERS FROM OHIO AND CALIFORNIA

New contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" include C. A. SKELLY, New Arcade Theatre, Newark, Ohio, and JAMES RUDDY, Riviera Theatre, Los Angeles.

Read the reports of these showmen on product exhibited in their theatres.

JITTERBUG FOLLIES: Cartoon—The best that Metro has given us in a long time. Very good. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GOLDFISH, THE: Cartoons—Excellent cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RURAL HUNGARY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another beautiful and entertaining Travel Talk. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—Very beautiful indeed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can. General patronage.

WHILE AMERICA SLEEPS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very good two-reeler from the Crime Doesn't Pay Series.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHILE AMERICA SLEEPS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A very timely and interesting short. My patrons are beginning to ask when I will show another of these shorts. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

GOOD SKATES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Good skating reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 4—Average science reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HELLO MAMA: George Jessel—Poor entertainment except the hill-billy number. Pass it up. The man at the phone just terrible.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: Outstanding reel of the Coast Guard work for Uncle Sam. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FROZEN FEET: Terry-Toons—Average Terry-Toon cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAKS ENGLISH: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Good reel in spite of its age. I am going to play more of them as my people like Bergen and "McCarthy."—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ARTIE SHAW AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Not so good; too jazzy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MINUTE FROM DEATH, A: True Adventure—When we show a Gibbons the audience applauds. Something that does not happen on other reels of shorts. This one is very good. Plenty of suspense and drama. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RUSS MORGAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Master—Smooth, plenty smooth and enjoyed by all. Not so much jazz. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOPHOMORE SWING: Broadway Brevities—Do not muff this one as it is a knockout. Very good. Plenty of talent and the finale by the Harvest Moon dancers is excellent. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THUGS WITH DIRTY MUGS: Merrie Melody—One of the best cartoons ever screened. If there ever was one to beat it we failed to see it.—Geo. Khatter, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

Seek Goldwyn Suit Dismissal Again

Dismissal of the breach of contract suit brought by Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., was again asked by United Artists Corporation, defendant, this week in the United States district court in Wilmington, Del., with former Senator George Wharton Pepper and Robert H. Richards, attorneys for the defendant corporation, filing briefs in answer to the Goldwyn reply to the previous United Artists motion for a dismissal.

The defense contention had been that the complaint must be dismissed because of the failure of Goldwyn to include Alexander Korda, London Film Productions, Ltd., Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., or the Elton Corporation as defendants in the action, to which the plaintiffs replied that none of these is an indispensable party to the action.

In the reply filed this week United Artists points out that at page 12 of plaintiffs supplemental memorandum defendant is charged with "tortured interpretation" of paragraph 39 of the complaint. United Artists claimed the charge was not justified.

UA contends that this is a case in which individuals (Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.) who are strangers to the distribution contract between the defendant and Mr. Korda, and to the distribution contract between the defendant and Mr. Fairbanks, are seeking construction of those contracts as between the parties thereto.

Claim Holders File Appeal in Fox Case

Appeals have been filed in Atlantic City with Allen B. Endicott, Jr., federal referee in bankruptcy, by the United States Government, Chicago Title and Trust Company and the Capital Trust Company, holders of claims running into millions of dollars against William Fox. The appeals are against the order for a compromise in the suit for recapture of assets of the All-Continental Corporation, owned by Mrs. Fox and two daughters.

The order signed June 15th by Mr. Endicott directed Hiram W. Steelman, trustee for the bankrupt Fox estate, to drop recapture suit in exchange for $600,000 offered by Mrs. Fox and her daughters.

Court Weighs Suit

Harry A. Hollzer, United States district court judge in Los Angeles, this week took under advisement and reserved judgment the suit of Joan Storm against the National Broadcasting Company, Mae West and others charging the use of plagiarized material on the "Adam and Eve" broadcast on the Chase and Sanborn program which caused such a stir in December, 1937. NBC officials testified that Mae West, who did not appear in court, received $4,000 for appearing on the program and that NBC profit from sale of the time consumed by the skit was $122.50.

Uphold Fox Decision

The circuit court of appeals this week unanimously sustained a ruling of former Judge Martin T. Manton in the Fox Theatres Corporation receivership, denying the right to the Trust Company of Georgia to treat its claim of $400,000 against Fox Theatres as preferred and relegated it to the status of a general creditor. The Trust Company originally filed claim of $1,012,333, reduced to $400,000 against Fox Theatres for damages caused by the cancellation of leases on Atlanta theatre properties.

ASCAP Radio Suit Action in Montana

A temporary injunction restraining the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System from collecting the five per cent fee from any of Montana's seven radio stations was granted this week in Missoula by Ralph L. Arnold, district judge. He set July 12th for hearing on a permanent restraining order.

Edward T. Dussault, county attorney, charged in the complaint that ASCAP was a "monopolistic combination of publishing houses."

Paramount Files Answer To Stockholders' Action

Paramount was to have filed its anwer this week to a stockholders' suit brought in federal court in New York by Frank Jablow and Sam Acker. The $25,000,000 suit charges waste and mismanagement. Application of the company to dismiss the suit for lack of jurisdiction has been withdrawn.

OBITUARIES

Ben Berinstein, 53, Dies in Los Angeles

Ben N. Berinstein, 53, exhibitor of Southern California, died in Los Angeles June 22nd. Mr. Berinstein, who was born in Russia and went to Los Angeles 25 years ago, was a former president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California before its affiliation with the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California. Surviving are his widow, a daughter, son, two brothers and three sisters. Funeral services were held at the Home of Peace Mausoleum Chapel in Los Angeles.

Miles Gibbons Dies; With Paramount News

Miles F. Gibbons, associated with the Paramount newsreel for the last 12 years, died June 21st at St. Luke's Hospital in New York. Mr. Gibbons was born in Pittston, Pa., in 1882. Prior to joining Paramount he was with Pathe. He joined Paramount News as a sales assistant in April, 1927. Funeral services were held from the family home at 409 Fowler Avenue, Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Saint Catherine's Chapel there.

John Medland Dies

John Medland, 58, scenic artist who designed the sets for John Gilbert's first picture, and for "The Connecticut Yankee," died June 25th in a Denver hospital of injuries received in a fall.

Peter Cella

Peter Cella, co-owner of Cella's Park Hotel in Fort Lee, N. J., which was the rendezvous of Mary Pickford, John Bunny, Broncho Billy Anderson, Clara Kimball Young and other stars of the era when Fort Lee was the motion picture center of the east, died June 23rd in Englewood, N. J., hospital of a heart ailment.

Examination Before Trial Sought in "Lincoln" Suit

Examination before trial of Darryl F. Zanuck and Charles E. McCarthy will be asked by Robert E. Sherwood and the Playwrights Producing Company, Inc., plaintiffs, in the suit seeking an injunction to halt the showing of the Twentieth Century-Fox film "Young Mr. Lincoln," according to notice filed Friday in New York supreme court.

Mr. Zanuck and Mr. McCarthy will be questioned on the good-will and publicity of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" on the claim that there was no demand for a picture about the young Lincoln before the play had created it; that the defendant had the book "Young Lawyer of the West" for a long period without producing a picture, and figures on what "Young Mr. Lincoln" has grossed.

Order Amended Complaint

Rae Nasoff, plaintiff in a stockholder's suit against Paramount Pictures Corporation, was directed this week in New York supreme court to serve and file an amended complaint after Judge Lloyd Church ruled her previous complaint repetitious. An accounting and appointment of a receiver is sought on charges of waste and mismanagement.

Appeal Is Sought

Application by Abraham I. Kindler and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, in the case of Joseph Kimmel versus the defendants, in the appellate division of the New York supreme court for an appeal to the court of appeals. Mr. Kimmel is suing the defendants for $25,000 damages for false arrest and malicious prosecution.

BRITISH TRADE CELEBRATES VICTORY IN CAMPAIGN TO MODIFY NEW TAXES

Removal of Excise Levy from Budget Comes Within Hours After Protest Is Launched; Import Tax Increase Remains

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Relaxing from the tension induced by weeks of vigorous and unprecedented protest the British industry this week contemplated the fact that, with one exception, the tax situation remains as it was before the introduction by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, of the drastic increases in excise and import duties in his budget. The single exception is the import duty which has been increased to five pence per linear foot in first copies of all films, and one penny per foot on all subsequent copies. The former duty was two pence per linear foot for all copies.

No Protest Seen

The increase is expected to be accepted without protest by American interests, which are particularly concerned. It is anticipated that the former system of importing lavender prints will be abandoned and that negatives only will be imported, with consequent economies in printing and improved technical results.

Under the previous system American companies sent to England usually three copies of a film to handle the trade show requirements. Two copies were used for London trade shows and one for trade shows in other cities. Negatives were then made from the lavender prints and release prints followed. Lavenders are duplicating prints from which satisfactory negatives can be made.

Under the new method, necessitated by the new import duties, a negative will be sent, and all necessary prints, for trade shows and regular release, will be struck from that in England. Thus, the five pence per foot duty is paid on the negative or first copy, and no other import duty is required.

Nearly all major American companies are establishing laboratory facilities in England which are the equal of those available in the United States.

It is expected that the House of Commons will accept the Simon amendments which modified the original drastic film taxes.

Sir John on Wednesday introduced in the House of Commons amendments reducing the tax on imported newsreels to one penny per linear foot, as anticipated.

Public Protest Staged

The capitulation of the Government on the tax matter followed by only a few hours the launching of a united and vigorous protest campaign by the industry. The united front was achieved at a representative trade meeting where D. E. Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters' Society, appealed earnestly and long for joint and forceful action. At that meeting it was decided to appeal to the public through the press and the screen and directly to members of Parliament.

The next day trailers, made with the cooperation of the trailer manufacturers were on the screens of London. Within 36 hours every cinema in the country told its patrons through the screen what the tax meant to them, that they would get shorter shows and less films for their money, that their fellow workers throughout the industry would suffer unemployment. Nearly two dozen leading newspapers carried large advertisements on similar lines. Members of Parliament from all constituencies had been enlightened on what the tax meant to the British industry and to the British public in general.

Next day the Commons committee considering the budget received the necessary Government amendments repealing the proposed duties and they were approved almost immediately.

CEA Scores Bank Night

The opening of the annual summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at Blackpool this week was featured by a heated discussion of Bank Night. The council characterized chance games as undesirable and a committee was named to study their extent and the possibility of curbing them. A. W. Jaratt, Gaumont executive, defended the use of the games but said his circuit would drop them if it could be assured that the CEA could bind its members not to use them.

Canadian Dividends

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has declared a dividend of 25 cents for the second quarter of 1939 on the common stock, payable June 30. Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., of Toronto, has declared a dividend of three and one half per cent on the seven per cent preference shares for the six months ending December 31, 1936.

Stuart Lake Signed

Lichtig and Englander, motion picture and literary representatives, have signed Stuart N. Lake, Saturday Evening Post author and writer of "Frontier Marshal" and "Wells Fargo," to an exclusive agency contract.

MGM HAS "WORLD'S FAIR SERVICE"

A Loew-M-G-M World's Fair Information Centre, located in the "island" at 46th street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, was formally opened to the public and dedicated to the interests of World's Fair visitors Wednesday noon, with celebrities of stage, screen and radio present. Loew-MGM thus became the fourth film company to open a "World's Fair" service near headquarters in New York, following RKO, Warners, Paramount.

Designed to render a service to all visitors, film and others, to the city during the World's Fair, the Centre will answer queries relating to New York and the Fair. For visitors from foreign countries, attendants will be present speaking French, Spanish, German, Italian and Russian.

The Centre will be open from eight A.M. until midnight, seven days a week. The Centre will also cooperate with the police department on a campaign for traffic safety.

Giveaways and Chance Games Losing Ground

Giveaways and bank nights lost ground this week, as New York theatre operators voted to eliminate giveaways in certain of their theatres; while in Milwaukee, police took action against theatres playing Cash Night, following a recent decision of the State Supreme Court which declared Bank Night a lottery.

Beginning July 3rd, a number of theatres in the midtown section of Manhattan plan to eliminate giveaways of all kinds. The agreement, negotiated through the offices of the Independent Theatre Owners of America, will be followed by Loew's, RKO, Brandt, Consolidated Amusement, Yoost and other circuits.

Covered in the agreement are the areas from West 34th to West 72nd Streets, and from East 34th to East 59th Street. If the experiment works, the areas may be extended.

Attending the meetings were C. C. Moskowitz of Loew's, John O'Connor of RKO, Harry Brandt, and Laurence Bolognino, among others.

However, J. L. Morse, head of the Premium Promotion Syndicate, of Brooklyn, has forecast an increasing growth in book premiums, with six theatres reported as using them in the New York area.

Although the Wisconsin Supreme Court ruled last week that Bank Night was a lottery and as such violated the state's criminal laws, Milwaukee police steered clear of houses playing Bank Night in confiscating equipment at four theatres using Cash Night and Hollywood.

Both the Fox and the Warner-Saxe circuits in Milwaukee have dropped Bank Night "pending a study of the Supreme Court's ruling."

At La Crosse, Wisconsin, Frank L. Koppelberger, general manager of the LaCrosse Theatres Company, against which action was taken by Circuit Judge Robert S. Cowie, resulting in the high court decision, said that Bank Night would be continued by the circuit until the lower court decides against it. The Supreme Court decision held that lower courts have the right to halt Bank Night as a public nuisance.

In a unique suit filed against a Troy, Ohio, theatre operator, a jury returned the verdict for the defendant, C. F. Pfister, head of the Troy Amusement Company. The suit against Mr. Pfister had been filed by A. J. Attenweiler, who asked judgment for $28 covering admissions at the Mayflower Theatre's Bank Night over a period of two years, plus $100 damages under the Ohio lottery law. The same plaintiff has also filed a criminal charge against Mr. Pfister, charging violation of the lottery law.

Assistant Attorney General Franklin E. Reagan of Jefferson City, Missouri, has handed down an opinion holding that a motion picture theatre contest in which the winner is selected by photographs is a lottery.

Ontario's Attorney General Gordon Conant has placed a proposal before the Federal Government of Canada asking the elimination of those sections of the Criminal Code which prohibit games of chance.

Oakland, California, police have raided the T and D Theatre for the running of an "80 Spot" game, which Police Chief Brodie Wallman termed a lottery.

HOWDY, PARD!

There's more to this business than meets the eye —

The NATIONAL SCREEN TRAILER running in advance of your show is the only medium of advertising that gives you that double selling-punch!

For, while newspapers, magazines and posters MAY be seen by your customers—how can you tell how many?

And, though radio advertising MAY be heard by your customers—how can you tell how many?

But — with NATIONAL SCREEN TRAILERS on your screen — you are CERTAIN that your customers SEE and HEAR your sales message.

You KNOW because they are inside your theatre, watching your screen. A 100% audience every time you run the trailer.

That's what makes NATIONAL SCREEN TRAILERS the cheapest, most effective, most consistent advertising you can buy!

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THAT'S SHOUTING

Few weeks back, this page was devoted to the painful necessity of "old-fashioned, ditch-digging sweat," in the pursuit of successful operation and personal advancement. And sure enough, comes a reply from one of the boys (he asks his name not be used) which reads "your editorial is most commendable but it is often not carried out in practice." With that is attached what the dissenter calls a more accurate screen. Headed "Sez You," some of it goes like this:

"Unfortunately, today, most men are taken at face value, and consequently the man whose actions bespeak real ability and who obtains outstanding results, but who is unable or unwilling to shout from the housetops what a wonderful fellow he is, too often is left in a subordinate position while the loud-mouth gasbag steps forward without a backward glance and rides to glory on the ability of others or on his dexterity in fooling his boss."

Well, we don't suppose there is any great trick in fooling the boss for a limited time. The reason is that so many bossmen are very decent about leaning over backwards in giving a manager every reasonable benefit of the doubt. But even bosses who believe in Santa Claus sooner or later spot the "gasbags", who eventually wind up where they belong. That's an observation, ours and others, based upon experiences over a long stretch of years.

Neither is there any wholesale proof that a manager is required to "shout from the house tops" to be recognized. Of course, if a man has the goods and wishes to indicate that he has, we don't think there is any harm in that. But it isn't a "must." This business being what it is, of necessity good men are pushed ahead. They just have to be. The supply of top manpower has never come up to the demand and it is gratifying to note how often the bossman does the "shouting" on behalf of his managers who deliver.

For instance, on a following page is detailed the work of Manager Harry Greenberg, of Minnesota Amusement's State, in Virginia, Minn., in originating a day of special screenings of "Huckleberry Finn" for rural school children. Through this Round Tabler's efforts, what was intended to be a series of theatre parties became a civic promotion in which the merchants' association, newspapers, city heads, cooperated to put over one of the most successful box office and merchandising events in the history of the Iron Range country. The campaign was reported here and warmly praised by Charles Winchell, circuit head. Following, came a letter from John J. Friedl, president, Minnesota Amusement Co., saying:

"It is my opinion that this sales campaign put over by Harry Greenberg was one of the most effective things that has been done on any picture in quite some time."

On this desk is a campaign telling about the reserved seat preview screening put on by Manager Ken Grimes, at the Warner, in Erie, Pa., for "Dark Victory." Grimes obtained permission to open the date in so unusual and signal a fashion by pledging a complete sell-out. With the assistance of the house staff which sold, in advance, 2185 of the theatre's 2586 capacity away from theatre, the house went clean, with hundreds of others clamoring to get in.

It was a heart-warming job in all respects, as attested by Joseph Bernhard, Warner Theatres general manager, Harry Goldberg, circuit ad head, Harry M. Kalmine, Pittsburgh zone chief, and C. J. Latta, assistant zone chief, in personal letters to the theatreman. Mr. Bernhard wrote, in part:

"I can't let the opportunity go by without personally congratulating you on the remarkable work you did. . . . Our company is proud of your managerial ability."

"Shouting from the house tops?" Yes, sir. But please note the folks doing the shouting.

NEVER HEARD OF THE WORD

It may be that the summer months act as a direct challenge to showmen in various parts. That might be a main reason for the unusual quality of exploitation displayed in campaigns currently reported to this department.

True, and for the best part, the boxoffice level of showmanship established by regular contributors maintains a pleasing consistency. But the way the members are tearing into it right now indicates that Round Tablers refuse to recognize any such opprobrious term as "summer slump".

Display above shows the evolution of firearms which made liberty possible shown through cooperation of Capt. Hennessy of the Toledo Police Department in advance of "Let Freedom Ring." Stunt was arranged by Round Tabler Wally Caldwell for the date at Loew's Valentine.

"Why leave Bridgeport to see the Fair? At the Majestic for 40 cents we give you the Fair and two features. Come up and see it sometime." Thus does Morris Rosenthal at the Majestic Theatre jestingly report on his lobby setpiece illustrated at right. The ball revolves and there is an actual miniature fountain working at all times. Color lights are flashed on and off from the background, and all in all it is an eye-compelling display.

When they were finished handing out diplomas at the recent solemn commencement exercises at Ohio State University, it was discovered there was an extra graduate. It developed he was one of Russ Bovim's able ballyhoo men from Loew's Ohio in Columbus who attired himself as young "Mr. Chips" and crashed the ranks of the Bachelors of Art. Lad unfurled scroll carrying greeting to the grads and picture copy. Reproduced above is but part of the hundreds of students and guests who attended the graduation exercises.

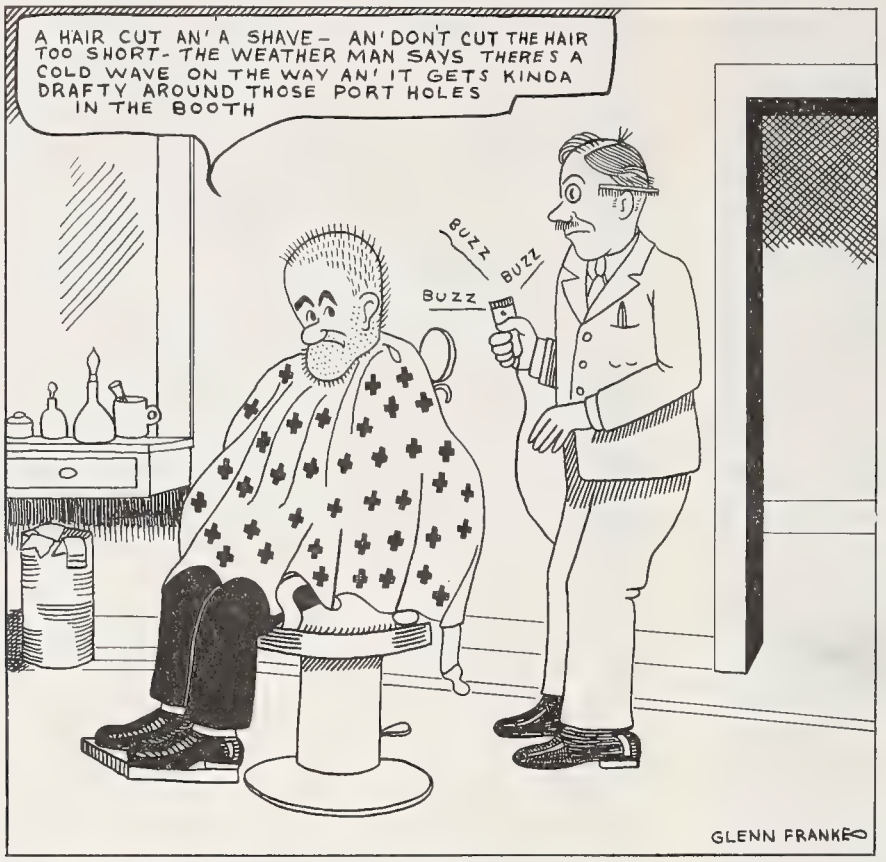
On the strength of the goodwill and advertising value of a lobby setup which would place before the public a definite picture of the value of telephone service, City Manager Sid Holland for his "Alexander Graham Bell" engagement at the Elco, Elkhart, Ind., secured cooperation of telephone company officials for lobby stunt shown at right. Girls operating from a specially prepared canvass telephoned subscribers. Cost to theatre was lettering of background display.



In order to arouse the interest of citizens of Prague in the day-and-date opening of "Too Hot To Handle" at the Blanik Svetozor Theatres, Alexander Lapiner of the MGM publicity department there created the street bally illustrated above. Planted securely on the bannered truck was a newsreel camera and tripod with giant cutouts of Gable and Loy supposedly shooting scenes.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Round Tabler Glenn Franke of Cheviot, Ohio, continues his series on the activities of the fictitious Oscar Oliver, projectionist at the Drofilm Theatre in the non-existent town of Beelerville.

Junior Lightman Works Contests on "Baskervilles"

Numerous contests highlighted the campaign put over by M. A. Lightman, Jr., for his "Hound of the Baskervilles" date at the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., one of which was for amateur detectives. Pictures were planted in cooperating newspaper, contestants invited to find out what was wrong with the pictures. To those discovering most errors, guest tickets were awarded. Second contest asked folks to draw the most horrible monster imaginable, with drawings posted on easel in front of theatres. Tickets were also awarded here, as they were to those submitting best essays on their most weird experiences.

Newspaper teasers week ahead, with progressively larger ads, carried such slogans as "beware the horror hound," "monster at large," etc., etc. Theatreman promoted free scene mats and four streamers across top of amusement pages in this connection. Outside promotion included advertising a free escort service of cheerful young men to escort nervous patrons home, announcements were made in schools, and monster footprints were stenciled all over town, tracks leading to the theatre.

"St. Louis Blues" Brings Local Blues Singer Contest

A blues singer contest was staged by Bob Fulton at the Paramount, Waterloo, Ia. to exploit his opening of "St. Louis Blues." Thirteen local girls entered the contest which was held at a special midnight show and played to a reported capacity house. $25 in cash was awarded as first, second and third prizes in addition to a radio audition over Station WMT. Stunt was played up in local newspapers in advance, followed up with winners' photos and story after contest.

For "Little Princess," Fulton got out a special newspaper broadside 5,000 of which were put out house-to-house by a licensed distributor. Cost of papers was taken care of by merchants' ads which were sold on back of the paper.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Subscribers Called On "Bell"

Local telephone company of Sac City, Iowa cooperated with Manager C. E. Mosher at the Casino Theatre by loaning ancient model instruments which were used for lobby display during run of "Alexander Graham Bell." Company also agreed to give a line ring to every rural phone subscriber day ahead of opening announcing the picture, star and playdates and also calling attention to the display in the lobby.

ROWE'S 16 MM SHOTS TIED TO SUB SINKING

During a vacation visit to the Isles of Shoals, prominent in the news recently because of the sinking of the submarine Squalas, Roy Rowe, operator of the Pender Theatre, Burgaw, N. C. had occasion to take some 16mm shots of the island and its surroundings. With the sinking of the Squalas Rowe dug up those clips for a special newsreel and advertised them as the first pictures from the scene of the tragedy.

Tully Trade-Card Market Tiein Nets Four-Month Deal

Now in the fifth week of operation and reported as mutually satisfactory for merchant and theatre is the "Trade Card-Movie Ticket Plan" devised by Manager Ralph L. Tully, Central, Biddeford, Me., to cover a four-month period including the summer season. Tiein made with two units of a super-market calls for distribution by merchant of a trade card representing $10 in sales. When a card is filled, it is good for an admission at the theatre, Tully receiving full admission rate from the market.

All clerks at both stores are entirely familiar with the plan and use the card to increase sales, each clerk equipped with punch for punching amount of sales on the border of the trade card, which is divided into sales units of five, ten, 25, 50 cents and one dollar. On face of card is space for name and address of customer with line for countersignature by manager of store. At the theatre, cashier accepts cards and notes in ink the amount of the admission. Cards are redeemed by the merchant every Saturday.

Stores Display Theatre Poster

To publicise the deal, one-sheet posters are planted in the store at meat counter, out front, in grocery department, and in windows. Each poster carries copy and stills of theatre current attraction, the store signman making up the cards at no cost to Tully. In the newspapers, the market ties in the theatre deal and pictures with a three-column spread across top of ads plugging weekend sales. Additional ad plugs are given in the store's layouts in rural weeklies. There is also an elaborate window display in the main store for the weekend devoted to theatre dates and details of plan. Window is backed by velour hangings and specially lighted. Store also stuffs theatre programs in all outgoing bundles.

Tully reports the merchant as enthusiastic over the plan since the returns so far indicate that whereas in former years patrons reluctant to come downtown in the summer heat to shop, were now buying at the market's units in the business area. If returns hold up as expected during the period of the promotion, store expects to continue the tiein through the fall.

Kid Club Works for Brien

Lige Brien of the Prince Theatre, in Ambridge, Pa., believes in having members of his kid club work for him and so recently he distributed wrapping paper on which his double feature for the following week's show were plugged. Kids were invited to fold the sheets into "fireman's hat" so that the ad showed clearly and wear them home. Thus did Brien get his message over to the parents.

On "Young Dr. Kildare," theatreman planted a jumble word contest in paper for which guest tickets were awarded. Word to be deciphered was "diagnostician" and judging from the reported number of replies stunt proved mighty successful.

Loewmen Blanket Harrisburg With 'Maisie' Campaign

The boom-boom campaign for "Maisie" at Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., was inaugurated by Sam Gilman with the aid of Jim Ashcraft, M-G-M exploiteer, with a three-week newspaper advance wherein the columnists, drama editors, etc., were overwhelmed with flowers, candy, arm-bands and other gag presents supposedly from Maisie, the gifts being acknowledged in print with plenty of laugh followups for the good of the date. Then, two days ahead, personals were planted in all the dailies, seeking information about Masie, known as an explosive blonde (the ad tie line) the personals asking that readers phone Slim, at the theatre number. Plenty of calls resulted and day ahead, there was an answering personal from Maisie asking Slim to meet her at the theatre on opening day.

Commencing with the first ad on Saturday before opening, the Telegraph started a contest asking readers to observe the ads in the series and forward opinions, for prizes, on the merits of the advertising in making people want to see the picture. Contest ran until after opening day. Drive was started by house staff, school children, and others contacted to make a citywide nickname of Maisie, and thousands of stickers lettered "Who is Maisie?" were planted in every available spot.

Leading Newsstands Promoted

For street attention, among the top stunts was tiein with 50 best situated newsstands, vendors supplied with sun helmets, brick-size weights and red wooden chairs with backs, all of this lettered with title. Also to attract attention were Western Union messengers carrying giant lettered posters with strips reading "Deliver to Loew's Theatre." Boys walked the main streets, rode busses and trolleys four hours daily. Girls were used also, six on bicycles, each with one letter of title on back, and six additional girls, in shorts, carried six-foot cutout letters in single file through the business section. Another female in western costume, shorts, sombrero, etc., rode about town.

Window display in main furniture store was utilized for another honey of a stunt. Furnished as bedroom, with blonde supposedly asleep in bed, alarm clock was placed alongside sleeper with poster introducing the girl as Maisie and inviting onlookers to guess the exact time she would awaken. Passes were given for nearest guesses.

Vocational School Aids

Tying up with the Jamaica Vocational High School, Manager Herb Righthand at the Little Neck Theatre, in Little Neck, N. Y., promoted attractive lobby display for "Wings of the Navy." Showcase, planted in conspicuous spot with tiein copy contained ship models identical with those used in the picture. Entire cost to theatre was time expended to call for and return the models.

Morgan Lands Jobs for Girls On Lobby Tiein with "Victory"

Tying up with the local News, Russell Morgan, of the Alabama Theatre, in Birmingham, Ala., inserted an ad in the help-wanted column reading "Stenographers, secretaries wanted: Trained, skillful girls who want work are asked to report to the lobby of the Alabama Theatre and file applications. They will be seen and interviewed by office managers and employees from Birmingham's largest firms and will have a chance to obtain permanent office work. Only girls capable of achieving their own 'Dark Victory' need apply.—Bette Davis."

The theatre placed desks and typewriters in the lobby and applicants for the jobs were stationed at the desks to take dictation from patrons who wished to express themselves about the picture and Bette Davis. Prospective employers were invited to watch the girls at work and test their efficiency for future jobs. In addition, passes were awarded to patrons who gave the best dictated reason why Bette Davis should win a third Academy Award for her performance.

In addition to the unusual publicity the stunt obtained, four of the girls obtained positions immediately with a number of others slated for the near future.

Americanism Programs Held by McCormack

Through the cooperation of the Frankford Morning Times, four free morning shows were given for children at the Roxy Theatre, Frankford, Indiana, and arranged for by Round Tabler W. Ray McCormack. These four shows were sponsored by a group of business firms and won much praise from the school teachers, PTA's and others interested in the welfare of the kiddies.

Planned to bring before the children four important subjects, 15 minute discussions were held on Americanism, safety, Boy Scouts and fire prevention, with leaders in each field presiding at the meetings. In addition to the talks, the children were given an hour and a half of pictures. Programs were covered generously by the paper with proper theatre credits.

FURTHER REPORTS ON FORTNIGHT WINNERS

As has been the regular policy of the 1939 Quigley Awards, and to set down in print the details of all winning entries in each Fortnight period, as soon after selection as possible, below are explained the exploitations of other winners in the last judging which were not published in last week's issue.

Entries among the winners in last week's listing, and not detailed last week or this, have been written up in previous issues.

Murch Calls Attention to "Honolulu" With Mimeograph Stunt in Lobby

Promoting a mimeograph from his local dealer, usher was stationed in lobby by A. S. Murch to run off a stencil carrying "Honolulu" advertising, copies of which were distributed to patrons leaving the North Shore Theatre, in Gloucester, Mass. Theatreman reports this as particularly effective and it provided him with a novel way to procure an inexpensive herald. Automobile stickers with tiein copy were used on all cars a week ahead, numerous music store tieups were made, shops using the song hit covers provided them as well as theatre name and playdates.

Planted in a conspicuous spot directly over drivers' seats in busses were 13 by 26 cards selling the attraction. Entire staff wore paper leis two weeks ahead, various soda fountains and drug stores on the main street featured Honolulu Pineapple sodas and special posters were provided for the stores with theatre name and dates imprinted.

Bodoin Promotes Local Chamber To Stage Contest at Theatre

Getting aboard the publicity bandwagon as a result of the annual National Cotton Week celebration, Manager Rex Bodoin through the cooperation of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce arranged for the amateur and bathing beauty contests to be held on the stage of the Waco Theatre, in Waco, Texas. The selection of the young women entrants was made from his house at which time Miss Waco for 1939 was chosen to be crowned Cotton Queen. Local newspapers came through with abundant coverage, photographers coming to the theatre for shots of the event for their papers.

Hedding Revives Rooney Features For Special Double-Feature Show

Booking two old Mickey Rooney pictures, "You're Only Young Once" and "Family Affair," Manager Al Hedding, Uptown, in Indianapolis, advertised them as "Mickey Rooney's Double-Dip Party." Special advance trailer was made in which the entire continuity was in the form of a personal invitation from Mickey inviting the patrons to his surprise party showing himself, his family and sweethearts in two features he considered his best. The trailer, animated, brought out the highlights of his early efforts in his big features.

Theatreman sent postcards out over the signature of the star inviting patrons to the party, using the surprise angle and stressing the lines re-live, re-see, re-turn, etc., of Rooney's two best yesterday-hits. Picking up an old Columbia short in which Mickey is the star, the Round Tabler put it on as an added featurette and reports the whole event as boxoffice.

Graefe Stages Roller Skate Derby For Buildup on "Ice Follies" Date

Much goodwill and publicity was garnered for "Ice Follies" through the medium of a Roller Skating Derby staged by Herbert Graefe recently at the Badger Theatre, in Merrill, Wis. Children from five to 11 were eligible to enter, race starting from local high school and winding up in front of theatre. Through cooperation of chief of police, the route was cleared of traffic, police on hand to aid in handling the crowds.

Winner received a silver loving cup autographed by Joan Crawford and James Stewart, stars of the picture, which was presented by the Mayor. The next 10 crossing the line received tickets to see the show. Representatives from the American Legion acted as official judge and members of some of the city's civic groups aided in the conduct of the derby.

Ungerfeld Promotes School Heads For Oratory Contest on "Gunga Din"

What is reported to have been a first-time in Newark, N. J., was the oratory contest on "Gunga Din" arranged by Manager Bob Ungerfeld and publicist Monroe Nachemov for that opening at the RKO Proctor. A preliminary contest was conducted in each high school by the English department head, students permitted to recite any poem written by Rudyard Kipling. The winner in each school received a cash prize which was presented by the theatre, after which the seven school winners competed against each other from the theatre stage to select the best in the city.

Competition had the full support of the Board of Education and was covered in the local papers. Ungerfeld states that business the night of the contest was much above normal with an unusually large number of high school students attending.

Lamm Features Quizz Contest In Advance of "Dark Victory"

A Bette Davis film quiz contest was arranged by Louie Lamm, Palace, Lorain, Ohio, week ahead of "Dark Victory" opening, in which daily, two scene stills from previous Davis pictures were run. Scattered throughout the want ads each day were the titles and to those presenting correct list, guest tickets were awarded. Numerous effective window displays were promoted with leading merchants in which picture title and playdates were prominently mentioned, beauty salon featured a Bette Davis coiffure, which was advertised in newspapers and plugged storewide and personal endorsement messages were mailed to women's clubs and other local organizations.

Keene Organizes Juvenile Revues

Following up on his ten-year record in directing the annual Atlanta Kiddie Revue on behalf of the Milk Fund of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, Round Tabler Lionel H. Keene, formerly Loew Theatres' division manager and now headquartering in the Henry Grady Building, Atlanta, is engaged in putting on his "Juvenile Jamboree, a Quest for Talent," tieing in with leading local organizations and theatremen in various cities for benefit performances. Children up to the age of 16 are permitted to try out for parts in the performance, and for the majority of aspirants, Keene reports, it is their first opportunity of obtaining professional criticism.

Keene stresses the importance of the kiddie revue as a gross builder and also as a means of uncovering top juvenile talent for the screen and stage. Among those who started in his Atlanta shows, he points out, are Jane Withers and Dixie Dunbar. Many others who received their first billing in Keene's amateur presentations, have also, attained professional standing, he says.

Organizations in Georgia and Alabama cities cooperating with the Round Tabler include the Lions Club, of La Grange, Ga., the Hexagon Club, in presentations at Fairfax, Langdale and Lanett, Ala., among others. The shows have been highly successful in every situation, according to endorsements from heads of the participating organizations.

Department Store Helps Neides Sell "Smart Girls"

Numerous tieups were effected by Hal Neides for his "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" date at the Orpheum, San Francisco, among which was floor space in leading department store devoted to life size cutouts of the girls with assorted stills mounted on cards made up by the store. Original dresses used by Durbin, Parrish and Grey were worn by models in the store cinema shop each day during run from ten to three. Store carried special newspaper ad. In addition, the Durbin perfume was plugged with counter displays, etc.

Shadow box display carried six weeks in advance contained colored photo enlargements of the girls illuminated and set against black velour. Numerous newspaper stories and art breaks were secured, traveling billboard truck was posted with two 24-sheets, truck equipped with sound played Durbin records and 100 word announcements were made daily over Stations KFRC and KJBS.

Ties Into "Want Ad" Week

In the recent national want ad week, Bob Fulton, Paramount, in Waterloo, Ia., tied up the Waterloo Courier for a two column gratis ad each day for six days. Exchange was passes to those inserting ads for seven days and paying for them in advance, free theatre ads plugging current and forthcoming attractions.

SPECIAL SHOW FOR RURAL SCHOOLS TURNS INTO CITYWIDE CELEBRATION

Greenberg's "Finn" Screening at Three Virginia Houses Becomes Civic Promotion; All-Day Program Arranged

Last year Manager Harry Greenberg, of the State, Virginia, Minn., scored highly with a group of special showings of "Snow White" at regular prices for rural school children, some 1,500 coming from wide distances to take advantage of these performances scheduled so as not to conflict with the regular shows. Success of the first venture encouraged the theatreman to repeat the idea this year with "Huckleberry Finn," and so comprehensive were his plans that local organizations, headed by the retail merchants' association, agreed to underwrite the costs, including theatre admissions, as a development of a citywide sales promotion "Good Will Days' celebration, which stemmed from Greenberg's original conception.

The Round Tabler obtained immediate approval from the rural school heads. Then a civic program was arranged, after the special showings, wherein the children would be further feted in the city park and attend communal ceremonies, during which they would be served lunch as guests of the merchants' association. Three obstacles then arose which after much effort on the part of Greenberg were satisfactorily removed. The first was the cost of theatre admission for the visitors, and the second, expense of the transportation by bus from the various communities represented by the invited pupils, a matter of $300. The third, having to do with the second, was safety insurance to be in effect while the children were transported from and to their homes.

Merchants Underwrite Admissions

The merchants finally agreed to pay for the theatre admissions from their special funds for the occasion, and the children cooperated by agreeing to pay for the transportation through class entertainment funds, the cooperation of the local P. T. A.'s and their community clubs. As concerned the travel insurance for the visitors, this was solved by having releases made up and sent to the schools. The children were requested to have these signed by their parents, and only those pupils who returned the signed slips were allowed on the party. The releases stated that the celebration was independent of the school activities, the parents recognizing this by their signature, Harry reporting a 100 per cent return. At this point, the entire community realized how magnificently the project was developing which brought about a citywide movement for the abovementioned goodwill promotion.

All-Day Program Set

The day's program started with the picture showings at the three Minnesota Amusement houses, in Virginia, the first performance at 9:30, with the other two theatres some 35 minutes later to provide sufficient time for the print to clear. After the show, the visitors were taken to the local city park where lunch was served. Then followed a tour through the greenhouses, and zoo, a flag-raising ceremony, a tree-planting as a token of appreciation from the visitors, band concert and picnic games. The schedule concluded at 2:30 to allow all children to be back at their homes by six.

RURAL SCHOOL PUPILS AT FLAG-RAISING CEREMONY

As the children left their schools on the morning of the big day, each was tagged with guest ticket, carrying name and school number. Arriving in Virginia, they were met by the local police who guided each bus to the proper theatre, the busses being directed to the second house as soon as the first was filled, and so on. When the first theatre spilled, the same busses led by the police left the special parking place and picked up the same children who were called by name of their school. The procedure was followed at the three theatres, no local parking being allowed within a block of the houses.

Ceremonies at Local Park

At the city park, the busses had a definite route to follow and place to park after unloading. The park was marked with numbered pennants for each school, the pupils of that school gathering there to eat their lunches distributed at that time. After eating, the tour started, during which the visitors were treated to ice cream. With each group of 30 was assigned a uniformed boy scout and after the trips the pupils were assembled for the flag-raising ceremony sponsored by the Legion color guard, music furnished by the school band of 65 and the children pledging their allegiance to the flag, as is illustarted by the above. The tree-planting was conducted by the local Future Farmers of America heads and the picnic stunts concluded the program when a bugle squad announced assembly. The children then returned to the school pennants from where they marched to the parked busses for the trip home.

All City Heads Aid

Virginia's school heads cooperated by providing the band, excusing the Boy Scouts from classes as were 45 seniors to act as supervisors and attendants. The city furnished regular and extra police, and uniformed doctor and nurses were supplied by the health department as was a first-aid tent. Numerous meetings were held in advance so that all participating would be familiar with their duties, especially the rural school recreation department.

In all, 1,718 children arrived in 83 busses from as far away as 75 miles and a total of 2,300 people partook of lunch at the park. Fortunately, the celebration wound up without a single casualty outside of a few bruised shins and tummy aches. Greenberg reports a terrific favorable reaction from the children and school heads in the form of spoken comments and letters.

Many Extra Events Scheduled

The supplementary Good Will Days celebration was stressed with numerous page-one stories in both local papers, the theatre party headlined in most every instance. Cooperating merchants decorated their stores accordingly and advertised special sales. The streets were hung with flags, pennants and colored lights and many extra events scheduled which brought additional visitors from a wide area.

Virginia is a community of 12,000 and the three theatres involved are a unit of the Minnesota Amusement Co. The town is in the heart of the state's famed Iron Range and according to John J. Friedl, circuit head, the tiein was the biggest thing ever put on in that territory.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

PROSPECTS

NOW that it has been amply proved that the box office curve has inevitably to follow employment and payrolls, the general business index has assumed more than an academic interest to showmen. At the moment, which is to say the first week in July, the indications are taken by the experts to be looking up, just a trifle more than a shade.

The New York Times "Business Index" is up again, with gains something more than the seasonal graph would anticipate. Not terrific, mind you, but better.

Meanwhile all of the experts of the trade associations are talking in cautious optimism, considering generally that the coming fall and winter will be somewhat better, if—the if being the worry and wonder about war over There and its implications over Here.

THE first world war was the making of the American motion picture industry, delivering to it in formative years substantial monopoly. Part of the preparations for the next world war have tended no little to the unmaking of that same world dominion by Hollywood. Meanwhile there is more than fair prospects that the world's market for American production will not meet important further shrinkage, may in fact show betterment. Important new competition for the more important markets is not in sight.

The third and Fourth of July brought surprise and phenomenal days to the box offices of Broadway, with lines forming by 10:30, long queues by 11:00, and calls for extra ushers, for the first time since the opening of the World's Fair competition over on Flushing Meadows. New York was full of people with holiday money in pocket and loosed from their daily routines by the long week-end. Saturday and Sunday presumably had exhausted their devices of self-entertainment and brought them to a willingness to sit down and take effortless diversion.

BLACK & WHITE

THE conspicuous success of "Rochester," otherwise Mr. Eddie Anderson, in "Man About Town," wherein he plays the valet extraordinary to Mr. Jack Benny, makes also conspicuous the fact that the negro comes but rarely to the laurels of the screen. And this too, is in the face of the fact of his abilities in mimicry, syncopation and his inherent dramatic emotionalism.

In the New York Herald Tribune, Mr. Howard Barnes makes this the text of argument, urging: "What baffles me is why the motion picture does not use their acting skill more frequently, why they are not given bigger parts or why, for that matter, there are virtually no films in which they have the major responsibility."

In strict technical objectivity, the argument is right. But in any reduction to practise it is not correct.

Mr. Barnes and that school of criticism to which he pertains tend to view the screen of the theatre as art, and they can be entertained by art. Art is not necessarily, or commonly, entertainment in the broader sense, and not staple fare for the many.

Most considerably stardom, and what Mr. Barnes calls "the major responsibility," is a job of vicarious attainment for the customers. The starring player becomes the agent-in-adventure for the box office customer. The spectator tends to identify himself with the glamorous and triumphant player, just as the tense, weakling little ribbon clerk in the last rim of seats clenches his fists and wins with the winner at the prize fight—at the moment he's in trouble, too, because the winner is probably Joe Louis.

JUST incidentally if you think the simile is in trouble, reflect on the fact that the big turn out at the Yankee stadium the other night was there, not to see Louis win, but to see spunky, clowning Tony Galento take a chance.

Inevitably the motion picture tends to place the negro in the screen drama in the same relation as that which he occupies in the nation's social and economic picture. In other words the screen public takes the negro as the average of 135,000,000 take him.

The fact that the negro is better accepted on his merits as an artist by the stage is but another of the endless and obvious evidences of the devotion of the stage to minorities of more sophistication, more erudition, more capacity for intellectual adventure.

The multitude can chuckle at Step'n Fetchit and laugh with Rochester, but they will woo and win with the Gables, the Taylors and the Coopers. That's "the major responsibility"—the white actor's burden.

"UTTERLY DIFFERENT"

WORD has got around that "On Borrowed Time," from MGM, is something very special, utterly different. By way of corroboration, comes a personal letter to the editor from Mr. William R. Weaver, the Herald's Hollywood editor, saying: "It is amazing fantasy, told without being fantastic. It must be seen to be believed and when you see it you believe it.

"I think that one way showmen might tell their audiences about it would be to mention maybe 'Death Takes a Holiday,' or 'Earthbound,' or 'Berkeley Square' as films in general kind and then immediately to specify that 'On Borrowed Time' is like none of them. Incidentally Lionel Barrymore gives his most flawless performance to date, and that's something.

"Also, it would be, I think, an important service if you would see that the Herald tells the showmen that 'On Borrowed Time' positively must be seen from the beginning. Patrons admitted as much as one minute late will not find out what it is about and they will miss the rich satisfaction it contains for a reasonably intelligent audience."

CURTAIN

ONCE in a while "the hand that feeds," after being gnawed on enough, is capable of giving a bust in the nose. This seems to be what has happened in the discontinuance of the Federal Theatre Project by the terms of the 1940 Relief Bill.

The House contended that the WPA plays contained "seditious lines." Any unbiased spectator at such performances as

In the Classroom

After three years' ascertaining necessity and practicability, and of preparation with leading educators, the motion picture industry, on Thursday, formally entered the business of supplying films to this country's schools. Announcement of an industry library of 600 subjects, in one and two reels, with sound, was made on Thursday night to the 77th annual convention of the National Education Association, in San Francisco, by Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Dr. Mark May, of Yale University, representing the film committee of educators. The library is thought the largest ever presented to the schools at one time. Industry contributors are Columbia, Walt Disney, Educational, Loew's, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Warner Brothers. Prints will be shipped to schools directly from these companies' laboratories. "Promotional" activities will be handled by the Teaching Film Custodians, Inc., in New York City.

The new developments and their background are described in a story starting on page 15 which reports the announcement of the service.

"Injunction Granted," to name but one of a category, could confirm that judgment. Had the screen ventured such intemperate expression for the wide audiences of the motion picture, a storm of protest would have arisen, immediately, and far more violent than the somewhat belated objections of the Dies committee.

Unhappily, despite the dominant coloration imposed by the hell-raising militant interlopers of the WPA theatre, there has been and remains a body of legitimate players quite as much entitled to relief as other recipients and beneficiaries of made work. They are now the victims of those ideological banditti, interested in revolution, not art or entertainment.

There remains, to be sure, ever the question of the legitimacy of what seems to be so much the contemporary demand of the specialist to be supported in his specialty, be he piccolo player or ham Hamlet. Few of us indeed have ever enjoyed completely free choice of vocation or employment. It is not clear that the relief roll should pave the path for wishing. Relief is one thing, career another.

Embroiled

The International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees became involved in two more fights over jurisdiction of studio craft workers this week as it demanded return of control over cameramen and had its own jurisdiction threatened before the Labor Relations Board by an anonymous group claiming support of a majority by the 12,000 workers now in IATSE ranks in Hollywood.

The American Society of Cinematographers, in a bitter fight in 1934 gained jurisdiction over cameramen for five years. Photographers Local 659 of the IATSE now claims jurisdiction in a petition to Pat Casey, labor representative for producers.

A complaint was filed on Thursday with the NLRB against the IATSE by the United Studio Technicians Guild, asking certification as bargaining agency for all 12,000 IATSE studio workers. The Guild move was the first attempt to bring vertical unionism to Hollywood and was laid by International leaders to CIO activity. Charles J. Katz was listed as attorney of the Guild but officers and membership were not disclosed.

Patent Changes

Legislation limiting the effective period of patents applied for and obtained and providing for a single circuit court of appeals to handle infringement cases, was ordered favorably reported to the Senate Thursday by the Senate Patents Committee. A bill introduced by Senator Bone of Washington at the request of the Patent Office limits the life of patents to 17 years and the over-all protection afforded by the filing of a patent application to 20 years, as a means of preventing patentees from postponing the effective date of a patent by filing innumerable amendments. Another bill provides that infringement issues may be tried in the proposed special court, from which appeal could be taken direct to the Supreme Court, thus preventing the bringing of cases in several jurisdictions where conflicting decisions might be secured. The measures are an outgrowth of the patent investigations of the Temporary National Economic Committee, of patent privilege abuses.

Neely Pressing

Senator Matthew M. Neely (Dem., W. Va.) after several efforts succeeded late Thursday in having his anti-block and blind-selling bill made the unfinished business of the United States Senate with an understanding that it would be debated and voted upon Friday afternoon. A voice vote from the floor made the bill the unfinished business, carrying without a single objection.

In Spain

The first word of the reestablishment of the Spanish motion picture industry came Thursday by cable from Barcelona, disclosing that under the new Franco Government the Spanish Film Board, an association of distributors, has been converted into an official syndicated service to embrace all Spanish motion picture activities. It will be directly responsible to the chief of the Spanish Syndical Service—the Syndical is the labor organization.

First president is Nazi Ufa's Vallescar, and the regional chairman and national vice-president is Enrique Aquilar, managing director of Hispano-American Films, Universal's Spanish subsidiary. Vidal Batep of Paramount is also an official.

New Exhibitor

Ray Lewis of Toronto, publisher of Canadian Motion Picture Digest, in New York for the weekend announced her entry into the business of exhibition as an independent. Her theatre, the Pylon, in College Street, Toronto, is scheduled to open October 1. It will have 750 staggered seats, with "front row vision." Her beginning in the motion picture business was just 25 years ago, with the sale of a script, "The Garden of Dreams," to the late Arthur Speigel's Equitable Pictures Corporation.

Fox Foreign Sales

His company is rocketing to the best foreign sales record of its history, and Latin America is a prime contributor, Walter Hutchinson, foreign department head of Twentieth Century Fox, said in New York on his return, Wednesday, from three months in Europe, and in Central and South America. Latin America offers increased sales, however, he said, if Hollywood studios pay more attention to Latin film tastes. Mr. Hutchinson remarked that this was done for European countries, and that Latin America was surely as important. He noted that the new sales record was being achieved in the face of chronic international tensions. Anent Spain, he said the company operating offices there were being moved from Barcelona to Madrid.

Happy Holiday

The Fourth of July holiday weekend, ordinarily causative of a drought at the boxoffices of the nation, instead became a cheerful four days for exhibitors of many sectors. The good fortune was most evident in New York, where both Broadway-first-run and neighborhood houses had suffered badly since the opening of that great counter-attraction, the New York World's Fair. All Broadway first run houses were crowded over the weekend. Records were set at the Loew's State, where Eddie Cantor appeared on the stage and Metro's "It's a Wonderful World" on the screen; and at the Paramount, where Gene Krupa and band appeared on the stage, and Paramount's "Man About Town" on the screen.

Pulling the Curtains

The Federal Theatre Project is officially dead. The curtains in all Federal theatres descended for the last time June 30. Payrolls for administrative employees and those desperately needing relief will be continued one month and 90 days from the June 30 date, respectively, under an ameliorating provision contained in the national relief funds bill, passed by both House and Senate. The House was the first, several weeks ago, to attack, and eliminate the Federal Theatre project from its relief appropriation. The Senate, besieged by notables of the theatre and politics, considered a clause allowing continuation of the project if local, as well as Federal, funds supported it. House leaders would not even consider this; and the Senate dropped the project entirely. Chief reason for the unanimity of bitterness in House and Senate was the belief of Congressmen that the project produced plays of a "Communistic" tendency and that its administrative and acting personnel was "radical."

The darkening of the houses is reported on page 42.

In Abeyance

RKO's lesser creditors are holding up the reorganization, approved by the majority, and proposed by the Atlas Company. While decisions on their appeals against the reorganization confirmation were awaited from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, arrangements for underwriting the $1,500,000 issue of new capital were being held in abeyance, as were the election of new officers and the first meeting of the board of the new company. However, the proponents of the reorganization, who have already battled their way to court acceptance of the plan in essentials, are readying final papers, in hope that the company's reorganization may be completed by the end of summer. Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, counsel for the Atlas Corporation, are preparing the certificate of incorporation, new stock certificates, and the by-laws of the new company. Hearings on the reorganization plan have been postponed to July 20th.

135 Minutes

Occupying the attention of Illinois exhibitors, and excluding all other topics, is the new bill, passed by that state's legislature, providing that motion picture programs be limited to two hours and 15 minutes. Governor Horner's signature is awaited; so, also, is his veto. Opinion is divided on his probable action, as it is on the efficacy of the bill, which is intended to prevent double feature programs. Allied of Illinois is reported favoring the bill.

See legislative news, page 29.

Refunding

Warners this week began the cash redemption of about $6,000,000 optional 6 per cent convertible debentures, due September 1, 1939, with accrued interest from March 1, 1939, to date. Holders may turn in their bonds for cash at the Manufacturers Trust Co., trustee, 55 Broad Street, New York.

This will complete the refunding or retirement of an original amount of $29,400,000 debentures outstanding. Of this amount, some $19,400,000 have been exchanged for new debentures maturing in 1948 and bearing the same rate of interest.

Of the balance of approximately $10,000,00 debentures outstanding, the company has retired some $4,000,000.

In the last eight years Warners have retired or refunded more than $40,000,000 indebtedness.

The six per cent convertible debentures due September 1, this year, were issued in 1929 in a total amount of $44,064,500. Of this, $14,664,500 was retired prior to the exchange plan issued July 25, 1938.

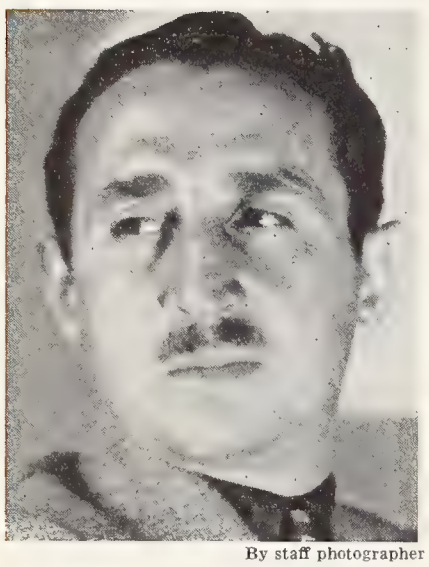
Television Films

Only partly thwarted by the "boycott" imposed unofficially upon it by the motion picture industry, the television industry this week made it known, that it has secured enough feature films, from independent and foreign film distributors, to last through the summer. "Generals Without Buttons," and "Carnival in Flanders" are among the approximately 15 features contracted for, at this mid-week. Among the distributors are Astor Pictures, Mayer and Burstyn, Tri-National. Other television news includes the notation that the first television "network" may become actuality this Fall, with the establishment of relay stations from New York to the General Electric transmitter at Schenectady.

The news is detailed on page 16.

Commerce Study

"Two or three months more"—is the estimate of the time necessary to complete the study of the motion picture industry, United States Department of Commerce officials said in Washington on Wednesday. The Department started discussions with industry leaders several weeks ago on "broad and economic problems of the industry."



Remaining to be seen by Department officials, in their program of consulting with every branch of the industry, are Harry Brandt, president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, on July 18; and leaders of the Allied States Association, at an unspecified time.

Meanwhile, the industry was going ahead with its own program for self regulation (see page 23), while the majors in Federal Courts were categorically denying the Government's charge of conspiracy (page 25).

OF TIME

MANY a year ago your editor, then in production, discussed with Will Hays assorted projects for pictures to deal with the traditions of our industry and its personalities. He seemed to like the notion, remarking we can importantly use material "on the screen for the screen."

At long last it has been done in "The Movies March On", the new issue of "The March of Time," in the intensive, dramatic, documentary technique of Louis DeRochemont—reviewed in this issue.

This opus is a compact twenty-one minutes of speeding narrative ranging in its coverage over as diverse materials as the May Irwin-John C. Rice kiss scene from the 1896 Broadway hit, "The Widow Jones" to pictorial portraiture of today's figures, including, for example, Cecil B. DeMille and Nicholas M. Schenck.

This is the first screen telling of the screen's story—sounds like an autobiography—in entertainment guise available to the box office public in competent amusement capsule form. One is not to forget, the while, a feature length effort of this order made some years ago by Commodore Stuart Blackton, pioneer, but failing of wide distribution, and, for special audiences and research students, "The March of the Movies," compiled under the attentions of Wilton Barrett for the National Board of Review's film archives, nor yet the large array of historical film compiled by the Film Library of the Museum of Modern art, where John Abbott and Iris Barry are documenting the evolution of the art so exhaustively. Access to the Film Library, of course, has been important to the current production. This is, however, not a mere excursion to the movies' attic relics. It pertains to now.

MAJORS FORMALLY ENTER SCHOOL FILM BUSINESS WITH 600 PICTURES

Promotional and "Sales" Activities Will Be Conducted by Teaching Film Custodians, a Non-Profit Corp. of Educators

The major motion picture producer-distributors on Thursday formally entered the business of supplying films to the schools of the country, in a joint project.

After three years of preparation by virtually all of the companies, working with leading educators, Will H. Hays, for the majors, and Dr. Mark A. May, of Yale, for the film committee of educators, announced to the teaching profession the availability of an industry library of 600 regular theatrical subjects which have already played theatres, in one and two reels, all sound. It is probably the largest film library ever to be turned over to schools at one time.

Rentals Fixed

The announcement was made Thursday night by Mr. Hays and Dr. May before the 77th annual convention of the National Education Association in San Francisco. The NEA is composed of 195,000 teachers and superintendents of the country's elementary, secondary and high schools, 85 per cent from public, 15 per cent from private schools.

The licensing of pictures will be for from one-half a school year to three whole school years, and not on any single-booking basis, at rentals running from $10 for one-half a school year to $15 for one whole school term, $25 for two, $30 for three, for each black-and-white reel, all 16mm width.

Participating are Columbia, Disney, Educational, Loew's, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers. Not participating are Paramount, United Artists or Universal, of the "Big Eight," nor Grand National, Monogram or Republic.

There will not be set up, as originally planned, any national system of exchanges operated jointly by and for the participating companies. Instead, each company will ship it own prints direct from its own laboratories. The promotional and "sales" activities will be conducted by a new company, called Teaching Film Custodians, Inc., with headquarters in the same building as the Hays organization, at 28 West 44th, running through to 25 West 43rd, the MPPDA always using the 44th Street address, the new Film Custodians adopting the 43rd Street number.

Teaching Film Custodians will issue licensing agreements to the schools, handle all of the bookkeeping and collecting, and pay the distributor as it is billed by the company. All licensing will be for spot cash.

Non-Profit Project

Film Custodians state that in the first three years of experimentation, there will be no profits accruing to the companies. As it now stands the project is a non-profit corporation composed exclusively of educators.

"Prints will be furnished only to bona fide educational institutions; the exhibitions shall be before classroom or kindred groups composed only of bona fide students or enrolled members of such educational institutions, and such exhibitions shall be an integral factor of class or group study," according to the license, which also provides, "Admission fees, directly or indirectly, shall never be charged or permitted to be paid for admission at the door or otherwise in advance or afterwards, for the right to attend either single exhibitions, or a series of such exhibitions."

The distributors and the educators feel that the project has been so set up so as to be entirely non-competitive to established theatres. No film will be made available until it is a year old. Features, or parts therefrom have not been included so far.

The distributors reserve the right to withdraw any picture listed in the library "in protection of their contractual relationships." This could mean "in protection of their contractual relationships" with regular exhibitor customers.

Under the terms of the contract the school accepts responsibility for loss or damage to each film. Schools are warned against attempting to use a silent projector on the sound subjects, because such usage destroys sound tracks. The distributors stress to the educators that only teachers or pupils who have had experience in operating sound projectors should be permitted to project.

Warning is also given on making copies of films, under penalty of the United States Copyright Act.

For the purpose of holding in trust the fees to be paid by the schools, Teaching Film Custodians have set up Teaching Film Trustees. The trustees are James R. Angell, President Emeritus of Yale and Educational Director of National Broadcasting; Willard E. Givens, Executive Secretary of the National Educational Association, and Carl E. Milliken, Secretary of the Hays organization.

The films will be made available only to schools in the U. S. A. All transportation costs are to be paid for by the schools.

A few of the pictures are available only in color. Because the cost of making color editions is at present three to four times higher than for black-and-whites, prices for color prints will not be listed, but are to be quoted according to the quantity of prints applied for, varying with the size of the order.

On Wednesday, Teaching Film Custodians started the mailing of a 320-page "Catalogue of Films for Classroom Use," to practically all of the country's thousands of school superintendents. It is estimated that in the past two years, since schools started seriously to buy sound machines, some 5,000 sound projectors have been purchased by schools and school systems.

The distributors' library in its present form classifies their films-for-teaching into six main divisions:

Art and Music: Art appreciation, architecture and design, painting and sculpture, animated cartoons, music.

Literature and Biography.

The Sciences: Biology and nature study (animals, domestic and trained; wild animals; birds, insects, marine life, plants); Chemistry, psychics and astronomy; Geology, physical geography and meteorology; general science.

The Social Studies: Anthropology and psychology; economics and governments; geography, travel (Africa; America, Central and West Indies; North America; South America; Asia; Australia and Islands of the Pacific; Europe; Miscellaneous); History (United States, European, General); Sociology; Religion.

Health, Physical Education and Recreation: Scholastic major sports, (Baseball, basketball, crew, football, track and field); Scholastic and minor sports (Archery, badminton, fencing, gymnastics, hockey, swimming and diving, table tennis, tennis); General sports and recreation (Boating, yatching and water sports, dancing, fishing and hunting, golfing, horses, riding and polo, playgrounds and resorts, skiing, miscellaneous.

The Practical Arts and Vocations: Agriculture, home economics, industrial arts, vocations.

New Films Needed

The library is admittedly inadequate from the standpoint of coverage of school subjects. It will be built up, however. As it now stands there is an abundance of films on geography, nature study, biology, and physical education; a fair number on history and the social studies, but very few on physical sciences and on literature.

Teachers and other users of the films are expected to keep reports which are to be sent to headquarters in New York as guides to the selection of additional pictures which are not now available.

Some 450 different subjects are covered to some extent in the 600 pictures.

Will H. Hays, announcing the project to the National Education Association, Thursday night, said the industry was acting in response to requests of teachers all over the country.

"Your future as well as ours depends upon our joint success in maintaining the opportunity for the individual to follow pursuits of his own choosing, motivated by his anticipation of just reward for his private enterprise, limited only by such minimum restrictions as the common good requires; in short, in maintaining the American Way of Life.

"Certainly one way to help insure our tradition of liberty in business, as well as personal relationships, is to give the youth of today, as vividly as possible, knowledge of its background and antecedents. In such a purpose, the motion picture makes an important contribution. Never was there at any time, anywhere before, a mirror which so completely and faithfully reflects the progress and failures, the culture or lack of it, the economic, political and social stress and strains of the whole human family as the photoplay. It is a school which is 'never out.'"

After consulting with educational leaders, Mr. Hays, in 1936, invited Dr. Mark A. May, Director of the Institute of Human Relations of Yale University, to make a study and lay out a program for future guidance in meeting the requests of teachers for classroom films. Dr. May suggested the organization of an advisory committee and invited its present members to join him in developing the program. The members of the Advisory Committee on the Use of Motion Pictures in Education are: Dr. May, chairman; Frederick H. Bair,

MGM LEADS WITH FILMS FOR SCHOOLS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vaults gave up the greatest number of pictures for the majors' new school films project, 153 of its subjects being included in the first 432 catalogued. They came from the following sources:

MGM	153
20th-FOX	94
WARNERS	59
DISNEY	35
RKO	5

There now is a total of 600 pictures available for the new project.

$111,358,000 GROSS FOR THREE NETWORKS

Expenses Were $92,503,000 and Net $18,854,000 in 1938; $55,000,000 Additional Income

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Three major networks and 660 broadcasting stations making financial reports to the Federal Communications Commission had a total broadcasting revenue in 1938 of $111,358,378, expenses of $92,503,594 and net broadcasting income of $18,854,784, it is disclosed by statistics compiled by the commission.

Other Income Reported

However, it was shown, in addition to the broadcasting return, the nets and stations had other income of approximately $55,000,000, of which $53,672,999 was from activities or business other than broadcasting, which brought the net income from all sources to $62,010,215 after the deduction of $11,522,636 paid in state and Federal income taxes.

While 240 stations showed losses for the year aggregating $2,223,195 and one station broke even, 419 others reported profits of $16,728,533 from broadcasting operations.

The financial reports showed that 175 stations had time sales of less than $25,000 and that, as a group, these stations showed losses, with aggregate revenues of $2,520,026 and expenses of $2,870,729, although some of the individual stations showed a profit.

Time sales by stations amounted to $81,923,949 and the network portion of network time sales was $35,455,510, a total of $117,379,459, from which was deducted $16,487,200 paid in commissions, leaving a net from the sale of time of $100,892,259. The sale and placing of talent returned $6,081,344, recoveries by networks from others on communication line charges were $1,085,469 and miscellaneous sales and revenue services brought in $3,278,836.

Programs, Talent Heavy Items

The compilation showed that the greatest items of expense were $38,196,994 for program, talent and communication line expense, $15,088,718 for general and administrative expenses, $13,048,588 for technical expenses, $10,997,059 for indirect broadcast expenses and $9,963,136 for advertising, promotional and selling expenses.

The 485 stations with time sales in excess of $25,000 reported total time sale revenues of $80,149,375 and a net broadcast income of $14,856,041.

A combined balance sheet for the three nets and 660 stations showed total assets of $1,068,339,901, of which $408,133,556 was current assets, $46,777,987 investment less depreciation in broadcast assets and $561,274,054 investment in assets other than broadcast plant after depreciation and amortization.

The nets and stations had a long-term debt of $61,997,823, current liabilities of $80,784,658, other liability items of $104,021,229 and net worth of $821,536,191.

Compilations from the reports showed that 658 of the stations and networks had a payroll for 1938 amounting to $45,663,757, of which $4,239,470 was paid to officers. As of December 31, last, a total of 23,060 persons were employed, including staff musicians and other artists on the regular payroll.

Billings Reach New Highs

Figures for those two giant network systems, the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, reveal new records set for high "billings"; that is, orders.

For the CBS, the figures run this way: a 34.8 per cent increase in June billings, over last year, the total this June amounting to $2,860,180; a six month cumulative total of $16,918,818, and 8.6 per cent increase over the 1938 figures for the same period.

At the NBC, the figures on billings are: $3,383,404, for June, the Red network accounting for $2,624,657, and the Blue, $757,747. This is an increase of 5.7 over the previous year. The six month total amounts to $22,598,937, an increase of 7.5 over the same period last year.

The FCC this week issued, in conjunction with its statement on 1938 radio revenues, a comparison on employment and payrolls between the week of December 11, 1938, and the week of March 6, 1939. The number of full-time employees has decreased; part time, increased; weekly pay of the full-time employees, remained the same; weekly pay of part-time employees, increased considerably.

The Commission last week authorized sale of two radio stations to newspapers: one, WFAS, of White Plains, to the Macy newspaper group; the other, WCBA, to Allentown, Pa., newspapers.

Other Commission news was the postponement till July 14 of its hearing on a "censorship" for international stations; and the approval by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee of the nomination of Paul Walker, for a seven-year term as a commissioner.

FRENCH FILMS LEAD FOREIGN SHOWINGS

French films are shown more widely in America than any other type of foreign language product, according to MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S survey of 175 theatres throughout the country showing foreign language pictures.

In enumerating the type of product shown, these theatres listed 16 foreign languages, including Chinese and Greek; with Spanish and German language films second and third, respectively, in popularity among the theatres which specified particular language types played.

A listing of the foreign languages represented, with the number of theatres reporting as playing them, follows:

French	46	Bohemian	8
Spanish	33	Swedish	7
German	30	Russian	7
Polish	19	Danish	2
Mexican	15	Irish	1
Yiddish	14	Greek	1
Italian	13	Chinese	1
Hungarian	9	Lithuanian	1

In many cases, the product overlaps in individual theatres; with one theatre playing German and Bohemian films, or Spanish and Mexican.

French product also led all others in the listing and analysis of the distribution of foreign language films made in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of May 13.

Majors List 600 Films for Schools

superintendent, Bronxville, New York, Public Schools; Isaiah Bowman, president, The Johns Hopkins University; Karl T. Compton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Edmund E. Day, president, Cornell University; Royal B. Farnum, vice-president, Rhode Island School of Design; Willard E. Givens, executive secretary, National Educational Association; Jay B. Nash, professor of education, New York University.

15,000 Shorts Seen

The Committee received permission from the major companies to examine non-current theatrical short subjects, numbering some 15,000, in the vaults of the companies belonging to the Hays Association. The Committee appointed seven reviewing panels composed of educators who examined 1,254 of these theatrical short subjects which had been selected for review. Of this number, the panels recommended 590 as being suitable for classroom use in their present form. The original cost of producing the short subjects selected by the Committee was more than $10,000,000.

The previewing, which took months, was done under the supervision of Arthur DeBra, of the MPPDA, who had been active on the project since its inception.

"In planning this project, the business rights of exhibitors have been fully safeguarded," it is said.

"The committees and educational groups with which these plans have been developed have assured the industry that all of the non-current theatrical short subjects which have been placed at their disposal will be used exclusively for bona fide classroom purposes during school hours and that no admission charge will be made."

Another part of the cooperative program is in connection with the series of pictures on human relations prepared by the Commission on Human Relations of the Progressive Education Association under a grant from the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation. This work is under the supervision of Dr. Alice Keliher of the Progressive Education Association. These pictures take the form of excerpts from existing non-current photoplays.

75 Films Now Ready

The Commission has completed nearly 75 human relations short subjects. Mr. Hays announced that the industry is permitting the Commission to extend the use of these pictures on 16 mm. film to a greater number of schools than included in the original experiment, and has agreed to provide additional films from which excerpts will be made. About 100 pictures finally will be included in the series.

A third phase of the program deals with photoplay appreciation studies in schools. This activity has been under way for five years with these studies incorporated in the regular curricula of hundreds of high schools.

Mr. Hays said that the photoplay versions have removed "the stigma of drudgery from the study of the classics of literature into which they have breathed a new spirit of adventure," and declared that "motion picture appreciation may best be taught in its natural setting the motion picture theatre, in America a suitable and safe laboratory for your use."

Storm Joins Goldwyn

Fred Storm, United Press correspondent in Washington, next week joins the Samuel Goldwyn Corporation, distributing through United Artists. He probably will handle advertising and publicity in Hollywood.

RADIO TURNING TO INDEPENDENTS' FEATURES, SHORTS FOR TELECASTING

Broadcasters Answer Industry "Boycott" by Signing Deals for Foreign and Independent Films; 15 Pictures Bought

The still minuscule American television public is being entertained with foreign films, a program adopted by the television industry in answer to the unofficial boycott imposed by the motion picture distributors, who have heeded their exhibitor customers. Exhibitor opinion, virtually unanimous, regards television as a competitive industry, and sees no reason for the motion picture industry to help it grow.

Contracts with independents and distributors of foreign films are being signed by National Broadcasting Company, producer, since April 30, of the first regular American television service to the public.

15 Features Set

Approximately 15 foreign and independent features have been signed for. Among them are "Generals Without Buttons," French; "Edge of the World," English; "Ballerina," French; "The Wave," Mexican; "Peg of Old Drury" and "Old Curiosity Shop," both English; "Heart of Paris" and "Carnival in Flanders," both French; "Heart of New York" and "Adventures of Chico," American. Shorts will also be used.

The distributors involved in the negotiations are Mayer and Burstyn; Tri-National Films; Pax Films; Garrison Films; Alliance Films, American Tobis, Woodard Productions and Astor Pictures.

At NBC, it was said that films would be shown about five hours weekly during July, and about four during August. An official estimated that NBC would occupy about six per cent of its telecasting time with films—a proportion observed now in England, where the telecasting is done by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Art Hungerford negotiated the deals for NBC. It is understood that the rental for each showing of the pictures is about $150.

At NBC this week it was said the films now in hand are enough to last through the summer. The emphasis in television entertainment they pointed out, has been upon "live" talent shows; these being given at night. However, during the daylight test programs, and during some of the evening programs, it had been necessary, and still is, to use films.

At the beginning, NBC used many old shorts, mostly of a commercial or in some wise sponsored sort. It has been reported turning to 16 mm fields for further material. The signing of the contracts with the independent and foreign film distributors affords NBC its first chance to use feature films on the air, albeit old ones.

Network Experiments Begun

While television has been brushing up its entertainment policies, it has also been endeavoring to overcome the inability of a television transmitter to send telecasts beyond the visual range of approximately 75 miles.

NBC and General Electric engineers have been experimenting, and are ready to try the first television network. This will link the NBC Empire State Building transmitter with the General Electric transmitter at Schenectady. A series of booster stations will enhance the visual signals en route. Heretofore, it had been thought such a system was impractical; that its alternative, the use of a coaxial cable, was so expensive to be also impractical; and that filmed material was the only method of securing simultaneous transmission of identical telecasts.

The network will be tried out this Fall. GE will possibly supply outdoor entertainment, and the RCA-NBC organization the indoor entertainment. Both firms are expected to share talent costs.

Canadian Opposition Seen

In Canada, efforts of station CKAC, in Montreal, to obtain permission for erection of a television transmitter, has shown the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to be opposed to private television licenses. The CBC board decree reads: "With respect to the control and development of television and facsimile broadcasting, no part of the public domain will be alienated to private interests."

The board last week refused to disclose how far its plans have progressed for television service to the Canadian public.

Developments in the field this week included a request by Paramount Pictures, which has an interest in the DuMont television concern, to the Federal Communications Commission for permission to erect a transmitter in Los Angeles, and the formation of a new company, the Telex Radio and Television Company, in Chicago. Its principals are Dr. B. Nathan, S. H. Melnick and C. L. Moorman.

Sagall To Visit U. S.

From London comes word that Solomon Sagall, managing director of Scophony, Ltd., a British television manufacturing concern, is prepared to visit this country once more, to follow up the financial contacts made previously. At the meeting of the company's board of directors last month, Sir Maurice Bonham Carter, chairman, declared that an increase in the theatres using Scophony equipment, an extension of service by the BBC, probability of increased home sales, the market afforded by the United States, and the consequent need for more personnel and plants, demanded more capital; and that Mr. Sagall would shortly visit America. A resolution at the same board meeting raised the company's capital from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000 by creation of 800,000 shares at five shillings each.

MGM in Great Britain will not even allow its trailers to be used for television, Sam Eckmann, sales manager for the American company in the United Kingdom, said this week. Furthermore, he added, the company will not install television screens in theatres, "and thus help to popularize a form of entertainment which will only assist in building up competition."

He added that he did not think any exhibitors should use television in their theatres, and commented, thus:

"A great deal is being said about not standing in the way of progress. But this is a generality. The hard fact confronting the trade is that there is sufficient competition of one sort or another, already."

HAYS TO ADDRESS BROADCASTERS

Invited speakers at the 17th annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters, in Atlantic City from Monday through Thursday, are Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.; James G. Stahlman, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association; Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the new labor standards program; and Orrin Dunlap, radio editor of the New York Times.

Mr. Hays will speak from Hollywood; Mr. Stahlman from New York. The new "code" of the broadcasters is expected to be presented for approval. No members of the Federal Communications Commission had been invited, at this mid-week, to address the gathering. Neville Miller, president of the Association, will also speak.

MPPDA Gets Committee Reports

Committee reports and topical discussions featured the final session of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America quarterly board meeting, held last Friday, to which it had been adjourned from June 22.

Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, reported on current plans with regard to the industry's short wave broadcasts to Europe and South America, which will be presented through National Broadcasting and Columbia Broadcasting. The MPPDA will coordinate material submitted by individual film companies. Plans for the broadcasts are going ahead.

The MPPDA Television Committee, through its chairman, Harry Buckley, United Artists vice-president, reported on the industry's relations to television, and on findings made by him and his committee, consisting of Paul Raiburn of Paramount and Charles Moskowitz of Loew's.

Current conditions in England and Continental Europe, as they affect the industry, were discussed, with particular reference to the recent alleviations of England's increased excise tax.

George Schaefer, RKO president, reported on the study being conducted by the sub-committee on security in the industry. Mr. Schaefer said that the study, conducted by himself, Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and Joseph Hazen, Warner Brothers vice-president, was going forward. Mr. Hays reported on cooperation with the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

Members of the board were reported as "gratified and pleased" at the reception given the all-industry feature, "Land of Liberty," as shown at the Golden Gate International Exposition and the New York World's Fair.

GENERAL MARKET TREND SENT 20 FILM STOCKS DOWN $137,068,750

Issues on New York Exchange Off to $637,905,750 on July 1st from $774,974,500 on Dec. 1st; "Appreciable Rise" Likely

by THE ANALYST

Motion picture shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange dropped $137,068,750 in market value during the first half of 1939 as the result of a general market decline caused by a series of war scares. Total market valuation of the twenty common and preferred stocks of film companies on the "Big Board" was $637,905,750 at the closing prices on June 30th last compared with $774,974,500 at the end of 1938.

Gathering war clouds also cut sharply into speculative and investment activities on the stock exchange and the volume of trading on the nation's biggest securities market in the first half of this year was the smallest since 1921. There was some hesitancy in general business because of the international tension, but it was the opinion of most financial experts that a period of relative freedom from the prospect of war would mean a substantial rise in both activity and prices on the stock exchange.

Authorities Predict Rise

On the motion picture industry itself trade authorities were quietly optimistic. A Fitch report of June 19 said:

"While box office receipts are not advancing as much as most authorities had anticipated, the exhibition of the year to date can hardly be described as discouraging. . . . Barring international conflict, or an extended period of tension, it is also probable that sales by producers will show an appreciable rise."

Bright spots in the news affecting the film industry were provided by several companies. A highlight was the declaration by Loew's directors of an extra dividend on the common stock. Paramount directors in May declared an initial dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, while Barney Balaban, president, said at the annual meeting of stockholders in June that Paramount's earnings thus far in the second quarter had been running substantially ahead of a year ago. Studio operations, he said, showed improvement and had been in the black for the last three or four months. Universal pictures reported for the 26 weeks ended April 29, 1939, a net income, before taxes, of $739,578, compared with a net loss of $588,285 reported for the 26 weeks ended April 30, 1938.

Wall Street opinion is, on the average, that barring foreign developments which would seriously cripple export trade, motion picture stocks are to be regarded as being in a favorable situation.

Preferred Stocks Advance

An indication of strength was seen in the favorable market action of some of the motion picture preferred stocks. Warner Brothers preferred rose six and three-eights points, or $656,625 in market value during the first half of 1939 despite a drop of two and one-eight points, or $8,077,125, in the common. Similarly, Eastman Kodak preferred and Loew's preferred showed independent strength, gaining two points each.

The volatile Eastman Kodak common showed the widest loss for the first half, dropping twenty-five and three-quarter points, or $63,988,750, to $395,115,000. That Eastman has few qualms about the future was indicated in May when the company announced plans for a new building to provide six acres of floor space for its finished film department as is part of a $17,955,000 expansion program.

Columbia Pictures showed a comparatively wide loss for its price category, sagging six and one-half points to below nine. The drop of $2,333,500 in market value brought total valuation down to $3,141,250. The company reported for the 40 weeks ended April 1st a net loss of $80,159, against a net income of $438,268 for the 39 weeks ended March 26, 1938.

Decline Blamed on General Conditions

General market conditions caused a decline of thirteen and one-quarter points, or $22,074,500 in market value, in Loew's during the first six months of the year. This was against a favorable background of news concerning the company, highlighted by the declaration in June of the extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock in addition to a regular dividend of 50 cents. Outside consideration also brought Paramount's market valuation down from $33,422,125 at the close of 1938 to $19,624,000 on June 30.

Twentieth Century-Fox dropped eight points, or $13,928,000 in market value to a total of $31,773,250. Among the lower priced shares, Radio-Keith-Orpheum sold off in market value from $3,771,500 to $2,580,500, while Consolidated Film was down five-eights of a point, or $328,125 in market value, to $656,250.

Universal Pictures preferred stock failed to reflect the favorable earnings trend of the company, declining to 62 from its price of 68 at the end of last year.

PARAMOUNT RETIRES LAST 6% DEBENTURES

Confirming the promise made to the stockholders at the recent annual meeting by President Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures on Monday called for redemption on July 31st approximately $1,950,000 of six per cent debentures, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, announced.

Redemption of this group of debentures marks the retirement of the last of the approximately $26,000,000 par value of six per cent bonds issued in connection with the company's reorganization.

MAJORS ANSWER ALLIED ON CODE; EXHIBITORS STUDY IT FOR BENEFITS

Determination of Distributors to Press for Individual Exhibitor Acceptance Is Stressed in Statement by Rodgers

The major distributors on Monday morning formally and strongly explained their position for the first time since Allied States, in convention in Minneapolis, totally rejected their trade practice code.

For one thing, Allied was severely criticized for its action and for the manner and method used by its leaders in arriving at that rejection; for another, the majors still stand insistent on lining up every exhibitor of the country, irrespective of affiliation.

The majors' statement came from William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, acting as chairman of their negotiating committee. He answered Allied's continuing anti-code policy and expressions with the assertion that "already the majority of organized theatre owners, independent as well as affiliated, have indicated their desire to operate under such a code and are anxious that its application be put into effect at the earliest moment possible."

Mr. Rodgers in his statement for and in behalf of the majors, traced the Allied action from its beginning at the Minneapolis convention.

"The distributor's committee and those they represented in the trade practice conferences and negotiations heard the Allied president read a statement at Minneapolis citing the reasons for Allied's rejection of the suggested Trade Practice Code," he started.

"Each distributor represented had attended the Minneapolis meeting by invitation and under the impression that there was to be an open forum when a frank discussion would be had of the code, its principles, and what it was believed possible to accomplish under its application.

"The distributors were heard on Wednesday, June 14th, and the following day learned to their amazement that the Allied board had previously accepted their negotiating committee's recommendation to reject the code and the rejection was accordingly decided the day before the distributors had an opportunity to be heard," Mr. Rodgers continued.

Says Code Not Wanted

"It was quite apparent to the distributors from the very outset of the negotiations in October last that some of the Allied representatives participating in the negotiations did not want a code in any form," he charged.

"This seems to be borne out by the nature of the report rejecting the code. Contrary to the statements contained in this report, the code covers, not substantially, but wholly, every single item discussed and agreed upon with the Allied committee. . . .

"Frequent references are made in the report to the effect that this or that clause appears for the first time in the March 30th draft, but not one word is said about the fact that Allied's general counsel (Abram Myers) was invited on January 16th to prepare a draft in language more suitable to Allied; that Allied's general counsel submitted such a draft on February 7th; that Allied's general counsel (after the Allied negotiation committee ceased functioning) came to New York and conferred with distributors' attorneys regarding the draft of Allied's general counsel, and that the draft of June 10th contains much of the language and suggestions of Allied. Yet the statement is made that Allied had no contact with distributors between the January 16th meeting and the receipt of the March 30th draft.

"Further, much comment has been made regarding the 'Preamble.' The fact is that in the draft of the Allied general counsel of February 7th, 1939, there was a 'Preamble' which provided that the distributors were to sign the code and thus become bound to observe the principles, policies and practices there set forth, but did not provide for the signing of such code by exhibitors or exhibitor groups, and their being bound, too. We regarded this suggestion as one-sided and unfair. In our draft of March 30th we submitted a 'Preamble' which provided that the exhibitors and organized groups of exhibitors as well as the distributors should sign the code and be bound thereby.

Allied Withdrawal Cited

"These misleading statements, together with many other inaccuracies well known to all distributors present at Minneapolis, caused their spokesman, with their full approval, to conclude his remarks at the final session of the Allied meeting on June 15th with the statement:

" 'Under the circumstances, gentlemen, you leave me no alternative but to withdraw any proposals from the Allied organization as a group and we will no longer negotiate with the Allied organization.'

"It has been rather unique to be negotiating for a peaceful solution of trade problems with a body who sought all concessions possible and at the same time declared their intention, no matter what the outcome, to continue their efforts, through legislation or litigation, to further curtail the progress of those upon whom they are largely dependent for their future business security and who have endeavored sincerely to solidify an industry that all concerned may benefit to the greatest extent," Mr. Rodgers continued.

"The fact that Allied as such represents only a minority, and a small one, of organized exhibitor groups, and much smaller when the nation's theatres are considered, did not in the slightest deter us from a supreme effort to meet the problems as they were presented. We believed that we had succeeded at Chicago in November last; every item brought up was fully discussed and disposed of and it was understood there, and at that time, that the basis for a trade practice code was established. All that remained was to reduce it to writing and suggest a method for arbitration.

"At that time," he said, "we invited the Allied general counsel to confer with our group in New York so that Allied would feel they had a definite part in the preparation of the "Land of Liberty," the feature motion picture, contributed to and produced by, the motion picture industry, in being shown twice daily at the United States Building, in the New York World's Fair. The picture is shown at 2:15 P.M., and at 5:30 P.M.; on Friday, there is only one show.

Local Organizations Prepare to Act, with Opinion Still Divided; Rumors of New National Group Continue Exhibitor organizations continue to vote, or make plans to do so, on the distributors' new trade practice program, which has been rejected completely only by Allied States, which acted at its Minneapolis convention, June 13-15, when the national officers indicated their willingness to depend on the Government, various other suits now pending against the distributors, and in reform legislation, to obtain trade reforms.

This week some backwash of that total rejection seemed to be the salient point in noting exhibitor reaction to the code.

In Syracuse, on Thursday, the New York Allied met in convention and heard from its president, Max Cohen, on the subject of code.

Mr. Cohen has been the center point in a reputed rebellion in New York against the National Allied leadership, anent the code. At the time of the New York unit's convention, last month, Mr. Cohen was reported urging acceptance of the code; but during the convention, took the organization line, thus extinguishing, temporarily, talk of a fight between national and New York Allied. He did say, however, that his stand was "personal"; that the code was a good thing, and that its acceptance still did not preclude governmental prosecution of alleged wrong doings, and the passage of regulatory legislation.

Last week, Mr. Cohen publicly declared that he was for "further negotiations (with the distributors), for a bill of rights, without Governmental regulation, for the independent exhibitors."

He added that he did not favor theatre divorcement in the code; something which the distributors had insisted had no place in the code, but which the National Allied leadership had insisted the distributors must first promise the exhibitors, and should even make part of the code. Mr. Cohen said:

"I am not in favor of theatre divorcement because I would rather have Loew's and RKO as competitors, in preference to any independent circuit," and he cited the hampering by some independent chains in the New York area, of efforts to adjust practices.

May Promote New Group

Mr. Cohen's name has been linked with that of Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York City, in reports about a "new national exhibitor organization." Both Mr. Cohen and Mr. Brandt have denied the story; though Mr. Brandt has been in favor of such a move, and said he would not "object" to it, but that "someone else" would have to start it.

Mr. Brandt declared this week that he had received many letters, from exhibitors in Allied territory, he noted, asking him to form a new national exhibitor organization. He intimated that if more came he might be disposed to take the initiative.

At the luncheon given in New York last Wednesday to Leo Abrams, recently promoted Universal short subject sales manager, Mr. Brandt, as well as Mr. Rodgers, sales manager for MGM, and a chief of the distributors' negotiating committee, was a speaker, and defended Mr. Rodgers against the "attacks" made against him at the Minneapolis Allied convention.

The Allied eastern Pennsylvania unit last week approved the rejection of the code by the national association. It also resolved to ask its members to urge their legislators to pass the Neely Bill. Reports were heard at the meeting of increased rentals to compensate for the code's 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, an Allied unit, voted to support the national organization's code rejection.

The Northwest Allied meets in Minneapolis on Tuesday. Reports are that it may disband, and a new unit be created, without affiliation to Allied. A. W. Steffes, its president, has refused re-election.

In Oklahoma, even as the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma convened last week, the rival Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma attacked it as "controlled" by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The convention's high spot was an address by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, with which the association is affiliated, who attacked the national Allied association for inviting, by its actions, the intervention of outsiders, and for deciding upon the rejection of the trade practice code, in the manner it did.

Mr. Kuykendall asked for the acceptance of the code, and condemned the Neely Bill and the government-in-business. The convention adopted a resolution to consider and report later on the code. Morris Loewenstein was re-elected president.

The special bulletin of the Allied Oklahoma unit, which attacked the TOA, asked independent exhibitors to attend the convention of the latter, and then of the former in September, and to "judge for themselves."

"Step in Right Direction"

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa will meet at Omaha on Tuesday and Wednesday next, to decide action on the code. In inviting the attendance of all independent exhibitors, Charles Williams, the president, said:

"The code as proposed may not be just what the small theatre owner ordered, but it's at least a step in the right direction. I think 90 per cent of the cases passed on by an arbitration board in the Omaha district would be complied with at once."

Connecticut exhibitors are in arms over reported requests for rental increases. There was an all-organization meeting last week in New Haven.

Indiana's Associated Theatre Owners met this Thursday and Friday at Spink Wauwasee, Indiana. Murray Rubens, of Michigan City, has headed the unit.

In Cincinnati last week F. W. Huss, Jr., was elected president of the Greater Cincinnati Theatres, Inc., succeeding Harold Bernstein.

In New York last week, Max Cohen of Brooklyn, was elected president of the New York Allied unit, and a regional vice-president in the state unit.

In Canada, independent exhibitors are expected to attend an all-Dominion convention in August, of independents under the auspices of the Anti-Protection League, to talk about trade practices. J. O. Scott, chairman of the League's central committee, said this week that he was "aware" that the distributors had to cater to the large chains; but that, also, he knew that the smaller theatres, while separately small, in combination could present a front more powerful than that of the chains.

"The distributors would then humor us as they do the chains which have imposed priority and protection on them," he said.

Meanwhile a second open invitation was extended this week to Chairman Scott of the Anti-Protection League by an emissary of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada to place specific proposals for revision of present trade practices before either the distributors association or the Conciliation Committee of the Toronto Board of Trade Flm Section.

Suggests League Initiative

The spokesman for the film exchanges declared that the league should open negotiations by writing an official letter to the distributor group outlining suggestions and asking for a conference among representatives of the league and the exchanges to consider protection and clearance. Assurance was given that the distributors would appoint a special committee to deal with the matter.

It was pointed out that neither the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada nor the Toronto Board of Trade has received any direct recommendations from the league and cannot act until definite suggestions have been submitted.

Further, Mr. Scott was invited, as an independent theatre proprietor, to join the Toronto Board of Trade Film Section, where he would have access to the records and accomplishments of its conciliation committee and would automatically become eligible for appointment to that committee, of which three independents are already members, N. A. Taylor, Harry Firestone and Hyman Freedman, officers of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario.

document. We invited counsel of other exhibitor groups to confer with us and some of them did confer with us. But Allied expressed a preference that we prepare a document and submit it to them.

"We did prepare several drafts in which the language had been changed, but never the intent.

"Assurances have been given before, and are again repeated, that any unauthorized actions inconsistent with the proposed code will be corrected.

"With the contemplated change in the machinery for settling clearance disputes it is sincerely believed that we have a document (June 10th draft) that will enable all interested parties to conduct their business relationshp more harmoniously and thereby benefit the industry at large.

"We are not alone in this belief, as already the majority of organized theatre owners, independent as well as affiliated, have indicated their desire to operate under such a code and are anxious that its application be put into effect at the earliest moment possible.

"Every exhibitor in the United States, independent, affiliated, whether a member of an organization or not, is extended a cordial invitation to accept the code. We hope that all will participate, irrespective of their affiliations," concluded the Rodgers statement.

Sol Halperin, who has been with Twentieth Century-Fox for 22 years, has signed a new three-year contract as head of the process department.

Mexicans Seek Better Quality

Confronted with a decreasing demand for their output, Mexican motion picture producers are endeavoring to improve the quality of their films, according to a report to the Department of Commerce at Washington from Commercial Attache T. H. Lockett, Mexico City.

Local film producers, the report points out, were adversely effected with the decline in popularity of the "ranchero" or cow-boy type of picture. With but limited financial resources it was possible for them to produce a fairly entertaining picture, making use of exteriors, regional costumes, and incorporating popular songs. However, they were unable to successfully produce the more sophisticated social dramas requiring an entirely different type of equipment.

In an effort to enlist Government aid, the Mexican motion picture industry recently appealed to President Cardenas. Assuming that proper world distribution was the most important factor in the situation, he agreed to see that financial assistance would be forthcoming if local distributors wished to open agencies. The industry, however, was not satisfied with this approach to solve their problem and another conference with the President is planned, the report said.

American productions are the most popular foreign pictures shown in Mexico and are preferred by the larger first-run houses. European pictures recently have become more popular than local productions, a development which has caused the local industry to request the Government to levy a tax on imports of such productions.

Warner Brothers Launch Survey of Box Offices

In an attempt to determine the practicability of its plan for releasing its big productions in the hot weather months, Warner Brothers is inaugurating a national survey to check on results at the nation's box offices.

The survey is being undertaken by the distribution department under supervision of Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, who has instructed his branch managers to file detailed reports on both box office and audience reaction to eight productions in July and August. Salesmen working out of the exchanges in 32 key cities will collect this data from exhibitors playing Warner product.

Vacations with Pay

Two week vacations with pay for all employees of Paramount Enterprises, operators of 13 theatres in the Greater Miami area, has been announced by W. R. Lynch, general manager of the circuit. Leaves will be granted more than 250 employees in the period between July 1st and September 1st who have been with the circuit for one year

MAJORS DENY ALL TRUST CHARGES, BUT U. S. CONFERS ON TRIAL DATE

Government Attorney Confers with Judge on Calendar; Separate and Joint Answers Filed by Defendants in Suit

Categorical denial of all of the United States Government's trust, monopoly and unfair trade practice charges standing against the majors in the New York suit, was made last Thursday by six of the eight defendants, who asked that the complaint be dismissed.

The answers were filed with the Clerk of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, and were made just one year after the Department of Justice started its action.

That the Department of Justice is anxious to bring the defendants to an early trial seemed apparent when it became known that Paul Williams, special U. S. Assistant Attorney General, had conferred in New York on Wednesday with Federal District Judge John C. Knox, presumably to fix a date for the trial.

In some quarters, October was seen as a likely trial month. However, attorneys, with other noted cases involving large industries, in mind, doubt whether the case can come to trial before 1940, in view of the many legal procedures which may be employed to extend the trial.

On Monday, the Government discontinued its suit against one of the defendants, Isidore Frey, of Loew's, who died on June 18th. It also dropped from the list of defendants the members of the former RKO board, David Sarnoff, Merlin H. Aylesworth, Edward H. Harden, Cornelius H. Bliss, DeWitte Millhauser, Maurice Goodman, Courtland Smith, and Frederick Strauss.

Defendant Group Answers

The Paramount, Loew's and Warner groups filed consolidated answers for all of the defendants in their groups.

Twentieth Century-Fox and National Theatres Corporation filed separate answers.

In the RKO group, Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, Malcolm Kingsberg and Leon Goldberg filed a separate answer.

United Artists and Columbia were not required to make their answers at this time pending action of the court on their motions requesting further particulars.

The answer of Paramount, which was the first of the distributing companies to enter the exhibition field, pointed out how Adolph Zukor and Famous Players Film Company (a predecessor of Paramount) had risen by 1916 to a place of importance in the production and distribution of motion pictures and how in 1917 an association of theatre owners combined to form First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., which through a system of franchises sought to control the distribution of motion pictures.

Many of the theatres in First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., had been customers of Famous Players, Paramount's answer said, and continuing stated "that the market for the pictures of Famous Players was seriously threatened and that stars and featured players, directors and other personnel were bid away from Famous Players by First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc."

The Paramount answer then pointed out that after efforts by Mr. Zukor to induce First National to stop bidding away their stars and featured players and to refrain from excluding Famous Players' pictures from the theatres holding First National franchises, Mr. Zukor and Famous Players "determined it was imperative for them to acquire theatres in which its motion pictures would be exhibited, and that it therefore acquired interest in some theatres in the year 1919."

The majors' answers denied without qualification the charges of the Government that the companies have monopolized and combined to monopolize the three branches of the industry—production, distribution and exhibition—and denied that they have engaged in any of the unfair trade practices charged or made any discrimination in their dealings between the theatres which they own and independent theatres.

The answers pointed out what the defendants assert are inaccuracies in many of the definitions of trade terms in the Government's petition.

Answers were filed by Paramount on behalf of itself and 19 officers and directors; by Keith-Albee-Orpheum for Malcolm Kingsberg and Leon Goldberg; by Irving Trust Company as trustee of RKO; RKO Pathe News, Van Beuren Corporation, RKO Proctor Corporation, RKO Midwest Corporation, and seven individual officers and directors; Loew's and M-G-M with M-G-M Distributing Corporation of Texas and 17 officers and directors, Twentieth Century-Fox for itself, Movietonews, Twentieth Century-Fox of Texas, Twentieth Century-Fox Distributing Corporation and 15 officers and directors; National Theatres Corporation on behalf of itself and Spyros Skouras, A. S. Gambee, H. C. Cox and John P. Edmondson; Chase National Bank on its own behalf; Warners on behalf of itself and Vitagraph, Vitaphone Corporation, Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, and 15 individual officers, and Universal on behalf of itself, three subsidiaries and 16 individual defendants.

Paramount's answer, similar in all major respects to those of other defendants, denied in full 53 paragraphs of the Government's complaint and asserted there was no domination or control of the industry on the part of Paramount, either individually or in concert with other defendants, but that on the contrary the "market is free, open and untrammeled."

In addition, the answer denied knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to 44 paragraphs of the Government complaint which covered the history of the industry and set forth a Government analysis of statistics which it was claimed proved the monopoly.

Among a large number of Government definitions of trade terms which were disputed were those in reference to "block booking," "major producer and distributor," "independent exhibitor," "key cities" and "prerelease."

The answer attacked the Government's charges of harsh and discriminatory selling practices, alleged extension of favors and benefits between major companies, alleged exclusion

Administration Sponsoring Legislation To Halt Profits from Trust Violations

In a move to deprive motion picture and all other corporations of any profit from violation of the anti-trust laws, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee now investigating monopoly, is sponsoring legislation making officers and directors financially responsible for such infringements of the law.

Prepared in cooperation with officials of the Department of Justice and given the approval of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the bill sponsored by the Senator would make officers and directors of law-breaking corporations subject to penalties of twice the amount of their compensation for every month in which a violation occurred and would permit an injunction against their rendering any service to, or receiving any compensation from, their companies for a period ranging from 90 days to permanently.

In addition, any corporation found guilty of anti-trust violations would be penalized to the extent of double its total net income for the entire period of the violation or for every month during which a violation occurred.

Senator O'Mahoney pointed out that the present penalties of the anti-trust statutes are inadequate, that imprisonment is seldom meted out to corporation officials because the public does not consider an economic offense in the same category with an ordinary criminal offense involving moral turpitude, while the relatively small fines imposed are of little moment to large corporations.

"It is my opinion that bringing anti-trust law violations home to the officers who are themselves responsible for these practices will go far to cure many of the restraints of trade which for years have been suppressing business and causing unemployment," he said.

The bill is the first outgrowth of the monopoly investigation which the TNEC has been prosecuting for many months. It is not expected, however, that any action will be taken on the measure before next session.

MAJORS DENY PRODUCTION CONTROL

of independent producers and exhibitors from the best industry markets and the allegations of divisions of territories.

The Government's assertion that, as part of the alleged conspiracy, independent exhibitors were subjected to block booking, forced sales of shorts and newsreels, overbuying, unfair film rentals, score charges and minimum admissions, was denied.

The answer also denied that independent producers were placed in an inferior position, as alleged, by the defendants' refusal to loan stars and technicians and by any deliberate exclusion of their product from the first-run theatre market.

The Government's contention that an independent producer cannot successfully produce high quality pictures unless he has access to first-run theatres upon a fair competitive basis was also disputed.

Assertions that major companies extend preferences and priorities to each other and to affiliated circuits and that the alleged preferences are pursuant to franchises and contracts and apply to theatres subsequently acquired, and that the result was to place independents at an unfair competitive disadvantage, were completely denied.

Cooperation between companies in the form of sharing advertising costs, giving optional contracts, allowing for over-age and under-age and cancellation of shorts as a form of conspirary was also denied. Paramount has not decreased its production of pictures pursuant to any agreement, the answer asserted.

Finally, there was a denial that the majors cooperate to control the production field by an exchange of stars, directors and technicians, by tieing up personnel under contract and by participation in the profits of pictures to the exclusion of independent producers.

In addition to K-A-O's denial of all allegations in the complaint which sought to connect the defendants with an alleged conspiracy, that answer asked a dismissal of the Government action on the grounds that the court had no jurisdiction and no facts had been set forth against K-A-O "on which relief can be granted."

The Twentieth-Fox answer denied the allegations contained in 69 paragraphs of the Government's complaint in their entirety and stated that it had no knowledge or information of the allegations contained in 71 other paragraphs.

It denied any violations of the anti-trust laws and asserted that the finer types of motion pictures are produced by domestic and foreign producers other than the defendants. In other respects the answer is similar to Paramount's.

The National Theatres answer denies all charges of anti-trust law violation and lists a large number of violations about which it says its individual defendants know nothing.

Chase National Bank admitted only that it owns 58 per cent of National Theatres. It denied that the company was a holding concern for Twentieth-Fox theatre interests and denied any connection with monopolistic practices.

The Universal answer claimed that its principals had no knowledge of the subject matter of 107 paragraphs of the Government complaint and denied the allegations of 57 other paragraphs in toto. It denied that Universal Pictures Company, Inc., Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., or Big U Exchange are wholly owned. It denied there was any domination of the industry and charged there was no cause of action set forth.

Warners denied anti-trust law violations. The answer admitted the necessity of access to some of the product of one or more of the defendants or that of other producers of quality pictures in order to operate a first-run theatre successfully. It asserted that all producers of quality pictures have access to the first run market.

Loew's answer was a blanket denial of all violations alleged, admitting only the fundamental and universally accepted industry facts and practices.

Chicago Case Halts Friday

Trial of the Government suit versus Balaban & Katz and the major film companies for alleged violation of a consent decree handed down by Federal Judge Woodward in 1932, continued this week before Master In Chancery Edgar Eldredge in Chicago. The Government, through Special Assistant to the Attorney-General, Robert L. Wright and Seymour Simon, continue Friday, when the court adjourned until September 5th.

Last week various branch managers of Chicago exchanges testified regarding the identification of certain documents. They also explained various clearance methods.

Called also by the Government and as expert witnesses regarding theatre exhibition in Chicago were: Edward Silverman and Emile Stern of Assaness, and Sam Myers, of Wilmette, owner of several outlying theatres.

Mr. Wright questioned Mr. Silverman and Mr. Stern regarding a deal they had arranged with George Schaefer, then general sales manager of United Artists for the exclusive showing of U. A. pictures in the Oriental theatre in Chicago's Loop. At that time Essaness was trying to lease the Oriental theatre which had been dark for some months after many years operation by B&K.

Mr. Schaffer's leaving of U.A. for a position with RKO held up the deal, it was reported, and it fell through. Jones, Linick & Schaefer took over the Oriental later on. No deal was made by them for U.A. pictures, first run.

In his testimony under cross-examination, Mr. Silverman said that he thought 50 per cent of all the pictures made by major companies were of satisfactory quality but that a lesser percentage had box-office appeal that was satisfactory. He also told which of various big stars he thought had box-office appeal and which didn't.

Aaron Jones, Sr., John Jones and R. O. Farrell testified as Government witnesses Wednesday. Both the Jones gave information regarding the threatre setup in the Loop. Mr. Farrell testified regarding Oriental deals.

From the witness stand Mr. Myers elaborated on the number of pictures he thought were money-making pictures from an exhibitor viewpoint. He had a list of them, classified as to the number made by the various companies and this was read into the court record.

Ed Mager, booker for a number of Allied Theatres, was also a witness. He explained the way pictures were marked for release after Loop showing.

It was seen as possible that some attempt may be made by the Government to halt film buying for the coming season until after the trial is over and a decision reached. Country buying is now at its height, exchanges report. City buying as usual will not start until fall. This year it is expected that it will be later than ever as a late buying season seems in the offing due to the legal controversies.

Federal Judge James Wilkerson last Thursday postponed the suit of the independent exhibitors against Balaban & Katz and majors until July 13th. Another postponement is expected at that time.

Famous Players Arrange Program For Convention

The largest convention ever held by Famous Players Canadian Corporation will be the coast-to-coast managers' conference to be held in the General Brock Hotel, Niagara Falls, Ontario, for four days commencing Monday, July 24th.

For years the company held an eastern managers' convention in Toronto, followed by regional conferences in the west. This year all Famous Players men from coast-to-coast will gather. This year will be designated "Record Royal Year" for Famous Players.

On the opening Monday morning three cars of managers from the West and Pacific Coast will arrive in Niagara Falls where they will be met by the men from the east.

Monday morning will be devoted to get-together sessions and registration and the first business meeting will be held in the afternoon where the managers will be addressed by N. L. Nathanson, president; J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president; and C. Robson, T. J. Bragg, B. Geldsaler, M. Stein, L. I. Bearg, R. S. Roddick, F. H. Gow, E. A. Zorn and R. W. Bolstad.

After the general meeting on Monday afternoon, the theatremen will be divided into groups as follows:

Group "A"—Morris Stein's theatres.
Group "B"—R. S. Roddick's theatres.
Group "C"—C. Robson's theatres.
Group "D"—E. Zorn's theatres.
Group "E"—L. I. Bearg and F. Gow's theatres.

The agenda calls for group meetings on Monday evening, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and afternoons. Topics to be deal with include advertising, theatre operation, maintenance, head office and booking.

Booking discussions will be conducted by Ben Geldsaler, theatre operation by J. I. Fitzgibbons, advertising by James R. Nairn, maintenance by E. Harris, and head office by R. W. Bolstad.

The program for Thursday, July 27th, will be as follows: Opening remarks, C. Robson, chairman; addresses by N. L. Nathanson, J. J. Fitzgibbons, T. J. Bragg, E. W. Bolstad, M. Stein, B. Geldsaler, L. I. Bearg, Frank Gow, R. S. Roddick, E. Zorn. Mr. Nathanson will distribute bonus cheques at this meeting.

Arrangements have been made for the use of a sports park near the hotel where guests and home office employees will participate in games.

On Thursday afternoon all managers and home office executives will meet for a discussion of the new season's products. Heads of the various film companies have been invited to speak.

Thursday evening all managers and the company's guests will attend a banquet. A number of speakers will address the gathering, including A-Mike Vogel, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

J. J. Fitzgibbons, who is still recuperating after an operation, will make his first appearance at the conference.

A "Show of Showmanship," one of the highlights of last year's meeting will be featured.

The show that licked the World's Fair!

Happy days again on Broadway! The biggest crowds since New Year's storm the Roxy's doors! Week-days...a line a block long waits for the break! And still they come! And still they wait! HELD OVER...of course!

SECOND FIDDLE

ACTORS' UNION FIGHT NEARS COURT STAGE; CHIEFS FACE TRIAL MONDAY

American Federation of Actors Officers Deny Jurisdiction of Parent "Four A's" in Intra-Organization Trial

The courts may be asked to arbitrate the dispute between the leadership of the American Federation of Actors and the parent actors' union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, it was indicated this week, as Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA this week prepared to stand trial, on Monday, before a special board of the AAAA. The complaint charges misuse of funds, including diversion to general union use of funds obtained from benefits, and "undemocratic processes" within the union.

Legal Basis Not Defined

The request that the courts use their authority may be made if the case goes against the AFA officers, it was said; however, it is not known whether an inter-union battle such as this one, which has received mention in the press as an "actors' squabble" and as a fight somewhat leavened by comedy—would have a basis for legal action.

The AFA denies the power and jurisdiction of the AAAA to order a member union to trial. At an appearance before the Actors' Association last Thursday, and by letter and lawyer's notice, the Federation officially made this denial; and further demanded a bill of particulars from the parent organization. There also have been charges, made in the AFA paper, and by its leaders that the trial is "fixed"; that it is the result of a "plot" to oust the Federation officers from positions in which they have "made the union the strongest actors' union in America."

The reply of the AAAA to the Federation request for a bill of particulars was delivered on Wednesday of this week. However, the substance of the charges was made known some time ago. They were made after an investigation by a special committee of the AAAA, headed by Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative of the Screen Actors' Guild. The investigation had been requested by Mr. Whitehead himself, who stated, publicly, that he desired such an investigation to clear up "ugly rumors" in circulation about misuse of funds and other instances of mismanagement.

Several procedures appear open to the parent organization if it finds the AFA leadership guilty. It may revoke the organization charter, and parcel out jurisdiction over its membership to other actors' unions; it may revoke the charter and re-issue it to the union, dependent upon displacement of Mr. Whitehead as executive secretary, and, presumably, Miss Sophie Tucker, as president.

Secession Possible

Some procedures, aside from trying to have the courts take the case, appear open to the AFA officers. They may secede; though Mr. Whitehead and others denied such intention. Observers doubt the practicability of such action; inasmuch as the union would then have to operate outside of the American Federation of Labor, which has organized virtually all other branches of the entertainment industry.

Regardless of the trial's outcome, a rebellious group within the Federation, known as "The Ferrets," seem determined to continue their fight to oust the Tucker-Whitehead leadership, and obtain a greater voice, as they have put it, in the control, and benefits, of the union.

Miss Tucker, at a recent meeting which broke up in a near riot, took the attack on the AFA leadership, as a personal affront. Critics, among them Eddie Cantor, a past president, and Fred Keating, also a past president, replied that the attack was directed at Mr. Whitehead's leadership, not at Miss Tucker; and that she was mistaken in defending the administration; some charged that Miss Tucker was being used as a "front." Mr. Cantor resigned from the Federation council.

"The Ferrets" met last week at the Palm Gardens, in New York City, and requested that the administration resign; approved the AAAA investigation; asked the AFA officers to abide by the trial decisions; and asked the AAAA to consider the grievances of the AFA rank-and-file.

The dispute has brought out the inter-factional feeling within the AAAA; arising from charges of discrimination in the proportion of votes accorded to individual unions. The Federation has asked, publicly, for more votes; and charged that the Screen Actors' Guild, now the largest member union, is not entitled to its present voting power.

At the hearing on Thursday, Abraham Halprin, AFA attorney, charged that "one real reason" for the charges which have culminated in the approaching trial was a desire on the part of Actors' Equity to achieve control over the AFA membership. Mr. Halprin cited a deal, the terms of which, he said, provided for the assignation of television actors to the jurisdiction of the Screen Actors' Guild, in return for granting Equity control over the AFA members.

Hollywood Court Fight Continues

In Hollywood, the court fracas between the international officership of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees, and the deposed officers and membership of the technicians' union, Local 37, continues this week. The insurgents seek restoration of local autonomy, their officers having been deposed, and their charter revoked. They have charged that dues collected from them by the international representatives were never porperly accounted for, and that the international officers had removed all semblance of local autonomy.

The defense has contended that the drastic steps taken against local 37 had been necessary for a number of reasons, chief being "Communistic" tendencies.

On Friday, the defense called five international vice-presidents—Harlan Holmden, of Cleveland; William Patrick, of Canada; Roger Kennedy, of Detroit; Richard Walsh, of Brooklyn; and James Brennan, of Newark—who testified that George Browne, International president, had told them about conditions in the local.

It appeared possible that the defense might close its case this week.

Guilds Conduct Negotiations

Other Hollywood union news included the following:

Hearing this Thursday by the National Labor Relations Board, on the application of the Screen Cartoonists' Guild for certification as the exclusive bargaining agency with Loew's, Leon Schlesinger, Walter Lantz, and the Raymond Katz studios.

Meetings this week between representatives of the Screen Actors' Guild and the Artists' Managers' Guild, to prevent an open break over the licensing agreement for agents, the terms of which had been thought agreed upon.

Negotiations over a "guild shop" for the Screen Publicists' Guild, between the labor representatives of the Motion Picture Producers Association and the Guild, with "only a few minor details" said to be awaiting settlement.

Submission to the studios of the closed shop agreement with the Screen Set Designers.

Formation of a written request for wage arbitration, by the coast advertising agencies. This will refer to the increased wage scales asked, under the contract submitted, under pressure, some time ago, to the agencies and broadcasters by the American Federation of Radio Artists.

Theatre Employees Negotiate

In New York, employees of the Five Boro circuit met Wednesday to consider a contract being negotiated for them with the circuit by the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers' Union, organizers of "front office" employees. The union was withholding action, pending settlement of the Five Boro case, on its complaints against 160 independent New York theatres, before the State Labor Relations Board. The union wants recognition from the board, or a vote by the employees of the theatres named. The union claims it has members, though not in the majority, in some 100 more New York independent houses.

In New York also, agreement was expected this week between the Local 306, projectionists' union, and the World's Fair management, appertaining to showing of a documentary film, "The City," at the Fair. Tentative agreement had been accomplished, but the union membership was still to ratify.

In Hartford, Connecticut, a rival unions' fight has resulted in the resumption of picketing in front of the E. M. Loew house there. The picketing is allowed under a recent state Supreme Court ruling.

In Indianapolis, Charles M. Olson was to close his Lyric this Thursday, rather than meet increased pay demands by the Local 30, stagehands union.

In White Center, Washington, the Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 154, ceased picketing the Center Theatre, under agreement reached by the union with W. T. Coy and Ernest Lindgren, the theatre owners. The theatre's suit against the union's demand that union operators be employed, will continue.

Newmann to Albany

Arthur Newmann, special Albany representative for Republic, is expected to become branch manager in that city for the company, on August 1, when the Berkowitz-Mills franchise expires.

SPONSORS BOWLING TEAM, NEWSREELS

In addition to sponsoring a bowling team, Leo T. Jones of the Star theatre, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, covers local news for his own newsreel. Mr. Jones films such events as local ball games and hands out notices as to when the pictures will be shown at the Star. The negative is shipped out of town for development and is back within 12 hours.

Mr. Jones, now in New York for a visit, is filming points of interest which will be used in the house newsreel. Theatre business in Upper Sandusky, a town of 3,400 population, has been satisfactory, Mr. Jones said.

ILLINOIS WOULD LIMIT FILM SHOWS; PRESIDENT RENEWS ADMISSION TAX

Illinois Bill, Already Passed in House and Senate, Awaits Signing by Governor Horner; Purpose Is to Stop Dual Bills

by WILLIAM CROUCH
in Chicago

The latest motion picture legislation to be passed by Illinois lawmakers has replaced the business slump, the various anti-trust lawsuits and the advent of night baseball and free band concerts in the attention of Chicagoland and Illinois exhibitors. In the main this bill states that motion picture programs shall not be more than two hours and fifteen minutes in length.

Veto Hoped For

The bill, intended to halt double bills, first passed the House with the specifications that after every two hours of continuous film a fifteen minute intermission must be held, but was revised in the Senate to allow for 135 minutes of screen fare without interruption. Two feature pictures of average length cannot be shown in 135 minutes in most instances. Many exhibitors think that Governor Henry Horner will veto the bill—almost as many think he will sign it.

Edward Silverman, executive of the Essaness circuit, whose theatres show double and triple features is heartily in favor of the bill. His organization is a member of Allied Theatres of Illinois, which organization is said to be predominantly in favor of the bill. Jack Kirsch, president of Allied said that some of his members were against the bill, most of them for it. He denied reports that his group instigated the action which resulted in the bill being introduced.

In a statement following the passage of the bill before the House, Mr. Silverman disclosed that he thought both independent and affiliated circuits would benefit.

Mr. Silverman also said features pictures are much too long. They could be cut considerably, he believes, with no ill effect. Asked if he thought film companies would cut their pictures so that Illinois exhibitors could show two pictures during the allotted time he pointed out that if such wasn't done the exhibitors could do it themselves without hurting the picture, to any great extent.

John Balaban, head of the Balaban & Katz circuit, major theatre group here, said that what he thought was the most harmful thing about the bill was that it opened the way for further legislation of the motion picture business by the state governing bodies. It was, he said, starting something, that were it to continue would put the operation of theatres into the hands of the state rather than have them run by the persons that own them.

Pictures such as "Only Angels Have Wings," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "The Great Zeigfeld," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "San Francisco," "Union Pacific," "Gunga Din," "Jesse James," "Dark Victory" and "Juarez" would under the new law have to be shown on single feature programs as they run well over 100 minutes in most instances. However, some of the exhibitors who run double features say that when they show such films they will have a fifteen minute intermission halfway through the picture, and thus be able to work the long films in on a double feature plan.

It is also pointed out that exhibitors through the media of special trailers can inform their audiences just why they have to have their film programs made up according to state edict. Trailers which will point out that the theatre is forced to run their programs as the state dictates may have some effect towards changing the status of the law by repeal in case it is passed.

DISPLAY FLAG ON OBSERVANCE DAYS

P. J. Wood, of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in the organization's current bulletin lists the days on which "the American flag should be displayed." The days as listed are:

February 12, Abraham Lincoln's Birthday
February 22, George Washington's Birthday
April 6, Army Day
May 30, Memorial Day
June 14, Flag Day
July 4, Independence Day
September 4, Labor Day
October 12, Columbus Day
October 27, Navy Day
November 11, Armistice Day

The list follows "unpleasantness experienced by a small town exhibitor of an Ohio city after Decoration Day when he met with severe criticism for his failure to display the American flag," according to Mr. Wood.

Marquees Exempt From Display Ban

That New York City's theatre marquees will not be affected by actions taken by the City Planning Commission is seen as definite, with a recent pronouncement of the Commission stating that the revised version of the plan to eliminate billboards exempts from the definition of a billboard a theatre marquee and other signs having to do with the identification of the business transacted in a particular building. Rexford Guy Tugwell, chairman of the Commission, had also given assurances that theatre signs would not be affected.

Stanley M. Isaacs, Manhattan Borough president, declared himself against the Commission's plan to limit signs and other displays in Times Square, when speaking at a recent testimonial luncheon tendered Eddie Cantor. Mr. Isaacs said "I want to see no control that will dim the bright lights of Broadway. Entertainments are the life blood of the city."

Technicolor Dividend

Dr. Herman T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, announced that at a meeting held last Wednesday, in New York, a dividend of 35 cents per share was declared payable July 17, 1939, to stockholders of record at the close of business on July 7.

Quebec Exhibitors Challenge Right of City to Show Films After 11 Owners Close in Protest Against Increased Taxes

Legislative activities, Federal, state and local, affecting the industry, included the continuation of actions previously started but there were few new developments this week.

President Roosevelt, at the eleventh hour, signed the admission tax, continuing the 10 per cent levy for another two years. Unless signed by Friday midnight, the bill would have expired.

Quebec Exhibitors Fight

Operators of the 11 theatres in Quebec, whose 11 houses have been closed since June as a protest against increased taxation, are preparing to examine the city's right to exhibit films, while local exchanges indicated that they would not be able to supply product to the two civic houses.

Indications that the City of Quebec would answer the closing of its theatres by providing films in its own civic theatres were seen with the announcement by Mayor Lucien Borne that the Quebec City Council had purchased two film projectors in Montreal. It was said by city officials that one projector would be used in the Montcalm Palace Municipal Theatre and the other for the showing of open air silent pictures during the summer.

While investigation of the city charter was being conducted, some grounds for belief that the city might retreat from its stand were given in a statement by Premier Maurice Duplessis who said the government was "ready to take the necessary steps to reopen the theatres."

Local exchanges have indicated that even if the city went through with its plan of showing or providing the facilities for the showing of films, it would be unable to get product. It was said by distribution officials that available product is under contract to the 11 theatres in Quebec City, and that contracts are binding to the extent that films cannot be released to opposition theatres.

Ohio Tax Suits

The filing of a demurrer by Aubrey Wendt, defense attorney, in lieu of a formal answer to the writs of mandamus, Franklin County Court of Appeals, in Columbus Ohio, has granted the extension to July 15th for the filing of an answer to the two suits of John Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the Ohio tax commission. The suits challenge the authority of the Tax Commission to exempt film rentals from the State sales tax, and urge the collection of $1,250,000 claimed due the state for taxes since the inception of the law.

Local authorities in Seattle will not take action against theatres refusing to comply with Prosecuting Attorney B. Gray Warner's order invoging a 1909 "Blue Law" ordinance requiring all theatres and other amusements to close on Sundays.

The new North Dakota law levying a tax of three per cent of the gross earnings of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers within the state became effective last Saturday. The law also requires that ASCAP file in Bismarck, the state capital, a list of the musical compositions on which it claims to hold copyright.

CONTRACTS AND ARBITRATION ARE ANALYZED IN THIRD OF CODE SERIES

Nizer Discusses Allocation, Coercion, Selective Contracts, Order of Playing, Other Subjects of Arbitration

by LOUIS NIZER

Clause IX—Allocation of Features

Where a distributor has a right under his contract to allocate features to certain price brackets, he must notify the exhibitor of the price allocation at the time he sends notice of availability of each feature.

Outside Time Limit. The notice of price allocation must be given not later than fourteen days after the national release date to the first run exhibitors in key cities.

Changing Price Allocation. After notice of price allocation for a particular theatre has been given, it may not be changed except by mutual agreement between the distributor and exhibitor.

Clause X—Form of Contract

Each distributor will use its best effort to simplify its form of contract.

Clause XI—Selective Contracts

Whenever an exhibitor has the right under a contract to select a number of features out of a larger number, he must exercise this right by written notice of selection or rejection.

Time of Notice. Such notice must be given within twenty-one days after the mailing of the notice of availability of each feature.

Failure To Give Notice. Failure of the exhibitor to give written notice within the time specified, constitutes an acceptance of the picture by the exhibitor.

Clause XII—
Playing Features in Order of Release

If the contract provides that the exhibitor is obligated to play features in the order of their release, the distributor will not withhold features because previous features were not exhibited by the exhibitor if such failure on the part of the exhibitor was due to the fact that the distributor did not make previous pictures available.

Arbitration. Any dispute under this section is subject to arbitration.

Clause XIII—Coercing Contracts

No distributor shall coerce or intimidate an exhibitor into making a contract by threatening:

(a) To build or otherwise acquire a theatre, or

(b) By falsely representing that any other person will build or acquire a theatre in competition with the exhibitor.

Notice of Claim. An exhibitor shall have no right to assert a claim that he has been so coerced or intimidated unless he mails to the distributor, at its home office, written notice of such claim and the grounds for the claim, within 48 hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application of the contract.

Powers of Arbitrators. Any dispute as to whether an exhibitor was so coerced or intimidated is subject to arbitration. The powers of the arbitrators in such a dispute are limited to:

(a) A finding as to whether the exhibitor was so coerced or intimidated, and if they find that he was, then

(b) An award cancelling the contract.

DE-CODING THE CODE

This is the third of a series by Louis Nizer, motion picture lawyer, interpreting in lay language the motion picture code as drafted by the majors.

In the first installment, appearing on page 31, June 24th, the following clauses were interpreted:

I—Exclusion Privileges, Cancellations
II—Trade Announcement

In the second installment, appearing on page 30, July 1st, the next six clauses were interpreted:

III—Public Demand for Exceptional Feature
IV—Preferred Playing Time
V—Some Run Available
VI—Regular Customer
VII—Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.
VIII—Score Charges

In the third installment, appearing herewith, seven more clauses are interpreted:

IX—Allocation of Features
X—Form of Contract
XI—Selective Contracts
XII—Playing Features in the Order of Release
XIII—Coercing Contracts
XIV—Other Subjects of Arbitration
XV—Agreement to Arbitrate

Clause XIV—
Other Subjects of Arbitration

(1) Performance Of Contracts. If a distributor or exhibitor claims that the other has breached the contract, the dispute shall be submitted to arbitration.

Powers Of Arbitrators. The powers of the arbitrators in such dispute are limited to:

(a) A finding as to whether or not the contract has been breached, and if it has, then

(b) An award for one of three things:

(1) Specific performance of the provisions of the contract, or

(2) The actual amount of damages for each feature involved, which amount shall not be more than the liquidated damages provided in the contract (except in such case as is described in subdivision (3) immediately following), or

(3) If the arbitrators find that the distributor arbitrarily and wilfully, and without color of right repudiated the contract by refusing to deliver to the exhibitor the pictures, or caused the showing of the picture in violation of run or clearance, then they may grant the amount of actual and compensatory damage (not punitive) for each feature involved.

(2) Clearance. The distributor and exhibitor recognize the following principles:

(a) That reasonable clearance with respect to time and area is necessary in distribution and exhibition of pictures.

(b) That an exhibitor has the right, without restriction, to contract for any run which he is able to negotiate with the distributor, and also

(c) That a distributor has the right, without restriction, to contract for any run which it is able to negotiate with an exhibitor (excepting only where the distributor abandons a regular customer to sell to a circuit: see Article VI entitled "REGULAR CUSTOMER," Motion Picture Herald, July 1, page 30).

Arbitration Of Clearance Disputes. Any dispute as to whether or not the existing clearance under the conditions involved in any particular case is unreasonable, shall be subject to arbitration.

Powers Of Arbitrators. The powers of arbitrators in a clearance dispute are limited to:

(a) A finding as to whether or not the theatre complained of is entitled to clearance, and if it is, then

(b) An award for the reasonable maximum clearance to which such theatre is entitled.

(3) Overbuying. If an exhibitor claims that another exhibitor has overbought with the intent and effect of depriving the complaining exhibitor of sufficient pictures to operate his theatre, the dispute shall be subject to arbitration.

Principles Guiding Arbitrators. In such a dispute, the arbitrators shall make due allowance:

(a) For a sufficient number of pictures reasonably to protect the exhibitor from non-delivery and failure to make pictures available, and

(b) Give due regard to the type of operating policy of the theatre operated by such defendant exhibitor.

In no event shall an exhibitor be considered overbought if the product obtained by him does not exceed by more than 15% his maximum requirements.

Findings of Arbitrators. If the arbitrators find overbuying exists, they shall specifically decide the number of pictures which the exhibitor has overbought.

Remedy. The exhibitor who is found to be so overbought, shall be given a fourteen-day period from the date of the arbitrators' decision, to obtain a release from his contracts of the excess number of pictures. If the exhibitor does not obtain such release, the arbitrators shall make an award apportioning among distributors whose contracts he has, the number of features to be released by them to the complaining exhibitor.

Condition Of Award. No award directing the distributors to release pictures to another exhibitor shall be made unless an assurance is given to each distributor that it will receive from the complaining exhibitor for the pictures released, no lesser price and no less favorable terms than existed in the contract of the overbought exhibitor.

Cancellation Modified. Cancellation rights of an exhibitor who has been found to be overbought, shall be computed on the basis of the modified contract.

(4) Price, Other Terms and Conditions. Neither price nor other terms and conditions of a proposed contract shall be the subject of arbitration. They are to be determined only by mutual agreement between distributor and exhibitor.

Clause XV—
Conditions Agreement to Arbitrate

Every one who signs the Code, agrees to arbitrate with anyone else who signs the Code, any dispute which is subject to arbitration under this Code or the Rules of Arbitration which are annexed.

Rules Of Arbitration. The rules of arbitration annexed to the Code shall be followed in such arbitration procedure.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

IN THE CHILDREN'S WORLD of always-carnationed Grover Whalen's opera bouffe World's Fair, New York, Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip presides over an autograph bar. The bar is just outside Shirley Temple Doll House. You can buy celebrities' signatures for anywhere from 25 cents to $5. You can get a James A. Farley for 25 cents, the Lunts together for 50, Chief Justice Hughes for 50 cents and a Clark Gable for $1. Among the 25-centers can be found Maurice Evans, General Hugh Johnson, J. Edgar Hoover and Boris (scare-'em) Karloff. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is among the 50-centers. So are Geraldine Farrar, Tyrone Power and Norma Shearer.

Artists' signed sketches are rated as follows: Thurbers, $1; H. T. Webster, $5; Helen Hokinson, $1; Rube Goldbergs, $1. A bargain basement buy is the Ritz Brothers—all three for 25 cents.

They wrote to Mahatma Gandhi for his autograph. A month later back came a letter saying the Mahatma would sell it for $3, the $3 to be used for untouchables. The letter was signed, but not, of course, by the Mahatma.

Many a story has come out of the California movie-making sector about things fantastic, about how they turn things into the unrealistic just for a turn of the camera. Not directly identified with motion picture production, but closely related thereto because of its proximity, is the tale of Mrs. Abbie Hobson, of Hollywood, who swears that a little fish swam and he swam—right out of her kitchen faucet and into the sink.

That's like the persons who swear that they pick up radio broadcasts through the fillings of their teeth, the most recent report coming only the other day from Salt Lake City, through United Press, describing a one-room cabin on the alkaline salt flats west of Salt Lake which is used by sheepherders and has as its main attraction a stove which the sheepmen declare plays music the while it cooks and has electric lights that burn without being directly connected to a power line. The shack stands but a few feet from the transmitting terminals of a 50,000-watt radio station and the radiating radio waves operate the singing stove and connectionless lights.

Charlie Laughton, in New York on his way from London to Hollywood to work in "Hunchback of Notre Dame" for RKO, confided to the New York Post's Michael Mok that he thought Barret McCormick's press agent boys at RKO headquarters had planted a picture of the French Notre Dame Cathedral in his hotel room. Mr. Mok enlightened the burly Laughton on the fact that the print was that of the Rheims Cathedral.

Associated Press the other day told in headlines that: "JAMES ROOSEVELT BUYS BOAT ON INSTALLMENT PLAN." A few days later the announcement came from Hollywood that Samuel Goldwyn had given him a new contract as his vice president—at a salary increase of $10,000 annually. That little raise will help Jimmy meet those 12 monthly payments for his new Half Moon yacht.

DEEP under the dust of old in the attic of the old Criminal Courts Building, adjoining Tombs Prison, in New York, the city government, via WPA, is digging-up mementos of crimes of yesteryear, dusting them off, cataloguing them for a place later in the new Criminal Courts Building now going up.

Somehow, no one seems to really know, seven reels of Charlie Chaplin's "The Kid," which brought the beginning of Jackie Coogan, and an old Mary Pickford film, found their way into the "death museum," along with French postcards, hatchets bloodied in Chinatown tong wars, an unidentified skeleton, pictures of Thomas A. Edison standing beside a trolley he invented at about the time he was tinkering with the Kinetoscope to show movies.

Altogether there are some 50,000 items and for the past two years 20 WPA men wearing dust masks have been classifying them for District Attorney Thomas Dewey.

To date they have dusted off about 35,000 pieces, among them 400 packages of clothing worn by as many men, women and children when they were murdered; the gun with which Harry K. Thaw slew Stanford White; the knife with which Hans Schmidt carved Anna Aumuller; bushels of roulette and poker chips seized when William Travers Jerome raided Canfield's gambling place long before he quit as New York District Attorney to get Technicolor a-going.

The District Attorney's WPAers found the pearl-handled, nickelplated revolver (all numerals filed off) which an uncaught murderer used on December 4, 1929 to murder Arnold Rothstein in New York's Park Central Hotel. Then there's an old-fashioned gramophone, a collection of ball bats, cases of Leiderkranz cheese, aspirin tablets, bottles of poison, bad liquor from prohibition days, a typewriter that belonged to Gaston B. Means, the Department of Justice man turned crook, who died in prison not long ago.

Leon Stone writes from Sydney, Australia, to Rob Wagner, in Beverley Hills, California, about how Universal reckoned that they had plenty of shocks for the average film fan in "Son of Frankenstein," backing that belief with an advertisement stating: "Lloyds of London will pay the total sum of one thousand pounds ($5,000) to the next of kin of any patron dying in any theatre in Australia from heart failure directly caused by and during the screening."

RKO Radio in Hollywood, Dave Epstein tells us, anticipates such great crowds of newspaper and magazine writers and exhibitors as visitors on the set of their "Hunchback of Notre Dame" that the studio management is considering the erection of a "visitors' grandstand," a sort of "review balcony"— the old optimists.

Grasshoppers and crickets used to be only for farmers to howl about directly, the showman indirectly. That's all changed this season in Nebraska, and the exhibitors are coming in direct contact. Armies of grasshoppers and crickets are in evidence, and they force their way under doors, hide behind theatre upholstery and drapes. Besides snatching nibbles at the theatre interior, they croak so loudly during the picture that it interferes with the dialogue.

FRANK BUCK and many others of his wild-animal filming clan, have brought back many a strange tale for the delight of their showmanship-minded press agents, and with which to edify their exhibitor customers. Many a time they have winked at some of the strange things they have put on the screen in the name of wild things in wild lands. But let them beat, if they can, the tale just brought to London of the "Tarzan" existence of a South African Negro boy said to have been kidnaped and reared by a band of baboons as described in a report by Professor Raymond A. Dart, of the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa, which was issued in London.

According to the report, the boy was about 12 years old when he was found and rescued by white men. He could make only the guttural sounds of the anthropoids with which he had lived. Since then the boy, now named Lucas, has learned to speak Afrikaans (South African Dutch) and has given a vivid account of his experiences.

"My food consisted mainly of crickets, ostrich eggs, prickly pears, green mealies (corn) and wild honey," he said. "I was kicked on the head by an ostrich while raiding its nest, and often was stung by bees while robbing hives.

"While with the baboons I walked on all fours and slept in the bush, entirely naked.

"I was hunting food one day with my baboon companions when two men shot at us with revolvers, and I was captured."

Professor Gates said he believed the boy's account, and said it was the first known case of a child adopted and reared by anthropoids, although bears and wolves, he said, have been known in several instances to have reared human beings.

"For the past four weeks, the author of this bulletin has been wrestling around with something worse than triple features, dish nights and figuring out how to pay a $650 Bank Nite with only $92.50 in the till. He has heard of 5,253 cures and, if he lives long enough, hopes to find the one that applies to him. On top of all this, 'Pete, Jr.' has announced that he is tossing his bachelorhood into the discard next Monday by bringing another Daughter into the family, all of which, coupled with the fact that the "old man" must toast the Bride and Groom with lithia water, places him in about the same category as an independent exhibitor in Texas trying to buy pictures against Interstate.

"If any of you who read this bulletin have any known cures for neuritis, please send 'em along."

Summer Setups

Coming down to the last of June, Hollywood started seven pictures and completed the same number during the month's closing week. The most important picture in the new work unquestionably is "Drums Along the Mohawk," a 20th Century-Fox production. A stirring adventure story, being filmed in color, it will feature Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda with John Carradine, Eddie Collins and Doris Bowdon in addition to scores more who will be assigned roles later. Incidentally, this studio also started another picture, "Tin Hats," a comedy in which Jane Withers will be starred in company with the Ritz Brothers, Lynn Bari, Billy Benedict and Stanley Fields.

Universal and Columbia vied for the honor of having chosen the most macabre titles. The first named company began work on "They Can't Hang Me," in which Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie, Robert Noble, Bruce Lister and Walter Kingsford will be seen. Columbia's startling title is "The Man They Could Not Hang." It will serve as a vehicle for Boris Karloff, Roger Prior, Lorna Grey, Robert Wilcox, Ann Doran and Don Beddoe. Republic also chose an exciting title for a picture, "Mob Fury," in which Barry Mackay, Rochelle Hudson, Cliff Edwards and George Barbier will be featured.

The title for the RKO-Radio new production is not so odd, but the length of "The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" will undoubtedly pose a problem for exhibitors whose marquee space is limited. First of a proposed new series, it will feature Edith Fellowes, Dorothy Peterson, Clarence Kolb, Ronald Sinclair, Dorothy Ann Seece and Tommy Bond.

Monogram started "The Girl From Rio," a musical romance being produced by E. B. Derr in which Movita, Warren Hull, Clay Clement, Dennis Moore and Soledad Jiminez will appear.

RKO Completes Two

Two of the seven completed pictures are credited to RKO-Radio. "My Fifth Avenue Girl," produced and directed by Gregory La-Cava, will star Ginger Rogers with Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams, Veree Teasdale, Franklin Pangborn, Ferike Boros, Louis Calhern, Theodore von Eltz and Alexander D'Arcy. Herbert Wilcox is the producer-director and Anna Neagle is the star of the second completed picture, "Nurse Edith Cavell." The pictorial story of the World War martyr-nurse will also present Edna May Oliver, George Sandets, May Robson, Zasu Pitts, Sophie Stewart and H. B. Warner.

MGM completed two pictures, one a comedy with music, the other a mystery melodrama. The adaptation of the Rogers and Hart stage success "Babes In Arms" will present Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Grace Hayes, Betty Jaynes, Douglas McPhail, June Preisser, Margaret Hamilton, Guy Kibbee, Rand Brooks and Henry Hull. Director Tod Browning's successor to such eerie films as "Dracula" and "The Devil Doll," "Miracles For Sale" will have Robert Young, Florence Rice, Henry Hull, Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn, Frank Craven, Al Minjirk, Armand Kaliz, Gloria Holden and Frederick Worlock in the cast.

Paramount completed "The World On Parade," theme of which visions possible happenings in international relations once television becomes practical. It will present William Henry, Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., Richard Denning, Minor Watson, Dorothy Tree, John Eldgredge and others.

At 20th Century-Fox "Heaven With A Barbed Wire Fence" was completed. Jean Rogers, Glen Ford, Raymond Walburn, Eddie Collins and Nicholas Conte are the principals.

The featured players in Universal's "Fury of the Tropics" are Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Beverly Roberts and Samuel S. Hind.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

"The Grapes of Wrath" by John Steinbeck for the third time in succession leads the listing of best sellers of fiction and for the first time moves into the top spot of the best renters, finally supplanting the leader for many months, Rachel Fields' "All This, and Heaven Too", according to the monthly tabulations of "Best Sellers and Renters" in The Retail Bookseller, house organ of The Baker & Taylor Company, New York.

10. Guns of Burgoyne, by Bruce Lancaster.

Remote Locations

Trips to far away location sites for fresh and new as well as authentic production settings are again a vogue in Hollywood. An examination of 1939-40 production programs reveals that practically every major company will make several distant journeys. At the moment Paramount's artists and technicians are doing considerable train riding. Although producer-director William A. Wellman returned the main unit of "The Light That Failed" in which Ronald Colman, Walter Huston and Dudley Digges will be featured from Sante Fe, New Mexico, he left a second unit in charge of assistant Joe Youngerman on the banks of the Rio Grande which will serve as the River Nile in the pictorial version of Rudyard Kipling's story. This unit consists of about two score Hollywood stunt riders, 250 New Mexico National Guardsmen and several hundred Negro fuzzywuzzies. Simultaneously Harry Sherman's "Argentina" company of several hundred is working in the High Sierras.

Friday night MGM despatched a twelve car train, including three box-cars loaded with props and wardrobe to Payette Lake, Idaho, to begin the actual shooting of "Northwest Passage." The company, headed by King Vidor who will direct and Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Larraine Day and Isabel Jewell will spend at least three full weeks at the location.

On Tuesday, 20th Century-Fox started a trainload of people including director John Ford and stars Henry Fonda and Claudette Colbert to Cedar City, Utah, to begin work on "Drums Along the Mohawk." This picture and "Northwest Passage" will be photographed in color.

Meanwhile as Cecil B. DeMille, Jesse Lasky, Jr., Alan LeMay, Jeannie MacPherson and Frank Calvin are working on the script and compiling research data for "Royal Canadian Mounted Police," DeMille's assistant, Bill Pine is scouting the Canadian Rockies for desirable locations.

Candidates for Fame

Joe Pasternak, Universal producer, under whose tutelage Deanna Durbin attained eminence, and who recently brought Robert Cummings into the limelight, will introduce two new candidates for screen fame, Lewis Howard and Robert Stack, in Miss Durbin's next picture, "First Love."

Neither has had any previous screen experience, but both youths who have just turned twenty were placed under long term contracts after successfully completing screen tests.

Howard, a native New Yorker, was discovered by casting director Dan Kelly last fall while the youngster was appearing on the Broadway stage in "The Fabulous Invalid" and was attracting much attention with his impersonations of celebrities. His only other stage experience a revival of "The Petrified Forest."

Stack who has lived in Los Angeles all his life graduated from the El Capitan College of the Theatre to leads in the Las Palmas Little Theatre productions.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Second Fiddle

(20th Century-Fox)

All-Purpose Entertainment

This is that best of possible answers to any and all box office problems, a sound piece of all-purpose entertainment, a film as appropriate for one part of the country as another, as suitable for little theatres as big ones and as interesting to the kiddies as to grownups or vice versa. There are about as many ways to sell it to the customers as there are kinds of customers to buy it. As witness:

Showmen whose patrons hold that Sonja Henie can do no wrong can tell them this picture proves she can do other things important to the screen besides skate;

Exhibitors whose patrons have been asking them to see what they can do about getting Tyrone Power out of character makeup can inform them that this matter has been attended to this time by casting him as a studio press agent and letting him play it as if he were one;

Theatremen who have heard mixed comments about Rudy Vallee's screen endeavors may notify the malcontents that the radio star is presented this time as a picture actor of just about the stature he really is;

That large numbers of citizens reared on Irving Berlin music can be put on notice that the ace writer of popular songs delivers six of them in this picture, and those millions who count stories about Hollywood incomparable diversion may be told that this is a Hollywood story of the liveliest and most likeable kind.

In answer to other inevitable questions, showmen can tell their ticket sellers and doormen to reply.

Yes, it is a comedy.

No, it isn't about a violinist.

Yes, Mr. Vallee sings some songs in it, and so does Mary Healy, a young woman well worth listening to.

No, it doesn't belabor a message, plead a cause or carry the banner for anything but entertainment.

Yes, it's swell.

As a matter of fact, "Second Fiddle" is the sort of picture the cinema lives by. It is not tremendous or spectacular or stupendous, but it packs a full cargo of amusing situations, humorous dialogue, catchy tunes, competent performances and good natured kidding of Hollywood and its institutions.

The picture opens and continues for quite a spell as a smiling satire on David O. Selznick's protracted search for an actress to play Scarlett O'Hara. Miss Henie plays the young woman discovered in snowy Minnesota and brought to Hollywood to play the part, Mr. Power portraying the press agent sent to bring her in alive. Later on he cooks up one of those printer's-ink romances between the young lady and a male star who needs a buildup, played by Mr. Vallee, and still later learns he's in love with her himself. Ultimately he convinces her the condition is mutual.

Personally experienced as they are in these matters, the three principals turn in remarkably natural performances. Intimacy with their subject undoubtedly accounts in some measure also for the superior services rendered Darryl Zanuck by his associate producer, Gene Markey, his director, Sidney Lanfield, and Harry Tugend, who wrote the screen play based on a story by Felix Jackson. It is as though all these gentlemen and the several members of the cast enjoyed the production project so thoroughly that the good time had by all inevitably and quite delightfully permeated the picture.

"I'm Sorry for Myself" topped the other five Berlin songs in preview applause. "Back to Back," a dance song, could be another "Lambeth Walk" if the ballroom crowd happens to like it. Edna May Oliver gives the picture some of the best laughs she's supplied in years.

Previewed at the Chinese theatre, Hollywood, to an audience composed of press, profession and plain people, the picture made everybody happy.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Career

(RKO-Radio)

Middle Western Comedy Drama

This is the picture which listeners to Jesse L. Lasky's Gateway to Hollywood radio program have been hearing about this long while as the one in which the John Archer and Alice Eden brought to Hollywood as consequence of his quest for talent make their screen debut. Clearly, the first thing a showman should know about it is whether it is of a quality to bear up under the ready-made exploitation provided by this radio background, and the answer to that is that it is.

Producer Bob Sisk exercised extraordinary judgement in his selection of story, staff and personnel. Phil Stong's novel, adapted by Bert Granet and written for the screen by Dalton Trumbo, is a homespun story about people who live in a small Iowa town and do what people who lived in small Iowa towns in 1931 were doing. Director Leigh Jason may or may not have been among those present in those parts about then, but he couldn't have reproduced the mannerisms and behaviors of the population more faithfully if he'd had his own money in the bank that survived the big crash only to run into its own troubles later on.

Extremely wise was Mr. Sisk, also, in putting the burden of entertainment upon such competent shoulders as those of Edward Ellis and Samuel S. Hinds, cast as boyhood rivals grown to civic rivalry in their gray years, and those of Janet Beecher, Leon Errol and Raymond Hatton, the last two realistically portraying town drunkards of the type that were more laughed with than at in the drugstore liquor era. It was with further thought to the marquee needs of exhibitors that Anne Shirley was given the most exacting of the romantic assignments on the distaff side.

The story played out by these veterans and the two newcomers is the sort of story that happens in Iowa, and no doubt in other middle western states, with great regularity. The principal storekeeper withdraws his money from the wobbly bank and the banker is on the verge of failure when, in the interests of his fellow townsmen, the storekeeper puts his money back in and takes over control of the institution. Due to background circumstances, the banker's daughter, who was going to marry the storekeeper's son, marries, instead, the son of a local rich man whose financial support is needed to sustain the bank. Instead of jiggling matters around so that this unhappy ending can be made happy for the ticket buyers, it's allowed to stand as is, an ending that gives the picture substance and authenticity. It's a nice job.

Previewed at the RKO-Radio studio on the afternoon of the Sunday on which the film was premiered in Des Moines amid ceremonies broadcast to the nation. The Hollywood correspondents who gave up the first day of a 3-day holiday to see it enjoyed it to the point of a chuckle here and a tear there, which, if you know anything about Hollywood correspondents, is saying a hatful for the picture.—W. no way a sequel, but rather a different tune by the same composers, obviously seeks to exploit the market created by the original. It should do so easily, for it not only has the way cleared for it with the filmgoing public, but is in every way a maturer, more polished, and even more entertaining film. The same production team and the same players appear, and have all, without exception, improved upon their first appearances. On its own merits, the film which seeks to do in the English idiom—if with a Continental setting—what Hollywood has been doing successfully for years, has a rich fund of entertainment, breezy and infectious comedy, sheer fictitious melodrama, sparkling characterizations, and a production and direction polish which would shame many a more expensive effort.

"Simon Drake," ebullient reporter, is again hero of the adventure, tracking down a gang of counterfeiters for his daily, getting shot and nearly shanghaied, doing even more adept sleuthing than either the Paris or London police, and, as to previous pattern, getting into hot water betimes, with his Scots news editor. The story, of familiar brand, romps along through a Paris panorama of cabarets, classy hotels and couturiers, glimpses a subterranean underworld, provides a slinky siren and a mysterious General, and ends up on its two feet with a revolver battle in the modiste's shop—run by counterfeiters—and with all the tangles unraveled.

Barry K. Barnes reads his role on conventionally jaunty lines and Valerie Hobson registers her wifely role with easy polish. It is again, however, Alistair Sim's confused and confounded Scots editor who runs away with the film.

Shown to an all trade audience at the Cambridge theatre, the film notably in its brighter dialogue lines and in Sim's grimacings and incoherent gesticulations evoked reiterated laughter. General consensus of exhibitor opinion was that it was an improvement on its predecessor, looked worth much more than the single quota figure, and should be easy to sell on the strength of the original.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Million Dollar Legs

(Para.)

College Comedy Minus Songs

This is a lively little college comedy played at break-neck speed and without the customary interpolation of songs and dances by the student body and individual members thereof. It may be well to inform showmen right off that, although Betty Grable is listed at top of the castings, the legs of the title are not hers. In fact, the picture doesn't make it quite plain what legs are referred to, leaving those who will to guess whether they may be those of a race horse figuring briefly in the plot or those of the sturdy oarsmen who row the right college shell to victory in the finale. Cutouts featuring Miss Grabel's or any girl's extremities would be, however, more than a little misleading.

Although named, as stated, at top of the castings, Miss Grable is just one of several girls who impersonate coeds variously concerned in humorous machinations of a college conniver who manages to overcome the school's aversion to boat racing by divers devices including the wagering of the student body's pocket money on a 20 to 1 shot at the neighborhood race track. John Hartley has the second spot in the billing, but it is Peter Hayes, listed seventh, who makes the picture purr with animation. He's a Milton Berle type of personality minus the Berle innuendo, to use the nice word, and the screen is likely to see more of him.

Associate producer, W. C. Thomas, managed to get a wholly presentable film without vast monetary outlay by the simple expedient of keeping the picture out of doors most of the time. Director Nick Grinde kept the performances clicking by maintaining high speed throughout. The screen play by Lewis R. Foster and Richard English based on a story by Mr. Foster is blithe and sufficiently novel with only two or three lines of dialogue which, while not precisely offensive, take down no honors for taste or humor. Maybe they'll be overlooked in the general excitement, which gets pretty intense along toward the end.

Bulldog Drummond's Bride

(Paramount)

Comedy-Melodrama)

Exhibitors who have been playing the "Bulldog Drummond" pictures will find this, the concluding number in the series, a worthwhile entertainment and exploitation value. As were its predecessors, "Bulldog Drummond's Bride" is a combination of mystery melodrama, comedy, romance, suspense and chase action. There is more comedy in it than in most of the other items in the series and its most unusual feature is that "Phyllis" finally gets "Drummond" into such a position that he can no longer defer their marriage.

London and a little French town are the locales. Escaping arrest after robbing a bank, "Armides" brazenly hides the money in a radio in "Drummond's" apartment. The detective, "Algy" and "Tenny" are too busy preparing to meet "Phyllis" in France for the often deferred wedding to be of much help to "Colonel Neilsen" and "Armides," who blunders about, is able to escape capture. Along with other furnishings, the radio is shipped across the channel, where, as the trio joins the girl, the thief and "Neilson" also follow. Things get a little complicated and the comedy assumes a farce aspect when French police unite with "Bulldog," "Neilsen" and the other in hunting down "Armides." "Drummond" finally captures him after an over-the-roofs chase.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Stuart Walker, associate producer. Directed by James Hogan. Screen play by Stuart Palmer and Garnett Weston. Based on a story by H. C. McNeil. (Warner Brothers)

"Boys Town" in Reverse

The title of this latest "Dead End" Kids romp is descriptive rather than geographical. The locale of the action is not set in New York City's famed and fictionized tenderloin district but is the torrid appellation given to a shelter for underprivileged youths by some of its inmates.

Naturally, it is the distinctive personality of the "Dead End" juveniles, both individually and collectively, that gives the picture its fast and flamboyant tone. The showmen will be able to gauge their screen popularity from their past appearances at his house or from the entertainment requirements of his audience. The lads play strictly to expected formula, although there appears in this particular production a rather disturbing indication that the boys are getting a trifle soft.

"Buck" is paroled by the courts for eight years and, in order to manifest his intention to be an upright and law abiding citizen, he takes a personal and financial interest in a shelter for unfortunate boys. The institution is supervised by "Krispan," who subjects the inmates to a regime of brutality and starvation. With the introduction of the reformed gangster to the corporate school personnel, a new administration appears. However, "Krispan" resumes control and is responsible for the death of one of the lads. The boys revolt and try the superintendent for the murder of their friend. They are prevented from carrying out their revenge by the arrival of "Buck," who assures them that "Krispan" will be punished.

At an afternoon performance, where it would seem that every seat in the Globe Theatre on Broadway was taken, the predominantly male audience was vocal in its reactions to the picture, especially the comic moments.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Or the Case of Nyctalopia

The chief point of distinction in this British-made murder melodrama, outside of the distinguished presence of Raymond Massey, is that the murderer who starts and keeps rolling the "whodunit" theme is afflicted with a strange eye malady known in medical parlance as "nyctalopia." For the non-medically informed and the general motion picture audience in particular, the condition may be described as a sort of day blindness, which gives the sufferer the rather owlish ability of being able to see best in the dark. With this bit of optical oddity as a revolving point in the plot's workings, there should be some source of patronage stimulation, especially with that positive sector of the clien-

Mr. Massey's appearance in the lineup of players may have considerable saleability possibilities among the more informed groups who have remembered with a great deal of enjoyment his previous screen work of distinguished note in "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Hurricane" and "Drums" and who may have heard of or seen his outstanding portrayal on the New York stage this season in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," a role which Mr. Massey will soon begin to transcribe to the screen. However, in this present vehicle, Mr. Massey's role is subordinated in importance to the parts of Joan Marion, as the faithful and brave wife, and Walter Rudd, as the murderer with the strange pair of eyes.

"Peter Charrington" is believed to be the killer of his paramour, "Lilly James" and, outside of the steadfast belief in his innocence held by his wife and a faithful family servant, "Peter" is localized according to American argot as "on the spot." The husband disappears and the wife is left to meet the badgerings of Scotland Yard and the equally persistent gentlemen of the Fourth Estate. "Peter" returns to his home and is concealed there by his wife, who through a handkerchief found on the scene of the crime is able to identify the murderer.

They All Come Out

(MGM)

Documentary Film

"They All Come Out" is probably the only prison picture ever made in which there are no riots, jail breaks or evidences of brutal discipline. The reason therefore is that the film was made with the cooperation of the Department of Justice. The government, however, couldn't quite succeed in keeping the boy and girl romantic love story out of the show. The item, in view of other more interesting material dealt with, is a matter of minor entertainment and commercial importance.

With the capture of the bank robbing gang, "Kitty" is sent to the Alderton, W. Va., Woman's Reformatory while the rest go to the Atlanta Penitentiary. Clip shots show actual scenes in these and the other prisons used. After exhaustive examinations young "Joe" goes to the Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, where while learning respect for organized society, he also learns the machinist's trade. "Groper" is sent to the Springfield, Mo., Hospital for Defective Delinquents where he eventually is cured of his mental illness. Jacklin stays in Atlanta, where, after learning his lesson, he is paroled to his wife. But incorrigible mob leader "Reno" is transferred to Alcatraz to become subject to the "Rock's" nerve shattering rigid discipline. In time "Kitty" and "Joe," the lovers who reform, are released and both prove that they have learned their lesson by frustrating a bit of safe robbing.

The prison scenes and the methods used by the various officials are authentic, having been photographed in the various locales. For this reason they are the production's primary showmanship assets and their exploitation undoubtedly will arouse the greatest patron interest.

Previewed at Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles. The fact that there was none of that wild melodrama, common to Hollywood created prison pictures, included in "They All Come Out" seemed to baffle the audience a little. This despite the fact that the picture opens with a talk by former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and James V. Bennett, Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons. This condition may have been due to the fact that despite this talk, the audience did not know that it was going to see a documentary film. When that information is made known to the public in regular runs there is no doubt but that the reaction will be more understanding.—G. M.

The Movies March On (March of Time)

History of the Screen

Leaving the field of domestic and international politics, unemployment and diverse other topics for the moment The March of Time in its July issue, number 12, volume five, traces swiftly the 40-odd year development of the motion picture. (Pictures on pages 12 and 13.)

In its comparatively short span, as time is measured, the motion picture has undergone continuous and sometimes drastic changes, as in the introduction of sound, and nowhere can the illustration of these changes be better exemplified than in a re-screening of the pictures —and most of them made history—that delighted audiences, created fads and generally made the world an easier one to endure.

March of Time has done a thoroughly cinematic job from its re-photographing of the famed May Irwin-John C. Rice 40 ft. kiss of 1896, to scenes from films now in production, including the much awaited "Gone with the Wind."

And in its two dozen memorable scenes are such relics as "The Great Train Robbery," "The New York Hat," "The Fugitive," "Tillie's Punctured Romance," "A Night Out," "The Birth of a Nation," "Thais," "The Flesh and the Devil," "The Jazz Singer," and many others. Stars, many of them still active in Hollywood, appear, including Mary Pickford, Lionel Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Buster Keaton, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Al Jolson, John Gilbert, Will Rogers, Jackie Coogan, Greta Garbo, William S. Hart and Rudolph Valentino in a tango scene from "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

The March of Time obtained the pictures from The Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York, which is currently showing a cycle of 70 films as part of their summer exhibition "Art in Our Time." At the Film Library are seen John Abbott, director, and Iris Barry, curator, intently taking notes in their projection room, and in the Library's reference room a copy of Terry Ramsaye's "A Million and One Nights" is selected from a score of books to be recorded by the camera in this survey of the motion picture.

Also shown are some of the industry executives, among them Will H. Hays, Joseph Breen, Nicholas and Joseph Schenck, Samuel Goldwyn, Cecil B. DeMille, Jack and Harry Warner, Barney Balaban, George Schaefer, Hal Roach, D. W. Griffith and Carl Laemmle.

It is at once an informative record and excellent entertainment.—Running time, 21 minutes.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

The Bird on Nellie's Hat

(Universal)

Lantz Cartune

Another in the series featuring our hero Dan, the heroine, Nellie, and the villain. Nellie, delivering Dan's lunch to his blacksmith shop, "thumbs" a ride in the Villain's car. When she resists his advances he ties her to the railroad track. The decorative bird on Nellie's hat flies and warns Dan of the impending danger. In the nick of time Dan rescues Nellie from the on-rushing express train and the Villain is again foiled.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Miracles of Modernization

(Pathe Commercial)

Federal Housing

Produced by Pathe Commercial for the Federal Housing Administration, this one-reel subject details the advantage of a FHA loan for the purpose of the modernization of homes. Filmed in color it shows the futuristic buildings at the New York World's Fair, the Administration's exhibit in the Federal Building there and presents the before and after treatment of two homes modernized with the aid of a FHA loan. It is a subject well done and is interestingly presented. Running time, eight minutes.

How To Eat

(MGM)

Robert Benchley

Bob Benchley shows the audience how various emotions ruin the appetite. First, the person who fears something loses his appetite. Bob, about to eat his lunch, learns from a well-meaning friend that there is to be a shake-up at the office. His appetite is lost. Next he shows how love can affect the appetite. Other problems taken up are eating in bed, at a picnic or at banquets when you are expecting to be called upon to speak. Produced in the usual Benchley manner, the short is humorous and entertaining. —Running time, 10 minutes.

The Scared Crows

(Paramount)

Cartoon

Betty Boop and Pudgy, her dog, have become farmers, and part of the business of being farmers is sowing the fields. It is unprofitable work for Betty and Pudgy, however, for as fast as they sow the crows eat the seeds. A scarecrow drives them off and Betty continues her work. Pudgy goes to sleep in the kitchen. The crows, raiding the icebox, gang up on Pudgy and the pup has a rather bad time of it until Betty arrives with the scarecrow. Running time, seven minutes.

Riding the Crest

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

For vacationeers planning on visiting the Hawaiian Islands this will serve as a lesson in advance on how to ride a surf board and for others an interesting reel of the skill of natives demonstrating one of their most popular sports and pastimes. The natives' skill makes this difficult and sometimes dangerous sport appear extremely easy. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan.—Running time, nine minutes.

Poetry of Nature

(MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty

The latest Pete Smith Specialty investigates the wild life of the California redwood forest, featuring the thieving crow, who spends his life looting the nests of other birds for food. The habits of many interesting birds and animals are shown.—Running time, eight minutes.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Stanley and Livingston

(20th Century-Fox)

Adventure

Showmen should find "Stanley and Livingston" a challenge to their business creating abilities and an opportunity to demonstrate why they are in the exhibition end of the business. It cannot be gainsaid that the publicity departments, serving in the production end and attached to the distribution department of 20th Century-Fox are doing their full duty to this production. But in the last sense the real job of bringing to public attention belongs to the men who will play it.

"Stanley and Livingstone" will tell a great adventure story, even though it has been found expedient to incorporate a fictional romantic amplification into the actual historic saga. The story of reporter Henry M. Stanley and African explorer and humanitarian Dr. David Livingston is one of the greatest true adventure stories of all time. It was also the occasion for an early demonstration of American journalistic enterprise. Practically all the characters who participate actually lived.

About seventy years ago, James Gordon Bennett's New York Herald was regaling its readers with stories of western Indian wars and political corruption in New York, when news came that Dr. Livingston, lost in the African jungles, was believed dead. He assigned his ace reporter, Stanley, either to find the lost explorer-adventurer or prove him dead. His handling of this pioneer mad assignment in journalism, which lead to his first being branded "the greatest liar of the century" and then when he proved his facts to be acclaimed the hero of the era is but the bare substance of all that the film will depict.

In the matter of principals, 20th Century-Fox has gone a long way to provide outstanding names. The role of Stanley will be played by Spencer Tracy, two time Academy award winner and number five in the list of best box office draws. Sir Cedric Hardwicke will portray Livingstone. The romantic roles will be shared by Richard Greene and Nancy Kelly and such able artists as Charles Coburn, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Miles Mander and Brandon Hurst have important roles. Among others who will participate are David Torrence, Paul Stanton, Holmes Herbert, Montague Shaw, Joseph Crehan, Russell Hicks, Paul Harvey and Robert Middlemass.

Henry King, who has been in charge of many of the studio's biggest pictures—"Lloyds of London," "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," "Young Mr. Lincoln" and "Susannah of the Mounties" is the director.

Ninotchka

(MGM)

Garbo Returns

Because of her unique standing in the industry any picture featuring Greta Garbo is an event. What kind of an event, of course, depends upon the entertainment quality of the picture in which she happens to appear. But when all things of importance pertinent to "Ninotchka" are considered and some of the most fantastic publicity that has accrued to Miss Garbo is discounted, there is much reason to believe that her first show since "Conquest" may be influential in recapturing for the Swedish star some of that mass popularity that she once enjoyed.

In the first place this exercise is being directed by Ernst Lubitsch and it consequently can be expected that it will be full of those "Lubitsch touches." Dialogue, situations, characterizations, locales and relationships of several of the principal performers appear to be the necessary foundation for this circumstance. Secondly, the film is being produced by Sidney Franklin who numbers "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "The Good Earth" and others among his credits. Third recommendatory quantity is the story itself. In digest it might be described as sprightly sophisticated comedy. It has to do with the experiences of a feminine Russian Soviet commissar who, charged with the responsibility of peddling the jewels of a Grand Duchess, finds it much more pleasant to go romancing around with a "fence" and indulging in battles of charm and wit with another woman than serving the cause of the Revolution. The spots in which the action occurs are Paris, Moscow and Constantinople.

For support, Miss Garbo will have the services of Melvyn Douglas who was with her in "As You Desire Me," but who went through light comedy from "Theodora Goes Wild" to the current "Good Girls Go To Paris," the noted stage artiste Ina Claire; a comedy team made up of the familiar Sig Rumann, continental importation Felix Bressart, and stage graduate Alex Grenach. Other important people are Gregory Gaye, Rolf Sedan, Edwin Maxwell and Paul Ellis.

Release date: Not determined.

On Your Toes

(Warner)

Musical Comedy

Showmen should not find "On Your Toes" lacking in exciting exploitation material when it comes time to publicize the picture. High among values that should make interest-provoking copy is the fact that it will feature two dashing characters—the exotic dancer Vera Zorina, seen awhile ago in "The Goldwyn Follies" and Eddie Albert who was the hit of "Brother Rat." Further, it will be the pictorial adaptation of the Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart (whose "Babes In Arms" is now an MGM production), George Abbott and Worthington Miner stage success. It will feature half a dozen or more Rogers-Hart musical compositions and the solo and group dance numbers which make for picturesque spectacle will be directed by George Ballanchine who staged the similar features in "Goldwyn Follies."

In theme, with much music and dancing interluding, the picture will tell the love story of a couple of children of the stage, one of whom grew up to be a composer of modernistic symphonies only to suddenly discover that he was a marvelous dancer and a girl who became a great ballerina. Sprinkled and spiced with loads of comedy, mechanics of story treatment transform the career story romance into a potential murder mystery which has for its culmination a marathon dancing sequence.

With Ray Enright, who made such musicals as "Golddiggers in Paris" for Warners directing, "On Your Toes" will supplement the exploitation worth of its title and the name values of Zorina and Albert with those of Alan Hale, Erick Rhodes, James Gleason, Frank McHugh, Queenie Smith, who was seen in "Showboat," Gloria Dickson, Leonid Kinsky, Paul Hurst and Berton Churchill.

Release date: Not determined.

Unexpected Father

(Universal)

Comedy

Not in years have the public, press and exhibitors reacted so favorably to the introduction of a new screen personality as they did to the presentation of Sandy Henville in "East Side of Heaven." As a direct result Universal put the child, a girl who plays boy's parts, under contract and immediately started plans to star her in a picture. Naturally, with due respect to all other personalities, story and production elements of importance, the child will be the item to exploit. That Universal recognizes this fact is seen in the selection of Charles Lamont, who was Shirley Temple's director in the days when she made "Baby Burlesques" to direct "Unexpected Father."

In theme the story prepared by Leonard Spigelgass who collaborated with Charles Grayson on the screen play has a front and back stage theatre setting. It concerns the adventures encountered by a lot of show folk when an orphan baby must be adopted.

For name values to supplement the automatic appeal of Sandy there will be available Mischa Auer, Shirley Ross, Dennis O'Keefe, Joy Hodges, Donald Briggs, Dorothy Arnold presently featured in "The House of Fear," Richard Lane, Mayo Methot, Anne Nagel and Anne Gwynne.

Release date: Not determined.

The Return of Dr. X

(Warner)

Thrills and Chills

Although there will be a definite similarity in some of the story phases and bits of production detail, "The Return of Dr. X," cannot be called an exact sequel to "Dr. X" made by First National about seven years ago. This story might quickly be described as a shocker and while it will contain considerable comedy and much romantic love interest, its character is a cutback to such eerie productions as "Frankenstein," "Dr. X," "Dracula" and "Svengali."

The theme has to do with a lot of murders that terrorize a city and the tone becomes all the more macabre when some of the corpses return to life.

Using some of the original "Dr. X." material author William Makin and adapter Lee Katz have concocted a different story, which under Vincent Sherman's direction, will present Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Lya Yys, John Litel, Dennis Morgan, Charles Wilson, Huntz Hall, Creighton Hale, Vera Lewis and Russell Hicks as the principal players.

CONGRESS RINGS DOWN CURTAIN ON $40,000,000 WPA THEATRE

Federal Project Played to 30,000,000 in Its Four Years; $1,000,000 Receipts Balance 25 Million Spent in First Two

Acting under specific orders from Congress, the Works Progress Administration rang down the curtain on its theatre project at midnight, last Friday, and closed the books on its $40,000,000 venture in the field of the stage. Although no word of complaint has been heard of late, the beginning of the project brought loud attacks against it from film and stage theatre operators charging unfair competition.

A House majority which insisted that the WPA discontinue its dramatic essay was outwardly responsible for killing the theatre project. Actually responsible, however, were Communistic elements which were charged with having penetrated the ranks of the WPA players, arousing a flood of criticism which centered more attention on the arts projects than on any other activities of the WPA relief organization.

Subversion Charges Studied

Giving as its ostensible reason the belief that no projects should be entirely financed by the WPA, the House Appropriations Committee, in writing the original bill, provided for abandonment of the theatre project on June 30th after an extended study of allegations of Communism in WPA ranks.

The House approved the committee's recommendation, but the Senate Appropriations Committee, after hearing from leaders of stage and screen, recommended retention of the project, but with a requirement that, after October 31st next, local interests be required to sponsor and bear part of the cost of the theatrical presentations, as they are required to do with other WPA projects.

During the hearings before the Senate committee it was disclosed that theatre-project heads considered the box office receipts which have been taken in as a sort of "sponsor's contribution," and pointed out that during the nine months of the fiscal year for which records were available a total of $679,644 had been collected.

However, it was admitted, the cost of the project was running at a rate of $1,000,000 a month, expenses for the 10 months ended with May being $9,949,999. At the end, it was said, there were approximately 7,900 employees on the project.

When the bill came up in the Senate, supporters of the project waged a vigorous fight for its retention under more favorable conditions and finally succeeded in securing the adoption of an amendment providing for its maintenance by the WPA without outside contributions, although they were forced to accept a stipulation that not more than three-fourths of one per cent of the total WPA fund could be assigned to the project after October 31st. This, it was figured, would amount to about $11,000,000.

Rescue Attempt Fails

This amendment, however, came to grief upon the rocky front presented by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Dem., Va.), one of the House conferees, when the measure reached conference and, after ineffectual negotiations for more favorable terms, the Senate members of the conference committee were forced to agree to a compromise under which the theatre project was to be abandoned, but the administrative and supervisory non-relief workers carried on the payroll through July and the actors and actresses on relief kept on the salary list up to October 1st, next.

Going first to the House for approval, the conference report was bitterly fought by theatre-project supporters headed by Representative William I. Sirovich (Dem., N. Y.), who asserted that the $42,000,000 spent on the project during the past four years was approximately the amount collected by the Government in admission taxes.

Declaring that it was "only right" that what has been taken from the theatres should be returned to them, Mr. Sirovich placed the United States in the same class as India and China, the only countries, he told the House, in which the theatre is not subsidized.

The New York Congressman was answered by Representative Woodrum, who declared he wanted the Government out of the theatre business and did not want to see the stage subsidized.

Despite complaints by Representative Vito Marcantonio (Amer. Lab., N. Y.) that proponents of the theatre project had not been given an opportunity to be heard, the House approved the conference report, which immediately ran into another snag as Speaker William B. Bankhead (Dem., Ala.) kept it on his desk, preventing Senate action, because of a filibuster on the monetary bill then under consideration.

The report finally reached the Senate late in the afternoon. The Senate required four hours to discuss the measure, as compared with less than an hour needed for its passage by the House, but finally, at 7:30 P. M., when only 33 Senators were present, approved the conference report on a voice vote.

President Voices Criticism

The completed measure did not reach President Roosevelt for approval until 10 P. M. He signed it, but with a stinging criticism of the manner in which it had been handled, preventing him from sending it back for changes in provisions of which he did not approve.

"Obviously," he said, "I cannot withhold my signature and thereby stop work relief for the needy unemployed."

Major targets of the President's attack were four provisions, one being the abolition of the theatre project. Regarding that, he said the ban on this type of relief was "discrimination of the worst type" and "an entering wedge of legislation against a specific class in the community."

Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the Federal Theatre Project, when the curtain fell on 50 productions scattered throughout the country, said that she "would explore the possibility" of turning some of the vast equipment of the project over to its 7,900 jobless members.

Although the other four arts projects, music, writers, art and historical records, were granted an $11,000,000 appropriation, the 3,000 employees on the projects in New York City were threatened with dismissal unless the projects can dig up 25 per cent of their cost through local sponsorship. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia already has stated that the city could not provide the money.

Mrs. Flanagan said that within an hour after the bill became law all state supervisors were told to wind up their projects at midnight. In one of the greatest mass closings in theatre history, curtains fell in San Francisco, Denver, Philadelphia, Boston, Seattle, Portland, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Roslyn, L. I., Buffalo, Detroit, Syracuse, Miami, Manchester, N. H., Portland Me., Jacksonville, Tampa, Newark, N. J., and New Orleans. Many touring companies also closed.

The supervisors will stay on duty one month. In that time they must have every costume cleaned and pressed, all the scenery stored, the files on order, and a complete inventory, which will go under government seal.

From the time of its birth in August, 1935, the project provided the American public with one lively controversy after another, as well as with a succession of plays, operettas, ballets, circuses and puppet shows, ranging in quality from short-lived theatrical failures to hits that drew enthusiastic notices from critics.

Beginning with the suppression of "Ethiopia," which was to have been the first "Living Newspaper" play in January, 1936, and continuing through the recent Dies Committee hearings at which the theatre project was accused of fostering communistic ideas, the WPA theatre adventure constantly has occupied the limelight.

During the period, according to the best available figures, the various branches of the project have played before audiences estimated at nearly 30,000,000. On February 8, 1938, Mrs. Flanagan reported to a House committee that audiences had passed the 25,000,000 mark. She also said that expenditures of funds appropriated by Congress had amounted to $25,000,000 during the first two years of the project's existence and that box-office receipts as of that date were $1,000,000.

At the peak of its activity the Theatre Project employed 12,700 persons, but the number had dwindled to 7,900.

In his last report, covering the period from June 1, 1938, to May 31, 1939, George Kondolf, New York City director of the project, revealed that 2,960,427 persons in New York had attended 4,522 performances of all types of entertainment sponsored by the project. The regular theatrical productions had accounted for 368,723 of that total.

In addition to its "permanent theatre" division, which presented regular dramas and musical shows in New York City and elsewhere, the Federal Theatre Project sponsored a classical repertory company, presenting Shakespeare and other classics to school and college audiences, a marionette division, a circus, a Gilbert and Sullivan repertory company, a Negro production unit, a vaudeville division, a Yiddish language unit and a community drama unit, the last of which provided old-time actors to coach performances of amateur groups.

A caravan theatre unit, highly successful last summer, had to be dropped in this year's retrenchments. A radio division also was connected with the project, though under a different performances—in the WPA exhibit building at action of Congress was a plan to present four plays—already rehearsed and in readiness for performances—in the WPA exhibit building at the World's Fair in New York.

PROJECTIONIST DAY TO BE HELD AT FAIR

Joseph Basson, president of Local 306, Motion Picture Operators' Union, has appointed a committee to make arrangements for Projectionist Day, to be held at the New York World's Fair in September.

The Arrangements Committee, consisting of G. Edwards, C. Eichorn, O. Kafka and P. A. McGuire, chairman, is shortly expected to announce a definite date for the Day, as well as the names of committee on Program, Invitation, etc., to secure the active participation of all locals in the United States and Canada.

ASCAP Suing In North Dakota

A federal court action has been filed in Fargo, N. D., by The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers asking that radio station KRMC of Jamestown be restrained from broadcasting musical numbers on which ASCAP holds copyright privileges and also for damages of not less than $2,500.

A new state law requiring ASCAP to maintain a list at Bismarck of tunes on which it claims copyrights and also taxing the organization three per cent on North Dakota earnings, became effective Saturday. The law does not affect existing contracts until their expiration.

Joining with ASCAP in the action are Remick Music Corporation, ABC Music Corporation, Miller Music Corporation, Irving Berlin, M. Witmark and Sons, Shapiro, Bernstein and Company, Santly-Joy-Select, and Leo Feist.

Wanger Sues Newspaper For $1,000,000 Libel

Walter Wanger and the Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., have filed a $1,000,000 libel suit in New York supreme court against the News Syndicate Company, Inc., publisher of the Daily News, and Ed Sullivan, columnist for the newspaper. Application to dismiss the suit for failure to state a cause of action was to be heard this week by Justice William T. Collins.

Mr. Wanger contends that the defendants in "Hollywood, by Ed Sullivan," published in the Daily News on May 21st, implied that he produced inferior motion pictures and that he lacks the skill and ability to produce high quality films. The idea conveyed by Sullivan to both the film industry and the general public, the complaint stated, was that the plaintiffs associated with United Artists solely for the purpose of supplying inferior motion pictures.

Court Orders Particulars In Kuhn's "Nazi Spy" Suit

Edward A. Conger, federal judge, in granting an application of Warner Brothers in New York this week for a bill of particulars in the $5,000,000 libel suit of Fritz Kuhn and the German-American Bund, expressed the opinion that the case as an important one and as a public matter "must go to trial soon."

He further said that "American people are entitled to know the answer," and that the plaintiffs should be willing to give a bill of particulars if they did not wish to conceal anything. The statement was made to plaintiffs attorney on argument of the application. The suit is based on "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

A jury in the corporation court in Danville, Va., this week held that a collision between an usher and a patron in a semi-darkened theatre is not the basis of recovery of damages. Henry Rubin claimed that last August as he was entering the Rialto theatre to take a seat, Robert Robertson, an usher, collided with him and his glasses injured an eye. Mr. Rubin sued for $3,500.

B. F. Keith Corporation, the Trenton New Brunswick Theatres Company, Leon Goldberg and the estate of Frank V. Storrs were named defendants this week in a suit filed in New York supreme court by Walter Reade, Jr. Mr. Reade seeks a court order directing Mr. Goldberg, trustee under a voting stock agreement, to transfer in his name 250 shares of Trenton New Brunswick Theatre stock.

Summary Judgment Denied

William T. Collins, New York supreme court justice, this week denied an application of Maurice Manger and Marcel Coutant, acting as receivers for Societe Pathe Cinema S. A. for a summary judgment amounting to $196,872 against Harold Auten, and ordered the case to proceed to trial. Plaintiff claims breach of a contract made on April 29, 1933, which made Mr. Auten sales representative to sell United States rights to seven motion pictures. The suit charges that the defendant refused to give an accounting and continued to sell the pictures after cancellation of the contract. Defendant in his answer claimed assignment of the contract by the plaintiff to Devon Films Corporation and cross-claimed for $17,500 in commissions, claiming that he obtained for the plaintiff the right to distribute RKO pictures in 1933-34 in French speaking territories.

Malcolm Cook

Malcolm Cook, 33, manager and part-owner of the Inca theatre in Okmulgee, Okla., died June 21st there following an operation. Before going to Okmulgee in 1934 he operated a theatre in Oklahoma City.

G. B. Garbarino, 62, Toronto exhibitor, died there June 28th. His two sons will continue to operate the Odeon, neighborhood house, which Mr. Garbarino has owned for nearly 25 years.

OBITUARIES

Phil DeAngelis Dies in New York

Phil DeAngelis, 59, motion picture exploitation and advertising man, died June 28th at his home in Yonkers, N. Y. A member of the D. W. Griffith organization in the early days of the film industry, Mr. DeAngelis was subsequently associated with RKO, Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was the head of the oldest outdoor advertising company in the country, the DeAngelis Bill Posting Company.

Mr. DeAngelis handled national exploitation campaigns for "The Birth of a Nation," "Hell's Angels," "The Big Parade" and many other noted pictures. He also was in charge of many national advertising campaigns for Ringling Brothers.

Survivors are his widow, a son, Edward, and two daughters, Mrs. Philip Grecco and Miss Angela DeAngelis.

Funeral services were held Monday with interment at Gates of Heaven Cemetery in Westchester, N. Y. Honorary pallbearers included William R. Ferguson, Si Seadler, Eddie Carrier and Captain Volney Phifer, men with whom Mr. DeAngelis was associated in the publicity department of MGM.

Bobby Vernon, Former Comedy Favorite, Dies

Bobby Vernon, comedy star of the silent days and for the last six years a Paramount studio writer, died in Hollywood June 28th of a heart attack. Born in Chicago in 1897, Mr. Vernon began his long theatrical career at the age of 11. He later entered films at the Thomas Ince and Universal studios. He starred in scores of silent comedies for Christie, Universal and Mack Sennett.

In 1933 he turned to writing and collaborated on a number of pictures, the last being "Geronimo" at Paramount. Mr. Vernon is survived by his mother, Dorothy Vernon; his wife, Angie, and his daughter, Barbara.

Urbine Herrmann Dies Of Accident Injuries

Urbine J. (Sport) Herrmann, yachtsman and theatre owner, died July 3d in the Egeland Hospital in Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, of injuries suffered in an automobile accident there Saturday, at the age of 66. He lived at the Medinah Club in Chicago.

In the theatrical world Mr. Herrmann was best known as the owner of the Cort theatre in Chicago, now torn down, and an astute judge of successful plays. His first job was as a "kinker's kinker," or assistant theatre biller. At his death he controlled or had an interest in a dozen businesses.

Thomas Campbell Dead

Colonel Thomas C. Campbell, New Orleans theatre manager for more than 40 years and friend of President Grover Cleveland, died June 28th at the age of 77 at New Bedford, Mass., where he was spending the summer. Colonel Campbell started as an advertising agent and roadshow manager for Klaw and Erlanger and later represented them in New Orleans.

Harry Leon Wilson

Harry Leon Wilson, 72, author, died at his home in Monterey, Cal., June 28th. Several of Mr. Wilson's stories were adapted for the screen, including "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "Oh, Doctor."

New York Court Hits Giveaways

Chance games in theatres this week received their most serious setback to date in New York with the decision of Judge Bayes in Special Sessions, Brooklyn, that they are illegal. One immediate result was the abandonment of chance games by the Century Circuit.

Judge Bayes imposed a fine of $500 and 30 days in jail (the 30 day sentence was later suspended) on the management of the Atlantic Theatre, Brooklyn, on lottery charges, for the first conviction of its kind on record in Greater New York.

Defense Argument Rejected

Melvin Albert of Weisman, Quinn, Allen and Spett, counsel for the Independent Theatre Owners Association, appeared for the defendant, and argued that under a Court of Appeals decision in 1937, chance games are legal as long as a patron is eligible for a reward even though he had not paid an admission. Although the numbers in the Atlantic Theatre's screeno game were announced in the lobby, making it possible for those not in the theatre to be eligible, the court answered that if even one patron buys admission to a performance when there is a game, it becomes illegal.

The ITOA, of which Herman Eisenstadt, operator of the Atlantic, is a member, plans to appeal the case. Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, has appointed a committee to contact the District Attorney's office and see what effect the decision will have on other theatres. The committee will say that if chance games are to be ousted from theatres, the ruling must also apply to churches, lodges and clubs which conduct money games.

The case of the Momart Theatre, Brooklyn, also involving a lottery, was scheduled for hearing following the Atlantic case, but counsel asked for postponement pending determination of the Atlantic case on appeal. The case has been adjourned until November 20th.

License Commissioner Paul Moss and representatives of local independent circuits and smaller exhibitor interests were to hold a conference during the week in order to clarify the whole situation with regard to screen games.

The Loew's metropolitan houses and other circuits continued chance games over last weekend and the national holiday. However, the Century Circuit, operating 19 theatres in New York City, has dropped all games and giveaways pending legal clarification.

A statement signed by J. R. Springer of the circuit, issued last Friday, said: "In view of the fact that the manager of a theatre not affiliated with the Century Circuit was arrested, fined $500 and given a jail sentence, which, it is reported, was afterwards suspended, Century feels that it is not fair to have its managers assume a similar risk, and is therefore announcing in all Century theatres within the City of New York that all such money giveaway activities will be suspended until the legal situation concerning games and giveaways is clarified."

Although New York exhibitors had failed to reach a citywide agreement on the elimination of giveaways, chance games were eliminated, starting last Monday, in the areas from 34th to 72nd Streets on the West Side and from 34th to 59th Streets on the east side.

Dropped in Wisconsin

In Wisconsin, as a result of the La Crosse Theatres case, in which the State Supreme Court ruled that banko was a lottery, chance games are slowly being discontinued throughout the state.

Bank Night has been discontinued by exhibitors in such situations as Milwaukee, Madison, Janesville, Stevens Point and Sheboygan. In Milwaukee, managers of the 12 Warner-Saxe theatres have been directed to discontinue "Hollywood" and similar prize drawings, it has been announced by A. D. Kvool, general manager of the circuit.

In Troy, Ohio, Common Pleas Judge Paul T. Klapp has granted a temporary injunction preventing seizure of Bank Night equipment in the suit of Andrew Attenweiler against C. F. Pfister, head of the Troy Amusement Company, in which violation of the Ohio lottery law is charged in the operation of Bank Night at the Mayflower Theatre.

Discontinuance of Bank Night and Gift Night at all theatres in Orange County, Texas, was ordered June 25th by the Grand Jury of that county. "The Bank Nights and Gift Nights must go along with all other lotteries and gambling conducted in the County," said the Jury president.

The Paramount Theatre, in Austin, Minnesota, has been found guilty of operating a lottery in conducting "Bank Night." Although the State Supreme Court had ruled that Bank Night is not a lottery in violation of state laws, if conducted according to its rules, the court in Austin held that there had been a deviation from the rules.

The bill legalizing Bingo in the state of Connecticut has been signed by Governor Baldwin. The bill only allows the game if sponsored by civic, educational, church and similar groups.

JAPS USE BALLYHOO TO ATTACK BRITISH

The Japanese are using motion picture exploitation methods in their tiff with the British, according to Associated Press reports from Tientsin, scene of the most serious dispute. The Japanese army early this week was using a sound truck in front of the blockaded British concession. Addressing Chinese huddled before the concession, the loudspeaker blared forth sentiments like these:

"You are all forced to stand here in the hot sun, and you know whom to blame. The British cause all these troubles by their anti-Japanese policy supporting Chiang Kai-Shek."

Patterson Approved As RKO Board Head

Federal Judge William Bondy approved, last Friday, the designation of Richard C. Patterson, Jr., as chairman of the board of directors of RKO. Judge Bondy expressed satisfaction over Mr. Patterson's qualifications to succeed Floyd Odlum, who resigned due to the pressure of other business interests.

Mr. Patterson, who recently resigned as Assistant Secretary of Commerce, is a former Commissioner of Correction of New York City, and a former executive vice-president and member of the board of the National Broadcasting Company.

Ross Promotes Three

John J. Tarpey, Jr., formerly branch auditor for Ross Federal Research, has been promoted to the post of director of budget operations for the company. Robert Pollard, former chief accountant, replaces Mr. Tarpey as branch auditor, and Charles Taylor becames new chief accountant.

Annual Report of Actors' Equity

The annual report of Actors' Equity Association as published in the June issue of its house organ, Equity, for the year ending March 31st shows that the Association has a total membership of 5,145. In the year 97 members died and 537 new members were accepted.

The number of arbitrations instituted in the year shows a steady decrease over past years. According to the report of the American Arbitration Association, filed with Actors' Equity for the fiscal year there were 16 arbitrations instituted, three were pending from the previous year, making a total of 19. Most of these were individual and not company claims and involved a total of 35 members.

The total amount involved in these arbitrations was $11,911.35. Some of these cases, however, did not involve a specific sum of money but involved a determination of rights springing out of standard Equity contracts.

Ten cases involved proceeded to hearing and determination and in each case resulted in an award in favor of Equity members. Six cases were settled in favor of members after their claims were filed with the American Arbitration Association, but before hearings were held, two cases were withdrawn and one is still pending.

The report of the treasurer follows:

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE DUTY OF A CITIZEN

The series of patriotic programs in the "A" houses of the Indiana-Illinois circuit, and described in the news section of a recent issue, currently emphasizes the readiness of theatremen to lend their efforts and theatre premises on behalf of community activities. Sponsored originally by Rex Williams, in Whiting, Indiana, with the cooperation of the Legion, Scouts and other leading organizations, the project, with the enthusiastic support of Alex Manta, circuit president, was carried out as successfully in other situations. No admission was charged at the special morning shows. Thousands of school children were given this unusual opportunity to view short subjects describing events of historic importance in our country's growth. Addresses were made by legislators and other leading citizens.

Another civic movement of note was recently endorsed by Karl Hoblitzelle, president, wherein the Interstate circuit undertook a campaign in Texas public schools to promote traffic safety. R. J. O'Donnell, circuit general manager, arranged special shows for children, the proceeds to be used on behalf of the drive.

The influence of the theatreman in local affairs has long marked him as a leader in the advancement of projects outside of his immediate sphere. He accepts this leadership not so much as a compliment to his unique talents but as a part of civic responsibility to be shared by all well-intentioned citizens.

Ordinarily it appears that a well-defined procedure is followed in the exploitation of dates in the different classifications. The downtown first-run gets the most attention. By the time the usual date hits the "C" houses, promotion possibilities are expected to be well milked and your average manager sees no reason to disagree.

Ofttimes, there are virtues to be found in the complete disregard of such probabilities by subsequent-run theatremen, as attested by the hardly rare instances recorded in these pages. To the list and with no small pleasure is now added the scintillating promotion on "Dodge City" executed by Marlowe Conner, at the Warner Rhodes, a "C" situation, in the far South Side section of Chicago. The campaign is set down elsewhere in this section. Business exceeded other houses in the same classification with the same program. Cooperating merchants were highly satisfied with results and eagerly await another similar brain child of Conner's fertile imagination.

Frankly, there is little reason for the manager in the subsequent-run to sit on his pants because of his classification. Exhibition would be better served if managers in these situations would take the healthier viewpoint that a picture is a first-run for patrons who haven't seen it, and act accordingly in putting it over.

HOOKING UP TO WHAT'S WHAT

It isn't any sudden revelation that smart advertisers rarely pass by an opportunity to hook up product to things important in the public eye. Especially is this indicated right now by the large slices of national advertising budgets devoted to high-price publication space, expensive window and counter displays, etc., wherein the World's Fairs are tied in with copy or for background.

Theatremen, but not too many of them, are also aware of this influence in selling tickets. A good example is the lobby setpiece created by Morris Rosenthal, at Loew's Majestic, Bridgeport, reproduced in last week's issue. Against an animation of the famed Trylon and Perisphere at the New York exposition, Rosy planted a miniature, lighted 24-stand upon which copy is changed regularly to advertise the coming attraction. Most everyone stops to see it.

Since conservative universities are not known to greet picture ballyhoo with any degree of enthusiasm, especially at solemn commencement exercises, the tiein made by Russ Bovim for "Mr. Chips", as illustrated in last week's picture section, might be something more than just that. Perhaps the Round Tabler is being awarded an honorary degree for audacious showmanship that rings a loud exploitation bell.

Round Table Pictures

Illustrated at right is bar set up in the mezzanine of Loew's Theatre, in Rochester, by Round Tabler Les Pollock and described elsewhere in this section. Girls employed by cooperating beverage company dispense drinks to thirsty patrons. Atmospheric drop in background provides a neat "cool" touch to the entire display.

Included in the extensive campaign arranged by Joe DiPesa, publicist for "Captain Fury" at Loew's State, Boston, was a sailboat regatta on the Charles River opposite the M.I.T. Sailing Pavilion. Above are the winners, Domina Spencer and Thomas Gouzoule holding the handsome trophy presented by DiPesa through the compliments of Brian Aherne.

Reproduced above is lobby contest arranged for "Dodge City" opening at the Fox, in Atlanta, by Manager Tommy Read. Targets were planted on either side of 24-sheet and girls attending patrons proffered rubber darts. To those hitting bull's-eyes, guest tickets were awarded. . . . Reported as an excellent eye-attractor was display below created by Pat Notaro for his date on "Juarez" at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa. Giant photo enlargements of Davis and Muni were planted at base of map of Mexico with tiein flags and copy. That's Andy Gorzo, assistant at side of display.

Standing at the right of the "Tarzan Finds A Son" display at the Wilmer and Vincent Colonial, in Allentown, is Nick Todorov, assistant to Charlie Bierbauer, who is pointing to the hut top that was made from artificial grass which extended to the pavement. The palm trees were homemade and constructed with artificial leaves. Bamboo poles covered the boxoffice which was flanked on one side by cutout of Tarzan with his ape and on the other by Maureen O'Sullivan with Tarzan's son.

The photo at right is not run to illustrate Harry Unterfort's popularity with the belles of Syracuse. The manager of Keith's is merely posing with the winners of a recent Rose Queen contest tied in with a first time local rose festival for which the Round Tabler was appointed to serve as Chairman of the Committee to choose a queen. Photo was taken on the stage of Thornden Park the night she was crowned.

Following the French premiere of "The Great Waltz" (titled "Toute La Ville Danse") at the famed Paris Opera, picture opened at the Cinema Marignon, the highly effective front for which is here reproduced. Elias Lapinere, MGM Continental publicity manager, reports the showing at the Opera for local charities was the first American picture to be so honored.

Six foot snowwhite papier mache bear sitting at the curb of Loew's Valentine, in Toledo, is Wally Caldwell's way of telling his customers that it's cool inside. Attracting plenty of attention, the letters were done in blue with silver metallics. The bruin, which was planted on rollers, was easily moved about.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Candid Camera Contest Builds "Union" for Taylor

Highlighting his "Union Pacific" campaign with a candid camera contest, Charlie Taylor, Buffalo Theatres, Buffalo through the sponsorship of the Times offered cash prizes and guest tickets to those submitting best snaps of the Union Pacific exhibit at the local New York Central Terminal. Entries were displayed in the theatre, paper running some of the photos together with stories and winners' names. Paper also devoted a double page in their roto section.

Additional publicity was garnered when Mayor Holling headed a group of local officials and club heads who formed the reception committee at the station to greet the stars arriving on the train. Also arranged for with the local CBS Station was the appearance of their short wave sound truck at the depot night of arrival of the train. Cliff Jones, who features a movie column on the air daily, was on hand with his mike interviewing the celebrities. During the ceremonies an electrical transcription of the proceedings was made and rebroadcast later the same evening and next day. Entire stunt was promoted gratis by Taylor.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Radio Quiz Contest Aids Schultz on "Prison"

Through cooperation of Station WPIC, John Schultz, Liberty Theatre, Sharon, Pa., for "Prison Without Bars" planted a special quiz contest based on "What is the name of the new blonde star making her debut in," etc., prizes of passes going to winners. Street ballyhoo consisted of usher dressed as farmer carrying suitcase bearing inscription "I've Come from Punkicenter to See." Special promotion with local florist was arranged, carnations going to all women attending Mother's Day matinee.

Sidewalks were stencilled week ahead, large eight-foot standee cut from three-sheet was stationed out front during run of picture, bumper strips were used on employees' cars and cashiers called telephone subscribers. Schultz credits his assistant Robert Wanamaker, Stanley Kocholek, doorman and Robert O'Hare, usher for their work in putting over the campaign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Shack in Safety Zone Helps Exploit "Arkansas"

Built by Dwight Seymour, Kermit, Kermit, Tex., for "Down in Arkansas" was a six foot square log house in a safety zone near theatre. For the roof, theatremen used two sheets of old plywood on which were painted cast and title, along edges of sidewalk a zig-zag fence was used on each side of which was a banner. Around the house and leaning on the fence were wagon wheels, old iron washing kettles, horses' shoes and other paraphernalia.

Entire staff, dressed as hillbillies used corn cobs around which were pasted title and cast, boys also smoking these when off duty. Gag handbills were distributed, lobby was dressed for the occasion and local dailies came through with nice publicity breaks.

For "Out West With the Hardys," Seymour hung an attractive Indian blanket in his lobby over which was card calling attention to the film's opening, and in front of the blanket was a shelf on which were placed various types of western pottery with tiein copy. Two weeks ahead cards were distributed, one side carrying instructions on how to make a Mickey Rooney lucky horseshoe nail ring, in center of which was a horseshoe nail. Cards also contained title, cast and playdates and were distributed to all patrons.

Conner Sponsors 'Dodge City, Ill.,' As Section Tieup

A proclamation from Mayor Kelly, vigorous publicity in the downtown and neighborhood papers plus an aggressive local campaign in cooperation with participating merchants by Marlowe Conner, announced the settlement of a new community, "Dodge City, Ill.," taking in the main sector of the business section adjacent to Warner's Rhodes, in advance of that picture.

Since the Warner situation is a third-run neighborhood on the far South Side, Conner was minded to smoke up something different in the way of exploitation and struck fire with his idea by selling the merchants on coming in. The section has no local businessmen's association, so Marlowe did all the promoting on his own, convincing the merchants that here was an opportunity to sell themselves individually as well as the section in a novel manner that would obtain citywide publicity. They put up all the cash needed. Conner did all the work.

After the Mayor issued the proclamation renaming the section for the week in which the picture played, it was used for newspaper publicity, windows and lobbies. Then a local Mayor was elected for the new city. Hizzonner serving during the week of the event. This was conducted through the district and ballot boxes in the stores. An installation party was held on the theatre stage on opening day, which followed a ribbon-cutting ceremony opening up the new section, with leading legislators, highschool students and others parading in costume behind a band.

Entire Section Decorated

Most unique were two large boards at each end of the "new city" reading "You Are Now Entering Dodge City . . . Shop Here and Save . . . See," etc. The streets and stores were decorated with welcome banners, penants and flags. All participating stores carried window cards reading "This is a Dodge City store. Shop here and save."

Co-op pages, sidewalk stencils, special trailers, pole arrows, pep letters, sales events, were other things to attract attention and to aid Conner to top grosses of other houses in his classification on the same picture. Merchants were reported so satisfied with results that they are all set to go on the Round Tabler's next promotion.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hanson Opens "Dodge" Bar

With one of his circuit's theatres not operating at the moment, Roy Hanson, Jefferson Theatre, in Goshen, Ind., utilized the closed theatre's front for a "Dodge City" bar to put on in cooperation with the local Coca-Cola dealer. In exchange for advertising, the dealer furnished the bar and drinks which were given away by means of a spin wheel arrangement. Theatre furnished the bartender and piano player from the service staff. Stunt was put on at an opportune time since 2,500 high school students were in town for the annual State Musicians' contest.

CURRENT FORTNIGHT PERIOD MARKS ENDING OF SECOND AWARD QUARTER

All Entries Received by July 15 To Be Considered in Selection of Quarter-Master Honors; Fifth Period Winning Ideas

by A-MIKE VOGEL

From this date, there remains just a bit more than one more week before the wind-up of the Second Quarter of the 1939 Quigley Awards. Monday morning of the 15th is the definite closing date for all entries intended to be eligible for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. Everything received up to that time will be considered for examination by the Quarterly Judging Committee which is slated to convene later in the same week.

Representative entries of winners in the last Fortnight are set down on this page. Others will be published in next week's issue.

Johnson Ties to Royal Visit For Unique "Pygmalion" Opening

With all the to-do in the papers about the recent visit of the King and Queen, current with his opening of "Pygmalion," Hobson Johnson at the Pal, Millen, Ga., hit on the idea of changing the old Hollywood prevue stunt to a "Movie stars greet King and Queen at the Pal." Since there is a very active woman's club locally, the theatreman succeeded in getting them to obtain local socialites to pose as movie stars and to greet their Majesties.

At the end of the first show, scenes from newsreel showing King and Queen entour were projected, sound cut off and over public address system was announced that the King and Queen were arriving in Millen, and would be seen at the theatre. At this point, local King and Queen entered. The house lights were turned on as they marched down the aisle to stage to be seated on thrones. Following came the local "stars" who were seated in reserved section and called up to be presented.

Johnson took 16 mm film of the ceremonies shown the following week to another packed house. The Round Tabler permitted the women's club to take bows for the promotion which he reports one of the best he has put on in his 25 years in showbusiness.

Yearsley Arranges for Students To Write Reviews on "Conquest"

Faced by the problem of selling "Man of Conquest" to the high schools, Manager Bill Yearsley of Warners' Circle, Philadelphia, reasoned that it would be a good idea if students could be induced to tell their classmates about the picture instead of the usual procedure of first selling the picture to the teachers and depending on them to pass the word to the students. With this in mind, District Manager Larry Graver arranged a screening at the Earle projection room which was attended by 38 students, one from each class, of the Frankford and Harding, Jr., Schools.

Each student then wrote a letter addressed to Yearsley; the letters read, as exercise in composition, to classes by students. Best letters were read at general assembly. All letters were sent to theatre by opening day and displayed out front where they attracted much attention. As all were enthusiastic in praise of the picture both as entertainment and for its historical value the letters had real sales value.

A students' matinee on the opening day was well attended and resulting word-of-mouth advertising put the picture over to better than average business.

Other Circle's advertising of "Man of Conquest" stressed the brilliant cast and featured the following endorsement: "A Very Special Attraction. We Guarantee this to be one of the Very Best Shows at the Circle this year."

TED TIES "ROSE" DATE TO OMAHA ROSE WEEK

To aid the Milk Fund for underprivileged children sponsored by the local World-Herald, and as an added aid for "Rose of Washington Square" at the Orpheum, Omaha, Ted Emerson promoted himself a local Rose Week wherein the leading organizations sold the blooms through city-wide street sales.

Flowers which were tagged with theatre credits were purchased from local growers in the name of Alice Faye. Every civic group was in line, including the Mayor and chamber of commerce. Each purchaser was a walking ad for the picture, says Ted, in reporting the promotion as one of the biggest ever.

EIGHT TOP DISPLAYS FOR "WONDERFUL WORLD"

Folks up in Boston do say that landing even one window in the conservative Jordan Marsh department store is no small task. So extra bows are in order for the lineup of eight principal fashion windows in that store, reported by Lou Brown for "It's a Wonderful World" at Loew's State and Orpheum, as a first-time in that spot.

Background of each window was a large globe bearing streamer copy reading: "It's a Wonderful World. Are you going to see more of it this summer?" Posters down front carried theatre credits.

Fitzpatrick Sponsors Cop Contest To Find Local "Sergeant Madden"

In conjunction with the picture's opening, Ed Fitzpatrick, Poli Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., declared a "Sergeant Madden" Day in honor of Waterbury's finest, huge banner across the front of his theatre plugging the same. Through a contest conducted previous to this declaration to find the most popular officer, Station WATR cooperated with five dark spot announcements for a week in advance asking Waterburians to write the name of their favorite officer on a slip of paper and deposit same in a ballot box in the lobby of the theatre. The officer chosen to be honorary "Sergeant Madden" acted as host to all patrons and brother officers attending the opening performance.

The winning officer obligingly posed with a 40 by 60 summons in front of the theatre for several hours a day, newspaper covering the stunt. Fitzpatrick reports that due to the terrific radio buildup, the election, declaration of local police day, sale of tickets to several platoons, etc., the day was a huge success.

"Maisie" Goes to Bridgeport, And Rosy Bids Her Welcome

Lucky "M-A-I-S-I-E" cards were distributed on that picture by Morris Rosenthal, Majestic, in Bridgeport, to all high school students. Each card carried one letter of the title. By collecting the entire set and presenting it at the boxoffice, free admissions were obtained by holders. Rosenthal controlled the letter "I," thus keeping down the admission to 30. Building walls and sidewalks were stencilled and large blocks of wood were lettered with title and distributed to newsstands to be used as paperweights.

Through tieup with the Times-Star, readers were informed that Maisie's stand-in would be on the streets at a certain time and would present a guest ticket to those carrying a copy of that paper. Another gag included newspaper story to the effect that all "Maisies" properly identifying themselves would be admitted as guests of the management.

Old-Time Railroad Exhibition Serves Forry on "Union Pacific"

Securing an authentic wooden exhibit of "Railroading in America" which shows the first models of trains, locomotives, etc., from the rail's early equipment to present-day streamliners, Fred E. Forry, at the Colonial, in Lancaster, Pa., used the exhibit for his "Union Pacific" lobby display and tied up the schools on a contest. To the pupil writing the best essay on the subject, cash award was given, in addition to presentation of the model to the winning school. Schools responded and teachers urged the students to attend the picture to glean further knowledge on background to aid them in their entries. Dailies covered the contest as did the local school papers.

MORE ON "FORTNIGHTS"

O'Donnell Holds Cooking School Sessions for Three-Week Period

Through the courtesy of the manufacturer who supplied the instructor, Jim O'Donnell held three cooking school classes on his stage at the Haines, Waterville, Maine, in as many weeks, with the Morning Sentinel acting as co-sponsor. Grand prize which was awarded at the third and final class was a promoted electric range. Daily prizes at all three sessions consisted of 15 food baskets and all the food cooked on the stage by the instructor, permanent waves, electric toasters, flowers, electric percolators and other gifts promoted from cooperating merchants who came through with ads tying in with the school. In addition to the newspaper campaign which netted the theatreman three full page co-op ads that broke day before each session, 92 inches of free readers and 400 inches of free advertising, theater used advance and current screen trailer and window displays in cooperating stores.

Also featured by O'Donnell while the cooking school was in progress was a five-day song title contest on "Rose of Washington Square." Paper ran scene stills with conversation balloons containing titles of various songs, guest tickets going to winners.

Reisinger Promotes 20 Advance Ads For Father's Day on "Hardy" Date

A Father's Day tieup of no mean proportions was arranged by H. W. Reisinger, at Loew's in Dayton with the largest department store locally in connection with "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever." Cooperating merchants ran a series of 20 ads ahead of Father's Day using stills of Mickey Rooney and Lewis Stone with tiein copy. In addition store paid for mailed 25,000 colored booklets with cut on front cover of the star and his screen father.

Numerous window displays with blow-ups of the entire Hardy family, plugging the current picture of that series were planted by the merchant, 11 by 24's were used in all elevators throughout the store and each department carried cards on the same.

Corker Promotes Heavy Prizes For Contests on "Irishman"

Model plane contest was sponsored by Moon Corker, L & J Georgia, Athens, local newspaper and Y. M. C. A. in connection with "The Flying Irishman," with over $500 in prizes promoted from cooperating merchants. The "Y" News, Y. M. C. A. weekly publication, carried stories on the contest and picture for over a six-week period as did the newspaper. Stencilled window cards were placed in stores and on light posts throughout city, the prizes awarded from theatre stage opening day.

The theatre and a local flying school sponsored a contest on "Why I Would Like to Learn to Fly," prize being a flying course which was worth $80 which went over in a big way especially with the University students. The Dean of the University and Department heads selected the winner. Flying School gave the course free in exchange for special trailer at theatre. All newspaper ads and marquee copy was featured "wrong side up."

Pollock's Mezzanine Ship Bar Popular Drop-In Spots for Patrons

Set in a tropical atmosphere on the mezzanine of Loew's, in Rochester, is the ship bar promoted by Manager Les Pollock on his tieup with the Royal Cola agency which dispenses gratis drinks to patrons. Besides being an added treat for the patrons, Pollock says the company gives the stunt double sides of their delivery trucks; spot announcements over Station WHEC after Bob Ripley's "Believe It or Not" national program and plugs on WHEC 15-minute "Music As You Like It" program every Sunday and Tuesday. Also in the making at present is a display tieup for all local dealers.

Ed Gidley Teaches Washington To Curtsy Before King and Queen

Reported by publicity director Ray Bell for Loew's Theatres in Washington, was stunt arranged by his assistant Ed Gidley during the recent American visit of the King and Queen and more specifically relating to their Washington sojourn. Visitors to the State Capitol were amused on arriving at Union Station prior to their Highnesses' arrival, to see girls from the Capitol Theatre giving lessons in how to curtsy. Each of four of the girls wore imprinted banners reading "To teach you to curtsy," "In case you meet," "the King and Queen"—"In Washington." Stunt broke dailies with art and special stories.

Hollister, Spelling Doc Westfall, Talks Before Clubs on "Liberty"

Numerous speeches were made by C. L. Hollister while pinch hitting for "Doc" Westfall at the Haven Theatre, in Olean, N. Y., in connection with the showing of the Warner short, "Sons of Liberty." Appearing at a joint meeting of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Exchange Clubs, "Holly" gave a brief talk on "Haym Salomon—Forgotten Patriot of the Revolutionary War." Contacting rabbi of local synagogue, the preacher devoted his entire sermon to the picture, urging his congregation to attend the Haven to witness the film.

Principal of high school who was also visited, added his personal endorsement over the school public address system and accepted from the theatreman a quantity of production stills and press book material for discussion in history classes. American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Boy Scouts were also supplied with literature, which together with theatre and playdates was conspicuously displayed on all bulletin boards.

Children Rename 'Holly's' Kid Show

Keeping a running comparison of kid's Saturday matinee attendance and whenever it starts to drop off from the preceding year, giving it a shot in the arm, C. L. "Holly" Hollister at the Babcock in Wellsville, when he found himself confronted with just such a situation announced from his stage recently and later by newspaper that at a following kid show, members would vote on a new club name and discuss plans for giving them exactly what they wanted in the way of their afternoon shows.

At the meeting, the girls overwhelmingly voted to have it named the "Jane Withers Club"; boys, however, objected and wanted "Lone Ranger Club." Undaunted, the theatreman "compromised" and from this point on his Saturday matinees are known as the "Jane Withers-Lone Ranger Club."

Holds Membership Contest

A 10-week membership drive is in progress and a suitable prize will be awarded to the boy and girl who secures the most new members. In addition an attendance contest over the same period will permit children not missing a show to free admission to see the next Withers picture. Stage program includes a talent contest each week with cash prizes of one dollar, 50 cents and 25 cents being awarded to contestants by audience vote. Also on stage are two miscellaneous contests, one for girls and one for boys, such as rope skipping, ice cream eating, balloon blowing, etc.

The screen program preceding the stage activities includes approximately one hour of short subjects with two regular features following. Each week there are one or more of the following subjects, Mickey Mouse, Porky Pig, Merry Melody, Popeye and of course, the Lone Ranger serial and other shorts.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchant Distributes "Honolulu" Fan Photos

Through arrangements made by Ralph Tully, Central Theatre, Biddeford, Maine, on "Honolulu," local merchant distributed 1000 Eleanor Powell fan photos a week ahead of opening. Merchant also featured a window display with full sheet card and sample of photo giveaway in addition to plugging the stunt in their newspaper ads. Counters were appropriately decorated with Powell photos, entire cost of which was met by the store. Recordings of the songs from the picture were played over theatre's non-sync ten minutes before opening, at exits and during intermissions. While music was played, the house lights were taken off and full sheet easel display on stage was illuminated with spotlight. Display was trimmed in Hawaiian atmosphere.

Chain druggist tied in on a special "Honolulu" soda, theatremen supplying them with streamers for their soda bars, windows, etc., all clerks wore leis attached to which were cards showing playdates. Hotels, bus terminals, etc., were provided with circus heralds for distribution and numerous window displays were secured from leading merchants.

Service Manual Emphasises Correct Accident Handling

Third and Last Article in Series Also Details Cashier and Doorman Duties

by RUDOLPH A. KUEHN
District Manager, Warner Jersey Theatres

With this installment is concluded the three-article series in the Round Table taken from the comprehensive service manual compiled by Rudy Kuehn. The first and second articles had mostly to do with the training and conduct of the usher forces, the current one devoted importantly to other personnel. Emphasis here has been placed upon the proper procedure in accidents and other cases of illness, wherein the author points out the legal "don'ts" advisable in such instances.

There are definite theatre "don'ts" to be kept strictly in mind, and among the most important are those which concern the routine and behavior of the usher force, especially while on duty. For instance:

Don't flirt with young lady patrons even if they are receptive to flirting or invite it. Save your flirting abilities for your activities far away from the theatre. To be caught flirting lowers the prestige of the theatre and will mean the loss of your job.

Don't watch the picture unless specifically posted to do so. Watching the picture while on post is tantamount to gross neglect of duty. However, upon any irregularity in the sound or any noise from the audience, it is best to find out what is wrong. Any of these irregularities should be immediately reported.

Don't have a bad breath. Keep a mouth wash in your locker at all times and be sure your breath is pleasant whenever on the floor.

Don't be late when reporting for work or back from relief.

Don't smoke while on duty, not even to "sneak" a puff from a friend.

Don't fraternize with cashiers or any female employees of the theatre.

Don't forget that you are an important part of the theatre organization and should conduct yourself accordingly.

In the case of smaller theatres, the telephone operator is usually the cashier. In a larger house, there is usually a switchboard. The conduct of these operators, however, is basically the same when using the telephone.

Suggested Telephone Procedure

The phone should be answered, "Stanley Theatre, good afternoon," or "Good evening," etc. The operator is usually asked what is playing and the schedule of the show. She should have a copy of the schedule next to the phone to be able to give clear, concise and polite information at all times.

If she is at a switchboard, and some one in the theatre is making a call, she should answer the buzzer with "Call, Please?" Her voice should be pleasant at all times and should be able to carry over the phone.

When choosing cashiers make sure they are neat, attractive and possess a pleasing personality. They should not use too much makeup nor wear eye-attracting jewelry. When on duty they should not chew gum, eat or drink in the box office.

The box office should be kept neat and tidy. There should be no display of large amounts of money.

Added Cashier "Don'ts"

Another important item for cashiers to avoid is to have reading material in the box office. At no time should the girl be reading a book, newspaper or magazine while on duty in the box office, nor engage in personal conversations which are taboo while on duty.

Basically, a doorman's job in each theatre is to take the tickets at the door. However, his duties are varied in each individual theatre. He must be able to use tact and diplomacy at all times as the door is the place where most disputes take place in a theatre. It is preferable to have a doorman go through the ushers' training and to be on the floor as an usher before he is placed on duty at the door.

He must be taught how to stop patrons with an insufficient amount of tickets; how to stop young people who have children's tickets instead of adult ones; how to explain to parents that a child is too old to pass in with a child's ticket, etc.

He should have a schedule of the running times of the show and be able to give polite information of the show at all times; he should know how to announce on the walk and what phrases are to be used; what is to be said during standing room conditions and what definite phrases are to be used to patrons.

Doorman Checks Lighting

He must keep a check on the outside house lighting; marquee, roof signs and all illumination used during the day and evening. Any irregularity should be reported immediately to the chief of service.

He should, under no circumstances, speak to the cashier while on duty unless it is purely a matter of business. No conversations are to be held in front of the theatre that do not pertain to the business at hand.

The accident problem in the theatre is an acute one which requires a great deal of common sense, tact and diplomacy. When a patron falls down the stairs (the most common theatre accident) there are several things which can be done.

If the person is hurt, or cannot walk, he should be assisted to some office where first aid can be administered. The spot where the accident took place should be examined immediately to determine if the accident was due to a fault in the carpeting, etc. If it is seen that it is the fault of the theatre, the house physician should be called if necessary. If the fault lay entirely with the patron, he can be asked if he wants his family doctor to be called—or if a city ambulance should be called with an interne.

Under no circumstances should an employee of the theatre take the injured patron home in his car. If an accident should occur to the automobile, the theatre would be liable. A relative, taxi or on request of the patron should be taken care of to get him home.

When a patron falls, but does not seem to be injured, nor does not want to make a complaint, an accident form should be made out nevertheless. Whenever a member of the staff sees an accident, fall or tripping incident, he should report all the details to the man in charge, trying to get a complete description of the accident, the patron and any friends with the patron. Then the theatre can send in a report to the insurance company which protects the theatre in case the patron may sue later. It is important to obtain any witnesses possible when an incident of this kind occurs in the theatre.

First Aid Suggestions

In rendering first aid to a patron, the following procedures should be adhered to at all times since the theatre is limited in what it may do to avoid liability.

Fainting: Patron removed to cool and open spot . . . placed on settee or couch. Offer water—use smelling salts under nose—perhaps a small amount of spirits of ammonia can be placed on cotton and placed under patron's nostril.

Headaches, etc.: If a patron asks for an aspirin, be sure to hand the patron the bottle and have him take the pill out of the bottle and administer it to himself. If accompanied by a friend or relative, hand the bottle to that person.

Be Careful About Medicines

The same ruling applies whenever a patron asks for a medicine to be taken internally. To avoid liability, never administer anything to a patron to be taken internally.

Cuts, Bruises, etc: It is preferred that the house doctor or an interne take care of this treatment. We may offer simple first aid consisting of an antiseptic, gauze and cotton or adhesive tape. Never touch the wound or injury with your hands. Be careful not to touch the part of the gauze or cotton which is applied to the injury.

Removing Foreign Objects, etc.: If patron is alone and requests removal of object from eye, simply offer cotton with small toothpick and direct them to remove same. Do not attempt it yourself. If they are with some one, give cotton, etc., to the friend and have him remove object. All other cases should be left for doctor in case patron requests calling same.

RKO Is Latest to Go to the Field For Film Attention

by MAGDALON GRAHL
in Des Moines

Saturday and Sunday were RKO Radio days in Des Moines as the tall-corn state put on one of its biggest shows for the twin-theatre first public exhibition of "Career" on Sunday evening, a parade of stars Saturday morning, a moonlight movie ball Saturday night and various other attractions and ceremonies. All roads led to Des Moines from Friday through Sunday as a result of the promotion buildup that went back a year to the first Jesse Lasky Gateway to Hollywood radio talent quest and included radio, exploitation and newspaper and magazine publicity on a broad scale.

The dual premiere of "Career," which features Anne Shirley and Edward Ellis along with Alice Eden and John Archer, the latter two the final selections in the first Gateway quest, took place simultaneously at Des Moines' Orpheum and Paramount theatres, in the best Hollywood manner. Hollywood celebrities arrived in open cars and it is estimated that 75,000 persons were in the streets around the theatres as the stars appeared. Iowa's Phil Stong, author of "Career," was one of the guests of honor.

Crowd of 10,000 on Hand

Hollywood, Chicago and New York contingents stepped directly from the trains at the Rock Island Station to a raised platform on which a reception committee welcomed them in a ceremony broadcast over the radio and to some 10,000 outside the depot.

Following the introductions the celebrities were paraded through the business section in open cars, with the Des Moines police, Rock Island uniformed men and 200 Iowa National Guardsmen on hand to keep the crowds in line. Accompanying the twenty open cars carrying screen and radio stars were city and state officials and prominent citizens.

At two p.m. Saturday the delegation with a police escort were whisked through the streets to the National Collegiate Golf Tournament at Wakonda Country Club.

Some 5,000 couples danced Saturday evening on a platform built specially on the football field of Drake University.

Many Stars on Program

Bobby Breen sang during the evening and other Hollywood stars participated, including Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Patricia Ellis, Jean Hersholt, Jean Parker, Joy Hodges, Marjorie Reynolds, Barbara Read, Dorothy Lovett, Peggy Carroll, Alice Eden, John Archer and Leon Errol. James Ellison, born in Iowa, returned to his home state with the Hollywoodites. Leigh Jason, director of "Career," and RKO Radio's casting director Robert Palmer also attended.

Through the cooperation of the Des Moines merchants a 1939 Jensen-Dunn Convertible Ford Coupe was given away. Tickets had been handed out at retail stores for some time.

A crowd of 4,500 attended Jesse L. Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" 13th and final air program of the second series staged in the Shrine Auditorium Sunday afternoon and broadcast over CBS. The eight finalists were Dorothy Howe, Dallas; Harry Stafford, Omaha; Barbara Louise Smith, Logan, Utah; Kirby Grant, Helena, Mont.; Germaine Wiljen, Kansas City; Norman Ruvell, Detroit; Marilyn Louise, Beverly Hills, Calif.; and Robert Shackleton, New York. Mr. Lasky and his entire cast and radio production crew were on the coast train.

Vice-president Ned E. Depinet of RKO Radio and S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, headed the New York delegation. Others from New York were Cresson E. Smith, western and southern sales manager; Arthur Willi, head of the eastern new-talent department and Ralph Rolan. Walter Branson, mid-western district manager and Jack Osserman, branch manager at Chicago, were among the many Radio representative aboard the Chicago special train.

In charge of the premiere for A. H. Blank and his Tri-States Theatres, was A. G. Stolte, division manager.

United Artists Consummates Deal with National Theatres

Negotiations were completed this week between United Artists and National Theatres, including its five subsidiary circuits, for United Artists' entire program of pictures during the 1939-'40 season.

The deal was consummated by L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president, on behalf of United Artists, and J. J. Sullivan, William T. Powers and Aubrey Schenck for National. The company has a contemplated program of from 28 to 32 productions.

William S. Herndon will open his own agency in Hollywood, to handle writers and directors. He was formerly with Dave Diamond, head of the story-writer department of M. C. A. Artists, Ltd.

Cohn Heads the "Pioneers"

Jack Cohn, Columbia Pictures vice-president and moving spirit behind the recently formed "Picture Pioneers," consisting of veterans of 25 or more years in the industry, was elected permanent house manager (the organization equivalent of president) at the organization's first "conference," held last Thursday night at New York's Barberry Room at 10 East 52nd Street.

Mr. Cohn, whose election was unanimous, was nominated by Ned E. Depinet, RKO vice-president; and appointed the following executive committee to prepare a slate of nominations for the remaining offices to be filled: Marvin Schenck, of Loew's; George Schaefer, of RKO; Herman Robbins, of National Screen; Joe Hornstein, of Hornstein Theatre Supplies; Harry Brandt, of the Brandt Theatres; Harry Buckley, of United Artists, and Mr. Cohn. Hal Hode, of Columbia, was elected secretary.

Previously, Judge Ferdinand Pecora had administered an impressive "oath" to the veterans, all swearing that they have served 25 years or more in the industry. The Judge was promptly made the first honorary member, only to reveal that he was eligible for regular membership as a "Pioneer," having operated a projection machine and a song slide at a theatre on 14th Street in 1914.

Followed an innovation by Jack Skirball, vice-president of Grand National, which ended the serious part of the evening.

With Joe Hornstein operating the stereopticon, members' individuals pictures, as they appeared 20 years ago, were projected.

Jam Handy Moves

The Jam Handy organization has moved its cartoon studio into larger quarters in Detroit, at 2792-8 East Grand Boulevard.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Cary Grant, Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy—Owing to the lack of good product we went back and picked up this comedy and made no mistake. A wonderful comedy that went over with a bang. Do not miss this sure fire hit. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA FRONTIER: Buck Jones, Carmen Bailey—A fairly good western to below normal business. Played June 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CALIFORNIA FRONTIER: Buck Jones, Carmen Bailey—Easily the best Buck Jones from Columbia this season and one that will create much talk. Give it the works.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Here is Joe Brown's best picture to date. It sure had the audience laughing all through the picture. It sure did bring them in. By all means play this one. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 4.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

TRAPPED IN THE SKY: Jack Holt, Katherine DeMille—An excellent action aviation drama that does the box office no harm. Will stand alone in small spots like ours. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—This one holds the record here for all time low gross. We almost sold more popcorn than we did tickets. It has the stuff, too, but we didn't benefit by it. Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 18-20.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DARK VICTORY: Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Eloquent underplaying by Geraldine Fitzgerald and a steady, trustworthy performance by George Brent do much for this Bette Davis vehicle. About Miss Davis I have never been able to wax enthusiastic. To me she invariably approaches the borderline of overacting in her use of superfluous jerky gestures and mannerisms. I do not deny that Miss Davis should have had some Academy Awards in the past. Her competition from other female stars has been weak. But now we have Wendy Hiller, Elsa Lanchester, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Elisabeth Bergner, Anna Neagle, Dame May Whitty and others, and Miss Davis must prove amongst other things an all-'round versatility. "Dark Victory," incidentally, did better than average business and was well but quietly received. "Love Affair," RKO's offering to the tear ducts and souls, was recipient of many more enthusiastic comments.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—Living entertainment all the way but we are in the dull season so the gross was not enough to pay the shot. With a better title it would have pulled a lot more.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MEN IN EXILE: Richard Purcell, June Travis—Very good, and pleased. You can't give us enough of them.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir, Gordon Oliver—This is a corker, and pleased. Double billed this account of the stars being weak at the box office.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BRIDAL SUITE: Robert Young, Annabella, Walter Connolly, Billie Burke—Here is a picture that the ladies will go for because of the title. Men won't think it is so hot. It's just another plain program picture. I ran this picture on Sunday and they stayed away in droves. Played June 25.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey, Nat Pendleton—Lots of action and comedy, which is the right combination, especially for the Saturday trade. Did a little above average on Saturday night.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford—Not the best of the series but good enough to draw extra at the box office. Plenty of laughs and Rooney the whole show. Our people were satisfied so we do not complain. Another smash hit from the No. 1 company. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HARDYS RIDE HIGH: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford—This is certainly a rent lifter. The patrons are laughing when they are going in and laughing when they go out. Nothing but praise for this picture. Everyone is asking when I will have them again and that's certainly music to a showman's ears. Hot weather don't mean a thing; they will come in droves. Played June 22-23.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—In spite of the stars and a dandy show this was the poorest Sunday draw I have had from MGM this season. Probably would have gone over better on a Friday-Saturday change.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—My, what a disappointment. This so called Metro prestige is awfully bad for an empty stomach and this picture won't fill it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—Dreadful. Poor Luise, she must be trying to break us. Never enjoyed business on any of her pictures yet. Would suggest Metro let her check receipts. Forget her acting. Academy Awards don't do us any good. Our take-in half enough for film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

MYSTERY PLANE: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds—They say there are three more in this series. If they are as good as this one, we can use about six more. Lots of thrills, and air shots were very fine. Held interest to the last scene. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 20-22.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER AGENT: Russell Gleason, Shirley Deane—Extra poor. Our patrons can't imagine a couple from the Jones Family in these parts. Neither will you! Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 17-20.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WILD HORSE CANYON: Jack Randall, Dorothy Short—A good western. Profit.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—In two days, Sunday and Monday, took in 40c less than film rental. Loss. Running time, 90 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—I made the mistake of running this alone and the result was the lowest two day business on record. It is intended only for the lower end of a double bill. Nothing particularly wrong with the picture, but just no go.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

GRACIE ALLEN MURDER CASE: Gracie Allen, Warren William, Kent Taylor, Ellen Drew—A good screwball picture to the low gross of the year. Weather O.K. Evidently the masses do not go for Gracie. Better keep her for a filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GRACIE ALLEN MURDER CASE: Gracie Allen, Warren William, Kent Taylor, Ellen Drew—Absolute flop for us. However, do not believe picture at fault. Those who saw it raved about it but few saw it. So expect a problem with this feature. Played June 17-20.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—Not nearly as good as the first Burns picture, "Arkansas Traveler." Failed to draw. They played this on percentage and we all lost money. I'm glad that I had an extra shirt. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 4-5.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Martha Raye, Bob Hope—'Die."—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Martha Raye, Bob Hope—A fine comedy that kept them laughing from start to finish. This is more like what Paramount used to produce in shows. Some more audience pictures like this and Paramount will be back in the running. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 13-15.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Olympe Bradna, Ray Milland—I said it in profanity. Loss. Running time, 70 minutes.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

TOUCHDOWN ARMY: John Howard, Mary Carlisle—A fair program picture. Loss.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Republic

DUKE COMES BACK, THE: Allan Lane, Heather Angel, Genevieve Tobin—A dandy for dual houses and full of action. It's sure to please.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—As usual this is another good western and Gene is well liked here. Personally think Dick Foran is a much better draw.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Joan Fontaine—Best picture Republic ever made. Compares favorably with other superwesterns of this season. Business not as good as expected, due to rain. Played June 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Luana Walters—Here is Gene's best picture for quite a long time. Good songs and lots of action. Smiley Burnette is very funny. This picture had good B. O. draw. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

STREET OF MISSING MEN: Charles Bickford, Harry Carey, Nana Bryant—Good program picture of prison life. Played it Friday-Saturday to fair business. Played June 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILD HORSE RODEO: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Mex Terhune, June Martel—Another good western and the Mesquiteers have yet to let us down. Republic must be proud of them. Played June 2-3.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Bobby is losing his popularity. No draw at B. O., but the picture had good entertainment. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 29-30.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

FLYING IRISHMAN, THE: Douglas Corrigan, Paul Kelly, Robert Armstrong—A freak offering which did small business. Played June 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—Best of the Jane Withers pictures to date. Loaded with comedy and action galore. Great entertainment. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 23-24.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN RENO: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—Very good Chan picture. Swell cast. Lots of laughs. Toler is definitely established as "Chan" here. Good business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 21-23.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

CHASING DANGER: Preston Foster, Lynn Bari—Another reason for a liberal cancellation. It is not average for a B classification. I can't help the feeling that with a 20 per cent elimination hanging over the heads of the producers that they would make a greater effort to produce pictures that would not be liable for cancellation. The exhibitor is not going to cancel out a picture that is half way a hit. While business is off, there is no doubt a good picture will still get some business and in the last analysis satisfied customers make box office; that has always been so. But you can't feed them forty or fifty pictures that are only fit for a double bill and expect them to like it. It isn't in the cards. I know it and the producers should by this time.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This series was just about the same as usual. Always good for a few laughs. Nothing to write home about. Just a mediocre picture. I ran this picture on giveaway night. Anyway, I have seen worse. Played June 21.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Amanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—Played to lots of kids but adults seem to be passing Shirley up. Business slightly over good average. Played June 21-23.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—They predicted Shirley's downfall for some time. She is supposed to be slipping. This picture makes her tops here. Again we say, God bless Fox.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—A delightful offering which appealed to adults as well as children. Our business was off about 40 per cent. Played June 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—Business poor. Soon even "technicolored" Temple won't be enough. Perhaps, Shirley in third dimension. Ah, but then surely we would have to insist on at least one more fellow inside Greene's coat to fill out the shoulders.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen—Sonja is sure slipping fast. Had the poorest Sunday. No. B. O. draw, but a good picture. Good songs, lot of comedy and great sets, but this one did not click at B. O. Played June 11-12.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson—Back again in the good old days of the nineties, when there was no swing. It is a swell picture, and the surprise is Jolson. If you think that the younger generation does not like this type of show, then, I'm wrong. There is some unaccountable charm about the old songs that seems to get the audience. With business away off the picture did not gross what it should have done. I think a few productions such as this one carefully produced would hit. I am sure that the swing addicts were surprised at the melody of the old songs. I think these old timers, like Jolson and Cantor, when they get into blackface really go to town. Jolson certainly did in this one and it was very effective. Memories of Primrose and West and the good old minstrel days. What I would give to see one again.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—One of the best pictures we played from Fox this year. Great shots of submarine. It did a real good business. Direction, acting and settings very good. Had many favorable comments on this picture. Credit is due to John Ford for his direction. Running time, 94 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Preston Foster, Tony Martin, Arthur Treacher, Phyllis Brooks—Satisfied. Fair business. Played June 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS: Michael Whalen, Joan Woodbury—A very good "B" picture. Has a load of fast moving comedy running throughout the rather thin mystery plot. This brought more laughs than a dozen two reel comedies.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—Swell show but kind of high class for this town. They all liked it, even though it didn't do anything outstanding. If you know about Grand Opera and penthouses, you will enjoy it; if you don't know about them, you will get lots of laughs anyway. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 11-12.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

United Artists

DUKE OF WEST POINT: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Has a very human story and, all in all, is the best we have had from U.A. this season. Business just fair, however.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniel—This picture is one I can't see at all. Even the few customers who saw it had nothing to say. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 16-17.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Roland Young, Paulette Goddard, Billie Burke—Biggest box office flop we have on record here, even though we used "Ferdinand the Bull" for bait. Rather a high class show, well produced and drew some favorable comments from the ladies. Looks to me, though, like it was made exclusively for the English market. Fine cast but the title kept them away, and the trailer didn't help any.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

ZENOBIA: Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, James Ellison, June Lang, Jean Parker—Feature was fair but no business. Breaking Laurel and Hardy up was no good for here. Picture not up to the comedy Hardy is capable of. Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 9-10.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Universal

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Adolphe Menjou, George Murphy—Good show but failed to draw at B.O. After all, that is what counts. Good supporting cast. Adolphe Menjou was outstanding. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

MISSING GUEST, THE: Paul Kelly, Constance Moore, William Lundigan—For double bills only and will please as such. Good mystery picture.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

NEWSBOYS HOME: Edmund Lowe, Jackie Cooper, Wendy Barrie, "Little Tough Guys"—A swell little show with what it takes to please them. Cooper is a good bet here, and this is his type of picture. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 13-15.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKIES: Kent Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Universal is coming up. While this is only a program picture, it shows definite improvement in product. It was liked by all. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 6-8.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Here is a show that will certainly please. My business wasn't up to standard but it is no fault of the picture. Universal did a grand job of this picture. Deanna Durbin was better than ever. Hot weather is the only excuse I can give for not doing good business. Played June 19-20.—Bud Davis, Ritz Theatre, Roanoke, Ala. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—The fact that this film was outstanding at the box office can, in my opinion, be attributed to a few minor reasons. The color, Errol Flynn, Alan Hale and the illusion of a great western drama created by large paid advertising. It is a grand hoax to coax the public in on the first-run engagements. We died on a Friday-Saturday engagement. "Dodge City" has everything, gunmen, horses, covered wagons, vast color landscapes, hangings, cattle stampedes, saloons and tough guys, trains, everything but a story, suspense, originality and continuity, leading towards any goal.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

FOOTLOOSE HEIRESS: Ann Sheridan Craig Reynolds—Doubled this and it pleased. Played it on the strength of Ann Sheridan popularity.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson—We consider this one of the best pictures in a long time. Business very good. Held up all three days, which is exceptional during these times. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 13-15.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

MELODY FOR TWO: James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Marie Wilson—Very good musical and pleased. Played this on a double bill.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID: James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Sothern—Unconvincing acting by Rosemary Lane prevents this from being rather delightful entertainment from start to finish. Western addicts and general audiences who were unable to rise to Cagney in "Boy Meets Girl" took him back as the "Oklahoma Kid," but still failed to realize he is one of the most entertaining screen performers. Rosemary Lane is amateurish. The man who played the Kid's father was simply bad. Business no better than average and average means losing money.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, "Crime School Kids," Claude Rains—Another smash from Warner. Here is one to break your box office records with. Positively a money maker.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Best Sunday business for a couple of months even though we played this very old. Most everyone seemed to like it.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Warners seem to have the product. This is the tops in the current aviation epics and our clients agreed. A nice Sunday picture which will please. Brent always good and John Payne is a comer. Frank McHugh supplies good comedy. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 7-8.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence Iowa. Rural patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Boy, oh boy, are they clicking. Warners 1938-39 features are so far ahead of other producers that there's no comparisons. This is another smash. Give it your best playing time. Played May 29-30.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MAN-MADE ISLAND: Columbia Tours—An interesting short of the San Francisco fair. Being such, it is a reel that will be appreciated by those who cannot go to see the show in person. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NIGHTSHIRT BANDIT: Charley Chase—Here is one of the funniest two reel comedies Columbia has produced. This comedy had the audience howling. By all means, play this one. Columbia has the best two reel comedies. Running time, 18 minutes.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: Three Stooges—Excellent two reel with lots more laughs than usual. Stooges get in ancient Egyptian tomb and you can't help but laugh. Running time, 18 minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Educational

BEAUTIFUL BUT DUMMIES: Buster West, Tom Patricola—Pretty fair. As in most Educational shorts the film is punk but the subject gets lots of laughs. Running time, 17 minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURTSHIP OF A NEWT, THE: Robert Benchley—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COUSIN WILBUR: Our Gang—An average Gang; not outstanding.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—These Pete Smith shorts are "tops." One of his best. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A little letdown in this one but still outranks anything in the field. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOBBIES: MGM Miniatures—A good novelty reel about the stars and their hobbies.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IMPERIAL DELHI: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Average travel talk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN IN FRIGHT: Our Gang—Our Gang still popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOMEWHAT SECRET: Musical Comedies—Average two reel musical.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STORY OF ALFRED NOBEL: Passing Parade, No. 3—Rather dry for a small town but still educational. Just fair. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very fine as usual.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TRACKING THE SLEEPING DEATH: MGM Miniatures—Extra good. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

"WRONG WAY OUT, THE": Crime Doesn't Pay Series.—These series are well received by all.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

GOOD SKATES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An excellent one reel skating reel with good comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HAL KEMP AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—As good a band act as any. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HOLD YOUR BREATH: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very fine under water sport reel. Good photography and interesting throughout. Running time, eight minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: Another good short dealing with jobs of interest. The photography is rather flat and features lack makeup for color but it gets across. Running time, seven minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

RKO Radio

TALENT AUCTION: Irene Beasley, Merry Macs—Not a bad musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

WHALERS, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Always good. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARNYARD EGG-CITEMENT: Terry-Toons—A very clever colored cartoon. Excellent music. Deserves your best time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NICK'S COFFEE POT: Terry-Toons—Average black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NICK'S COFFEE POT: Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROME SYMPHONY: World Windows—An excellent colored travel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

DAFFY DOC, THE: Looney Tunes—A dandy black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa Iowa. General patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The band is fair but Apollon should stand behind the bass drum. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DAY AT THE ZOO, A: Merrie Melodies—Here is a knockout. Very clever. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, THE: John Litel—Words cannot describe this short as it is tops in any program. The picture, the "Signing of the Declaration" is portrayed without a flaw. Excellent. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FAT CHANCE, A: Johnny Perkins—A fair Brevity but Johnny is not so good as he is in person. The acts are fair. All in all not bad. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT'S AN ILL WIND: Looney Tunes—Very poor. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RAY KINNEY AND HIS HAWAIIANS: Melody Masters—An excellent band act and different.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SKI GIRL: Vitaphone Varieties—A good girl skiing reel and great stuff for hot weather.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING TIME IN THE MOVIES: Broadway Brevities—A two reel color subject that had possibilities but turned out rather flat. The actors tried so hard to get my audience to laugh that there were few results. Running time, 19 minutes.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

Hal Roach, Jr., a Producer

On attaining his 21st birthday and the completion of an apprenticeship, Hal Roach, Jr., has been made a producer by his father. He has been active in the production work at the Hal Roach studios for several years.

Joe Goldstein, manager of the Mikado theatre, St. Louis, who last week was a visitor to New York was listed inadvertently in a picture caption as owner of the theatre. The Mikado is part of the St. Louis Amusement Company circuit operated by Fanchon and Marco.

Admission Tax Receipts Gain

Federal admission tax collections in May from the country as a whole showed a healthy increase, it was disclosed last Friday by the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington.

National collections of $1,605,988 in May showed an increase of $221,000 over the April total of $1,384,722 and were $211,000 above the May, 1938, total of $1,394,659, although for the past two years revenues have shown a loss between April and May.

Records of the Bureau show that for the first five months of 1939, collections aggregated $7,664,967 and were but little under the $7,722,309 reported for the same period in 1938. For the fiscal year, which ends June 30th, however, the Government will show a loss as compared with 1938, collections for the first 11 months being $17,979,541 against $19,176,326 a year ago.

However, the figures do not necessarily reflect grosses at the smaller theatres, because the federal admission tax is applicable only to tickets of 40 cents and over.

The improvement over April for the country as a whole was not shared in the Broadway sector, a report of collections for the Third New York District showing that May receipts were $492,012 against $506,685 in the previous month. As compared with May, 1938, however, when collections were $415,798, the month showed an improvement of more than $76,000.

The Broadway report showed that box-office collections dropped from $442,085 in April to $425,376 the following month and that receipts from free or reduced rate tickets dropped from $6,811 to $2,529. Collections on tickets sold by brokers jumped from $11,168 to $15,578, and $161 was collected on tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices and $1,857 from permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, neither of which return any revenue in April. Admissions to roof gardens and cabarets returned $46,512 against $46,622 in April.

Schneider, Friedman In Stock Transactions

Acquisition of 100 Columbia Pictures common voting trust certificates by Abraham Schneider, New York, an officer of the company, on April 4th, was reported last Friday by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington in its semi-monthly summary. As a result of this acquisition, Mr. Schneider's holdings of certificates were increased to 204.

The only other film transaction reported by the SEC was the exchange of 41,000 Warner Brothers optional debentures for new debentures by S. D. Friedman, New York, an officer in the company.

Reports on the holdings of persons becoming officers or directors of corporations showed that Kenneth M. Young, New York, held 1300 shares of Pathe common when he became an officer and director on April 27th.

GN Stockholders Meeting

Terms of the new loan by which Grand National will be assured settlement of some of its obligations and a longer life, will be made known to the stockholders' meeting in New York on next Friday. The meeting had been held at the company offices on last Thursday, but was adjourned because of lack of a quorum and for additional time in which to prepare the information about the plan under which the loan will be advanced.

PRISCILLA LANE "TYPICAL DAUGHTER"

Priscilla Lane, Warner Brothers star, has been chosen as America's "typical daughter" in connection with the celebration of National Daughter's Day on July 23rd. Members of the Gold Star Mothers' organizations chose Miss Lane from a list of 25 young American personalities. Her selection was made in consequence of her portrayal of young daughters in "Daughters Courageous," "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and "Four Daughters."

Four UA Films To Have Summer Release

United Artists will release four major films this summer, it has been announced by Murray Silverstone, head of the company. Mr. Silverstone said that the mid-summer release of so many outstanding films is unprecedented in the history of the company.

The first picture to be released will be Edward Small's production of "The Man in the Iron Mask," which will open at the Radio City Music Hall July 13th. Walter Wanger's production of "Winter Carnival" will also have its premiere at the Music Hall. Samuel Goldwyn's production, "They Shall Have Music," will open at New York's Rivoli Theatre. Fourth of the summer releases is Alexander Korda's "Four Feathers."

Nicoll Decries Lack Of "Visual Symbolism"

Professor Allardyce Nicoll, chairman of the Yale Department of Drama and author of many works on films, decries the lack of "visual symbolism, the delineation of subjective states of mind; montage of an imaginative sort" in the films of the last few years, and concludes in an article in the current issue of Theatre News, New Haven County, Conn., film guide, that "this way no progress lies."

Professor Nicoll believes the renaissance of the new type of western and the vogue for the "democratic" film, with insistence on larger external and objectively presented ideas are partly responsible. "Wuthering Heights," the author also believes, stands almost alone in daring to "dally with symbolic effects, and even it was not bold enough to go very far."

Wing for Republic Writers

Work will be started at the Republic studio in Hollywood the end of this week on a new writers' building as the first step in a studio expansion program. The building will be a new wing to the Administration Building and will cost $40,000. It will contain 40 offices.

Robert Gillham, advertising and publicity director for Paramount Pictures, returned to New York on Wednesday, after a vacation which included a visit to the studio.

Warner Brothers will hold its annual Bookers' Drive during the month of August. A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges, announced this week.

Competition Seen In Belgian Market

The Belgian market for sound recording and reproducing equipment has in general resisted the effects of the economic recession, according to the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

However, American equipment sales have merely held their own, while sales of German and French equipment have advanced more swiftly than the general total, attributed primarily to low selling cost and ability to make quick delivery. During the early months of 1939, both French and American equipment sales declined in favor of German equipment.

Due to intensive competition, sales are difficult in the 16 mm. field, and it is expected that only low priced equipment will have any success in the near future.

The rental of 35 mm. sound films continues to be profitable, although it might well be extended to include silent films, while there is a general shortage of 16 mm. films both in silent and sound versions, in Belgium.

Altec Plans Reciprocal Interchange of Ideas

G. L. Carrington, vice-president and general manager of Altec, this week announced plans for the reciprocal interchange of technical information pertaining to sound reproduction servicing techniques, between Altec and qualified sound service organizations in foreign countries.

"This plan produces benefits to box office in both directions," Mr. Carrington said. "In the past, Altec engineering developments have been restricted to theatres, equipment manufacturers, research laboratories and engineering societies in the United States. The new plan enables foreign equipment distributors and reputable foreign service companies to avail themselves of engineering and technical information developed by Altec. This means a better showing for American films in foreign countries."

Selznick Augments Product For United Artists Release

Augmenting the original plans for the release of three of his productions for United Artists during the 1939-'40 season, David O. Selznick this week announced that the number has been increased to four.

The first of them is "Intermezzo," with Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman and Edna Best in the leading roles. The second is "Rebecca," from the Daphne du Maurier best-selling novel. The other two are still to be determined.

Named to TMAT Board

In accordance with new provisions of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union constitution, a second vice-president and four members of the board of governors have been elected. Charles Carroll was named vice-president and a member of the board. Other members are William S. Scott, Joseph Silverman and Charles Shollod.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

NEWS IS BOXOFFICE!

TODAY, MORE THAN EVER,
THE PEOPLE WANT THE NEWS!

They want to hear it!

Radio broadcasts are constantly interrupted to flash spot news bulletins! Lowell Thomas, just voted undisputed leader of all air commentators, is ranked with Amos 'n' Andy as tops in popularity among all 15-minute programs! The election of the Pope doubled the usual tune-in. The abdication of King Edward VIII tripled it. The opening of Congress sent it up to five times normal!

They want to read it!

Hearst newspapers note that circulation ups 15 to 25% when events of unusual importance occupy headlines! The Hines trial, the death of the Pope, the Louis-Schmeling fight each sold 100,000 to 150,000 extra copies of New York's Daily News!

Above all, they want to see it!

Only the newsreel can bring them the charm of England's queen, the actual hazards of rescuing men from the sunken Squalus, what happened when Wooderson was defeated in the Princeton mile, how Craig Wood missed that putt in the National Golf Open, the dramatic thrill of the Yankee Clipper's first flight! All these appeared in MOVIETONE NEWS within the last eight weeks!

Vol. 136, No. 3 — July 15, 1939

AHEAD of THE NEWS

THE newsreel began as the cradle of the art of the screen and has been, these many years, treated like a stepchild by the industry of the motion picture. Now by the enterprise of Movietone News and 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation it shows a new militancy in an endeavour to win, by and through the exhibitor, a recognition commensurate with the box-office merits of the product.

It has probably been said on this page often before that the public has always been considerably more interested in the newsreel than the motion picture industry.

With only the most obscure and inconsequential exceptions, the newsreel's treatment has been an epitome of all the bad habits of distribution and exhibition, for more than a quarter of a century.

The newsreel is the only surviving product that was to be found in the program output of the nickelodeon era. It, and all other product, then was produced by the foot, sold by the reel, with the price based on nothing but age, and usually was exhibited without even the attention of a one-sheet in the lobby. The tendency has been to keep it just that way.

Part of the inattention, from the exhibitor, has been a consequence of the fact that by its very nature the newsreel arrives upon the screen so swiftly that almost no advance attention has been practical.

NOW, for the Movietone News, Mr. Truman Talley announces an advance telegraph service of "News about the News"—a wired bulletin and summary of content made available to the exhibitor as the negative is being edited and far ahead of the fastest possible delivery of prints—hours ahead in the metropolitan area of New York, days for parts of the nation.

There is a deal of the newsreel content, in these stormy days on the world map, which belongs on the marquee, and which deserves other promotional attentions. This device may make such attentions possible, workable.

This device and development comes in a period when newsreel content has reached a high intensity of interest. The world is aflame with issues, as it has never been before. Events of great significance are occurring continuously. The world public and the American public have been made manyfold more conscious of the world news than ever before. Depressions, doles, relief and taxes, between them, permit no one to be indifferent. The newsreel has opportunity, and responsibility, which it never had before.

There is a sizeable proportion of the audience of the screen, existing and potential, which finds the newsreel and kindred product of far greater interest than the fictional output. That sector of the audience includes the most substantial buying power and influential elements of the community.

The newsreel has survived by an unencouraged support, through the years in which the motion picture makers in quest of the stupendous, the colossal and super-colossal have poured resources and attention into the dramatic feature—a concentration which has resulted in too many pictures too gloriously big to be profitable. The curse of "program", "filler" and "short" has been upon the newsreel—with a forgetting that the patron's eye is ever filled with what is on the screen before him, with no such discrimination between products as producers seem to fancy. To the consumer the picture is as big as it looks, as interesting as it looks, no matter how long or short, how much or how little it cost.

CONSIDERATION of the newsreel's place on the amusement screen, brings to mind certain observations of Dr. Alfred Goldsmith concerning television, of which he recently remarked: "It will come into its place when we are able to discover something that the public wants or likes which television will prove able to do better than any other medium." That has been true, obviously, of all the art media, and it is true of the place and function of the newsreel. It is the only medium which can re-create the events of the world before our eyes, as immediately as the arrival of an airplane, and thereafter without limitation of time. While radio and television demand that the audience attend as punctually as the eye-witness, the film holds the event on ice for the show hours, awaiting leisure, ruled by no time meridians.

"We are not unmindful," remarks Mr. Charles E. McCarthy, discussing the 20th Century-Fox campaign for its newsreel, "that this is an effort that must as it succeeds be constructive for the whole field and in helping the newsreel help all exhibition selling. There is no product with greater constancy of appeal, and none that can contribute more to the making of the theatre into an institution in its community. The newsreel is a habit-forming film. It is one conspicuous argument for seeing every change of bill."

WHITHER?

WHEN you are looking about to examine into the problems of motion pictures and their competition among amusements, there's a simple matter of the new social geography to be considered. When most people walked they had a half hour radius of about two miles, which is to say that they could elect where they would go in an area of twelve square miles. With today's motor car they have in that same half hour no less than 1,200 square miles in reach. And recently compiled registration figures show a total of more than 29,000,000 cars on the road in the United States, enough to haul the entire population at once.

Obviously enough few indeed now have to go to the movies for the lack of anything else to do, or anywhere else to go. With the radio making it easier to stay at home and with the car and open road making it easier to leave it for anywhere and everywhere, the motion picture is in a buyers' market. It has to draw or else.

There are the forces which have produced the high budgets of Hollywood, and the fierce internal competitions for proved, or even promised, values in skill and personality. The rest of the machinery, distribution and exhibition, is straining in the struggle to support the budgets and itself.

Impending, expected changes in distribution and selling methods, would tend to divide and diversify competition rather than increase its intensities.

Immediately, the box office needs, demands, diversity, a diversity comparable with the wide range of appeals of the printed word—and that is to be had by not only a multiplicity

This Week

The "Doctor"

That the Department of Commerce is approaching the motion picture industry as a doctor would a patient—to diagnose the ills and recommend a remedy—is evident from an analysis of the Department's motives for inviting, in recent weeks, all branches of the industry to tell their woes to sympathetic Department officials. Essentially, the Department wants to find out whether criticized practices are necessary for harmonious industry operation; whether, if essential, they are harmful to exhibitors or the public; whether, if not essential, substitute practices can be developed; whether, if essential, they can be modified; and whether the industry will accept the Department's suggestions, if any are made. It is apparent, also, that the Department does not intend to intervene in present Department of Justice anti-trust actions; that it is cognizant of the industry's self-regulation program; and that it is neutral in Congressional legislation of the Neely type.

Official explanations of motives are on page 13.

of producers of copy, but also of publishers, the masters to be pleased.

Today hardly more than ten or fifteen men ultimately decide what the millions of the motion picture audience are to see. No matter how good the job is, more men could do it better.

RADIO GETS A CODE

IT'S ALL very appropriate for the radio industry to adopt a code. But there's just one of the provisions which tends to arch the editorial eyebrow—that one in which it is said: "political dramatizations should be eliminated, since they tend to substitute emotional appeal for logic."

What about the use of the emotional appeal for pickles, soap, cereals and motor cars? Is that logical?

Obviously the controlling fact is that the public will take the emotional pabulum, about anything, but a politician who got out-dramatized on the air might make a lot of trouble.

One must hope, however, that radio will still permit the political orator his dramatic phrases, his "from the rockbound coast of Maine to the sunkissed slopes of California, from the pineclad hills of Minnesota to the silver Rio Grande," etc. Democracy demands that much.

1,000 Independents

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, organized body of British theatre operators, has before it a plan for an extensive booking combine, possibly embracing 1,000 independent theatres, which would present formidable buying opposition to the two largest British circuits, Gaumont and Odeon. John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, is reported ready to back the plan financially.

Aubrey Flanagan writes of this and of the continuing friction between British independents and circuits on page 17.

Not Acting

The showman's touch was again evident, this week, in the squabble between the American Federation of Actors and the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. Well covered by photographers and reporters of the wire services and New York newspapers, Sophie Tucker, president of the AFA, Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, and other of its officers walked out of the meeting room in the Bar Building, New York City, on Monday morning, 25 minutes after they had gone on trial before the AAAA for alleged mismanagement, undemocratic control, diversion of relief monies for personal and general union use, and divers other charges. They appealed to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for an immediate investigation of the AAAA, and proffered 16 counter-charges against the parent actors' union.

Foreign Quotations

Problems of currency; as to valuation and removal from abroad, and of public relations are being observed and discussed by foreign sales heads now in New York. Returned from contact with the field in Europe and the Americas are Walter Hutchinson, Twentieth Century-Fox foreign sales head; Morris Goodman, foreign sales head of Republic, and Peter Colli, Warner sales supervisor in Cuba and central America.

Their findings are on page 36.

The Neely Bill

The expected Senate vote on the Neely anti-block booking and blind selling bill was postponed last Friday because of the death of Claude Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, and was delayed again early this week, so that Senator Pat Harrison's social security legislation could be considered.

Widening Front

The Committee For Industrial Organization this week appeared to be taking advantage of the coast inter-union squabble, in which the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees has been fighting its former technicians' union, Local 37, for "rebellion" and in which it is being attacked for "company unionism." An organization, already claiming 3,000 of the estimated 12,000 studio technicians, and calling itself the United Studio Technicians, has established headquarters near the IATSE in Hollywood, and petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for recognition as the collective bargaining agent for all of the crafts over which the IATSE claims jurisdiction.

The move is reported on page 18 with other news of the labor front.

Mexican Closing

Three of the four motion picture production studios in Mexico City have been closed by producers pending agreement with studio workers on salaries and working conditions. Labor interests attribute the difficulty to the shutting off of credits in Central America and the virtually impossible conditions facing Mexican producers attempting to get credit in their own country. The loss of much South American business also is blamed. About 5,000 workers are idle.

Copyrights

The Section of Patent, Trade-Mark and Copyright Law of the American Bar Association, at its annual meeting in San Francisco, Monday, approved the unanimous report of its committee on copyright discussing far-reaching changes of an international as well as domestic nature proposed in the field of copyright law. Chief among the resolutions offered in behalf of the committee on copyrights by its chairman, Edward A. Sargoy, of the major motion picture companies' Copyright Protection Bureau, New York, was one disapproving adherence to the International Copyright Convention as recommended by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to the present Congress, unless there is prior domestic enabling legislation by Congress as a whole to prepare for such adherence.

Negro Theatres

An increase of 65 per cent in two years has been found in the number of Negro theatres in the United States, with 388 Negro theatres in 28 states, according to a survey prepared by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce, in cooperation with the specialist on Negro statistics of the U. S. Census Bureau and Sack Amusement Enterprises of Dallas. Florida, with 39 houses, leads all other states; while 175 cities are represented.

An analysis and listing of the theatres is on page 41.

Steffes Again

After repeatedly declining the post, and in spite of his vehement assertions that he would retire, W. A. Steffes, founder and president of the Northwest Allied, and a stormy petrel of national exhibition, was reelected on Tuesday to the local unit's presidency, a post he has held almost continuously since 1929. Mr. Steffes was named at the local organization's convention in the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis, site of the national convention of Allied last month. Other officers named were B. L. Peasley, vice-president; Ben Asch, secretary; Sidney Volk, treasurer.

The convention rejected the fair trade practice code, opposed increased film costs, and advised exhibitors to wait until September for film buying, at which time its buying combine may be ready. The convention also instructed its officers to try to have the Minneapolis Council legislate against shows longer than 135 minutes.

The report is on page 15.

Radio Code

Taking a leaf from the motion picture industry, radio, as represented by the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters, in Atlantic City this week, adopted a code of self regulation, with stipulations on the conduct of children's, religious, controversial, news, educational, and commercial programs. They listened to a special broadcast by Will Hays, president of MPPDA; and heard Carl E. Milliken, MPPDA secretary, tell of the wisdom and efficacy of the motion picture's self regulatory organizations.

By a vote of 148 to 24, the broadcasters voted to "try out" self regulation. They were also told by Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, that the radio industry did not need to fear Federal intervention "so long as it served democracy."

The story on page 25 reports the meeting.

Black and White

Miami exhibitors this week won the right to show films of prize fights in which one of the contestants is white and the other colored, in a battle they have waged with city commissioners since the days of the Jack Johnson-Jim Jeffries championship bout. A new city ordinance, repealing the old prohibitive measure, was passed by the city commission with a three-to-two vote after arguments in favor of the change had been presented by attorneys representing the Wometco circuit, operators of 14 theatres in Miami and three in Miami Beach. Attorneys for exhibitors pointed out that no other city in the country of Miami's size prohibited such showings.

Super-Ballyhoo

Having tried it, having noted its success, Paramount is not forgetting the comparatively new method of making one's big pictures known nationally by location premieres and, accordingly, is planning to super-ballyhoo no less than eight of its new pictures within the next eight weeks. Plans call for 30 special screenings on one picture; screenings for 48 Governors on another; a "Hollywood premiere" in the center of an Apache reservation, for another; a premiere aboard the Queen Mary for another. The pictures are "Beau Geste," "Our Leading Citizen," "The Star Maker," "Geronimo," "Ruler of the Seas," "Are Husbands Necessary," "Jamaica Inn," "Disputed Passage."

Plans are on page 34.

Lion Roars

Great Britain's Lion, which has been accused of too much silence by critics of "appeasement," answered back on Tuesday with the publication of budget estimates showing that the Government will spend approximately $1,500,000 in the new fiscal year in building up its propaganda machinery, in order to better compete with Italy and Germany in the new "war of words and nerves." The expenses will include coverage by press, radio, and, presumably, motion pictures, which are used to a great extent throughout the world by the totalitarian countries for propaganda purposes.

Quebec Reopens

The five weeks' dispute in Quebec between municipal authorities and theatre owners was ended this week when Premier Duplessis intervened to recommend abolition of the 10 per cent amusement tax increase imposed by the city of Quebec. The increase was still in force as the 11 theatres in the city reopened but was due to be repealed without delay. The Capitol, Quebec's largest theatre, reported an "average" matinee, while all other houses said attendance was increased over the same date last year. French theatres ran double and triple bills.

Foreign Film Showings

The place of the foreign film on the screens of the American motion picture theatre is seen in that 175 theatres in 85 different localities are showing imported pictures, exclusively or in conjunction with American films.

Of the 175 theatres (out of a total of 17,541 American theatres), 76, or 43 per cent, have only occasional showings.

The exhibition end of the foreign film situation, and a listing of theatres, their localities and the type of product they show will be found beginning on page 39.

U. S. HUNTS CAUSES OF FILM TRADE COMPLAINTS

Action Being Taken by Commerce Department with Full Cognizance of Industry's Own Trade Practice Program

The United States Government, through the Department of Commerce conferences being held with leaders of various branches of the motion picture business, seeks to determine what underliyng causes exist for intra-industry dissension, why they are if they are, and what can be done about them.

The Department, official spokesman explained to MOTION PICTURE HERALD this week, "is making a thorough diagnosis of the health of the motion picture industry with a view of recommending a course of treatment which will cure the ills" of which independent exhibitors, other industry factions, public groups, the Department of Justice and members of Congress have complained.

All of this action is being taken with full cognizance of the existence of the industry's own trade practice program of self-regulation, and without any intention of intervening in the Department of Justice anti-trust suits against the industry, or of influencing Congress in its consideration of legislation dealing with the industry, as evidenced by Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins last month in his letter to Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, sponsor of the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill.

Would Define Underlying Causes

On the contrary, official Department spokesmen stress, the Department is seeking to develop in sharp definition the underlying causes of the differences between the major producer-distributors and independent exhibitors, differences, it is pointed out, which have attracted no little Governmental and public attention.

Setting aside all of the fanciful contemplations attributed to it by Washington "observers," such as attempting to deal with "labor problems" of the industry, seeking new ways of expanding the domestic market, or underwriting an international conference at which "all foreign nations" would agree to a leveling of barriers for the benefit of Hollywood pictures abroad, official spokesmen sum up the Department's determinations in the present conferences as follows:

1. Whether practices of which there has been complaint are essential to the orderly operation of the motion picture industry;

2. Whether, if they are essential, they involve policies which work to the detriment of exhibitor or public interests;

3. Whether, if they are not essential, substitute practices can be developed which will eliminate abuses but insure a steady flow of product to all exhibitors;

4. Whether, if essential, they can be "cleaned up"; and,

5. Whether the motion picture industry is willing to take the steps necessary—if it is willing to "apply the doctor's prescription."

To lay the basis for these determinations, Department officials are seeking the views of all branches of the industry and of the various interests in each branch. Thus, it has sought the ideas of the major producers and the independent producers, the MPTOA, ITOA, Allied, and others. Each group is being asked to explain how it is affected by these various practices—block booking, cancellations, affiliated theatres, etc.—and, where possible, to submit factual evidence in support.

Since the initial meeting with the major producers, led by Will Hays, on June 6, the Department has been awaiting the submission by them of factual material which was then requested, as a basis for further discussions. That material—a fact hitherto undisclosed publicly—will deal with cancellations, sales of pictures in full blocks, smaller blocks and individually; mortality among small exhibitors and similar subjects.

Meanwhile, having heard the major's side the Department is now conferring with exhibitor groups, having already met, two weeks ago, with Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, arranged a meeting July 18th with Harry Brandt, president of the IOTA and is planning a conference with representatives of Allied July 19th.

Chance to Defend Practices

Pointing out that the industry is under fire at the Capitol and in the courts and that exhibitors and public groups are constantly complaining of its practices, officials of the Department now explain that their efforts also are being directed at the adoption of practices which will free the major producer-distributors from further harassment.

One of the aims of the meetings is to give the producers an opportunity to demonstrate that certain of the practices attacked are basically essential methods of doing business but, also, that they can be freed of the discriminations and abuses which have been the subject of attack.

Because of the pending Department of Justice anti-trust suit, Department of Commerce officials point out, both the film industry and the Justice Department are in awkward positions: industry members fear to lay any information before the Department in support of their contentions that their practices are not improper, because it might be used against them in the suit, and Justice officials feel they cannot ask the industry whether the correctives they seek to apply would simply eliminate abuses or go much further and precipitate chaotic conditions.

Thus barred from direct discussions, it was explained, the industry has brought its problem to the Department of Commerce in the hope that, serving, so to say, in an ex officio capacity, that Department could find a common ground where the controversies between distributors, exhibitors, public groups and the Government could be aired.

Seeks Assurance on Public Interests

In seeking thus to achieve an amicable solution of these difficulties, however, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins is insisting that the distributors prove their contentions that the interests of the exhibitors and the public are adequately considered, and it is to develop that picture that the distributors now are compiling statistical information in New York.

It was made clear at the June 6th meeting, apparently, that the distributors could expect Department of Commerce aid only if they were able to prove their contentions that the exhibitor and also the public were getting a "square deal."

Department of Commerce officials directly involved in the discussions are said to already have a better grasp of the mechanics of the industry than many members of Congress who

QUIET ON ANTI-TRUST SUIT FRONT

The week was the quietest one in a year in motion picture anti-trust suit developments, the lone action on pending actions taking place in Chicago, where trial of the Government's suit against Balaban & Katz and the majors was postponed until September 5th, after a month of trial testimony.

The suit is a criminal proceeding based upon alleged violations of a consent decree handed down in Chicago by Federal Judge Woodward in 1932. The Governments' case has been presented by Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the attorney-general, and Seymour Simon, his assistant. In the past two weeks they have presented their case before Edgar Eldredge, master-in-chancery.

The Government has attempted to show that theatremen in Chicago have been unable to secure first run pictures because of alleged monopoly held by B&K on all major product. Before the trial was postponed last Friday the Government called witnesses to the stand to tell about negotiations for product by several local exhibitors who wished to take over the Oriental theatre in the loop which had been closed by B&K. This motion was allowed by the court and a motion to strike taken under advisement.

In September the Government will wind up their case and the defense will start immediately to present their side.

The suit filed by Chicago independent exhibitors against Balaban & Katz and the major companies will also be postponed until this fall it is learned. A hearing on the case is scheduled before Federal Judge Wilkerson this week but a postponement will be asked until fall as the attorneys engaged in the defense and much of the material sought for the suit are now involved in the Government suit which will probably be settled before the independent suit starts.

N.Y. ALLIED CONTINUES NEGOTIATIONS

have been "studying" the industry for years and have the added advantage of approaching the subject in disinterested and impartial manner. Thus, in discussing block booking, Department of Commerce chiefs showed that they were interested in determining whether any other form of distribution would meet exhibitors' requirements for a steady flow of product, but at the same time demanded evidence to show whether the block booking practice was being applied to the disadvantage of exhibitors.

Again resorting to the medical analogy, Department officials explained that after the diagnosis is completed, they hope to be able to recommend a course whereby the industry itself can act to improve its health. However, it was emphasized, whether the industry adopts the Department's recommendations is up to the industry and whether the reformation, if undertaken, influences the Department of Justice to a more considerate attitude is up to that Department.

Admitting that they did not know whether they could do anything for the industry, the Commerce officials point out that it is under fire from several directions and there is little hope of a solution of its problems which would be equally satisfactory to all interests other than through some procedure such as they have undertaken.

New York, New Jersey, Texas Allieds' Views

Taking a stand independent of its national parent, Allied Theatres of New York, in convention last week, in Syracuse, decided to continue negotiations with distributors for a code adaptable to New York State. National Allied had flatly turned down the document.

Adding its policy to that of a score or more of affiliated and unaffiliated state exhibitor organizations, New York Allied completely ignored the code's rejection by its national affiliate.

intent of the proposed code reached at Chicago."

New Jersey Allied, however, this week rejected the code, following similar action by most Allied state units. Also taking code action this week was Allied of Texas, the board of which recommended that members do not sign the code individually, Texas Allied's board having previously rejected the program.

The organization appointed a five-man committee to continue negotiations with distributor representatives in an effort to obtain "a fair trade practice code for the state of New York," it was disclosed in a statement from Max A. Cohen, president of New York Allied.

Whether or not the state unit's action in refusing to follow the lead of national Allied in rejecting the code implies or will lead to a complete break away from the parent organization was not immediately certain. Mr. Cohen refused to comment on this phase of the state organization's action, confining himself to his prepared statement which follows:

"At a statewide meeting of New York Allied held at Syracuse, in view of the rejection of the proposed fair trade practice code by the national organization at Minneapolis, the members present reaffirmed the New York unit's oft-repeated policy of doing all within its power to keep negotiations alive and thus endeavor to eventually bring about proper and adequate regulation of the industry from within.

"New York Allied feels this can and should be done, and, therefore, meeting resolved and directed that a committee of five be appointed to confer with the Distributors' Committee for the purpose of evolving a Fair Trade Practice Code for the state of New York. This committee was authorized and empowered to conclude negotiations with the distributors in the event that a satisfactory document could be evolved which would embody with definite clarity the intent of the proposed code reached at Chicago."

The committee appointed consists of Mr. Cohen, chairman; Happ Merriman and S. Grossman of Syracuse; Mitchel Conery of Ravena and Ray Pashley of Interlaken, with H. Laurence of Cattaraugus as alternate.

Owners Seek "Better Deal" in Rentals

Connecticut independent exhibitors this week launched a drive to force lower film rentals in the territory and "forcing" of short subjects and newsreels adopted at their recent joint meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Allied members. The resolution has been published in advertisements in the trade press and has been sent to all distributors' home offices and to the Department of Justice in Washington.

The resolution bears the signatures of Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., president of MPTO of Connecticut and Maurice Shulman, president of Allied of Connecticut.

The resolution reads:

'Whereas theatre grosses have been constantly falling for the past year and now dropped to an alarming degree, and

"Whereas, the prices of film rentals have been constantly rising contrary to the business trend, and

"Whereas, said film distributors are forcing the sale of shorts and newsreels, contrary to the spirt of the code they offer to the trade,

"Now therefore, be it Resolved, that we, the independent exhibitors of Connecticut, in meeting assembled this 27th day of June, 1939, at the Hof-Brau, New Haven, demand decreases in film rentals for the ensuing year, commensurate with the drop in grosses, and be it further resolved, that we will not be coerced, directly or indirectly, into the buying of shorts and newsreels."

Canadians Reject Clearance Plan

Independent Canadian exhibitors have rejected the suggestion advanced by the present Conciliation Committee in Toronto for a discussion of the present clearance situation by a 10 member committee.

An offer has been announced whereby the situation would be dealt with by the present Conciliation Committee, consisting of four independent exhibitors, four circuit representatives and two distributor representatives. Consideration of concrete grievances by this committee, with a view to the adoption of basic terms for a reorganization of the system, would, the independent exhibitors felt, not be productive inasmuch as they claim that no organization in the Canadian trade at present can take independent action.

Instead, they are asking for an independent and neutral board of arbitration after they have become organized from coast to coast through the Anti-Protection League. Said to be behind the League now are the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario, the British Columbia Independent Theatres Association, the Manitoba Exhibitors Association and the Nova Scotia Independent Exhibitors Association, with the Quebec independent theatre men reported as ready to declare themselves.

After complete organization, the League will call a conference to draw up a plan of action; and, if headway cannot be made by arbitration, the final step would be to depend upon a request for intervention by the Canadian Government.

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION!

Money in circulation reached a total of $7,046,444,003 on June 30th, the highest in American history except for a few days during the 1933 banking holiday, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

The treasury said the latest total was equal to $53.72 for every man, woman child in the country. In May, the total was $6,967,395,463, equal to $53.15 per person, and a year ago, it was $6,460,891,315, or $49.62 per person.

The figures include cash held in bank vaults and also cash which has been taken abroad by foreigners for hoarding. Foreign hoarding, officials said, accounts for much of the increase in the last year.

Majors Changing Their Arbitration Agreement

Sales managers of the seven major companies participating in the trade practice program met Monday at New York's Hotel Astor for further discussion on proposed changes in the arbitration provisions. Problems relative to making the Code completely effective were also discussed.

Those participating were: William F. Rodgers, chairman of the distributors' negotiating committee and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer general sales manager; William Sussman, Twentieth Century-Fox eastern sales manager; Neil Agnew, Paramount vice-president and sales manager; Gradwell Sears, Warner sales head; Ned Depinet, RKO vice-president and head of distribution; William Scully, Universal vice-president and sales manager, and Abe Montague, Columbia sales manager.

Another meeting was held Wednesday afternoon, with practically the same group participating.

Mr. Rodgers has declined to comment on the committee's reaction to New York Allied's request this week for separate negotiations on the code on behalf of its members.

Grand National Meet Scheduled for Friday

The meeting of Grand National stockholders called to consider the company's new financing plan, under which approximately $1,000,000 would be supplied by Felt and Company, of New York, was scheduled to be held Friday.

Pending settlement of financial matters, all except a skeleton staff of employees has been removed from the company payroll in Hollywood.

Rebush Sets Film

Roman Rebush, who recently organized Credo Pictures, Inc., plans "Mirele Efros," based on the novel by Jacob Gordin, as the first of four Jewish films planned.

Steffes Forming Buying Combine After Re-election

Re-elected for a three-year term at an annual salary of $15,000 per year, W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Allied and "Fighting Al" in national exhibitor politics since 1929, when he founded the organization, this week was busy pressing an extensive program of activity for the unit, as a consequence of his re-election at the annual convention on Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis.

Mr. Steffes had refused the presidency; he wanted to retire and gain more time for his own business, he said in vehement protests before the convention. However, the salary attached to the position is reported to have induced a change of mind.

The convention directed the officers of the organization to form a buying and booking combine, and a committee is being appointed to proceed with its organization. The report of the committee is expected to be ready for presentation to the membership by September 1. Another convention will be held in early September.

Passed was a resolution condemning the trade practice code, which had been rejected by the national convention at the same hotel the week of June 13. Another resolution passed was one condemning the furnishing of commercial films to the University of Minnesota, and a committee was appointed to call on the university's board of regents to ask them to have the practice discontinued. The convention also instructed its officers to see whether city councils could and would pass ordinances prohibiting beer taverns, dance halls and similar places, from showing 16-mm. films, unless they had theatre licenses.

Mr. Steffes this week was to send a letter to all members, urging them to make only the minimum amount of film purchases until arrangements could be completed for the booking and buying combine, which is expected to be part of a national booking and buying co-operative exceeding in buying power any present-day circuit.

The letter also asserts that, contrary to stories published in the trade press, there is no discord in the Allied organization.

It was announced during the convention that 15 theatres in the Twin City area are closing because of poor business and inability to obtain suitable films.

Thirty representatives of 95 theatres attended.

To Cover Orient

RKO Pathe News has dispatched Captain Patrick Smith to take pictures in Manchukuo and North China, starting in Tientsin, and Rey Scott to Rangoon, following the new military and supply road through French Indo-China to Chungking, provisional capital of the Chinese government for the purpose of filming the present situation in the Orient. Pathe's former Far Eastern cameraman, A. T. Hull, has returned to the United States for a rest.

Altec has expanded service activities by five additional Essaness theatres in Chicago. R. Hilton negotiated for Altec.

Plan Publicity Drive to Mark Motion Pictures' Golden Jubilee

The motion picture industry of the United States plans, in its fashion, to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary as a "Golden Jubilee", through the first week of October. It is designed as pure publicity.

The event is to be more jubilee than golden, coming both in contrast with and in sequel to the million-dollar "Motion Pictures are Your Best Entertainment" campaign of last year's poignant memory.

Plans of the project were given out at a press conference with Kenneth Clark of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week, following a meeting of the sub-committee of the Advertising Advisory Council of the MPPDA. The plans contemplate no drives, quizzes, contests, pledges, certificates or largess of advertising to the newspaper press, like last year.

The press will be invited and encouraged to give the Jubilee editorial and feature attention. The exhibitors will be urged, and equipped with mimeographed material, to carry on local campaigns and promotions.

The Jubilee campaign will be opened for the nation in mid-August by an expression, to press and radio, by Will H. Hays.

Operations are in the hands of the special sub-committee which includes Lester Thompson, Joel Swensen, Mr. Clark, Harry Goldberg, Ben Grimm, William Ferguson and Lou Pollock. Hollywood's publicity departments and functionaries are being invited to participate.

The Golden Jubilee comes rather as a consequence of the "Quiz" drive of last year. When that campaign was being framed in behalf of the boxoffice as a commercial expedient, pretext was sought and dates reviewed in the hope that the period might contain an anniversary of something. It did not. Meanwhile, the fact that it was October 6, 1889, that the Edison Kinetoscope was first demonstrated in his West Orange laboratories obtruded. The Quiz drive then took on for itself its "Greatest Year" pretext and Hollywood, somewhat unofficially, promised to ring the welkin and rouse the nation, the next season on the fiftieth anniversary. The "Greatest Year" and Quiz resulting as they did, Hollywood became less than ecstatic about the project. Now New York and the home office will see about getting some pieces in the paper. —T. R.

The fiftieth anniversary got its first attention from the industry, and from Hollywood, by dramatic reference to the event of October 6, 1889, by Cecil B. DeMille on the radio across national networks on the program of the banquet which closed Paramount Picture Corporation's national sales convention at the Hotel Ambassador in June.

RCA Issues Catalog Covering Sound Field

A new 56-page catalogue containing a complete listing of all RCA sound equipment for use in the entertainment, educational and industrial fields has been announced by the Commericial Sound Section of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

All items in the RCA line of sound equipment are indexed and catalogued with photographs, prices, specifications, and general descriptions, including possible uses.

Set "Feathers" Drive

Special advertising and exploitation campaigns have been prepared for Alexander Korda's "Four Feathers" by United Artists. Plans include a $100,000 newspaper campaign budget in addition to full color pages in Life, Look and American Weekly. An exploitation staff of 40 men will be assigned to the first key city engagements of the picture by United Artists.

Plan Yiddish Feature

Carmel Productions has acquired the rights to Chawer Pawers' dramatization of the novel, "Fischke der Krumme," by Mendel Mechas-Phurim, and will produce it as a Yiddish film. Edgar G. Ulmer will direct.

Skirball Leaves Grand National

The resignation of J. H. Skirball as vice-president in charge of production and as a director of Grand National Pictures, Inc., was announced Tuesday in a joint statement by Mr. Skirball and E. W. Hammons, Grand National president.

Mr. Skirball said "for some time past it has been my desire to devote all of my time to my own independent production."

Pascal Sets "Major Barbara"

Gabriel Pascal, British producer who has the film rights to George Bernard Shaw's plays, plans "Major Barbara" as his next picture, to be made at the Pinewood studio, with "Doctor's Dilemma" in the spring. He sailed from New York this week to start "Major Barbara." Accompanying him were Victor Orsatti, Hollywood agent, who will assist in working out a release and Marion Baldwin of the Orsatti office.

Kleckner with Jam Handy

Joseph B. Kleckner, former president of Motiograph, Inc., has been named to the executive staff of the Jam Handy organization, Detroit. The company has moved to larger quarters there.

ACTOR UNION CHIEFS GO ON TRIAL; "FOUR A'S" REJECT AFL TRUCE PLEA

Sophie Tucker, President of AFA, Whitehead and Other Officers "Walk Out"; "Undemocratic Control" Charged

More "dramatics," immediately flaring into the front pages of New York newspapers, occurred this week as trial began, for mismanagement, of executives of the American Federation of Actors, by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union. Twenty-five minutes after the trial started on Monday in a meeting room of the Bar Building, in New York City, Sophie Tucker, president of the AFA, Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, and other of its officers, "walked out."

Miss Tucker appealed to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for an "immediate investigation" of the AAAA, and filed 16 charges against it.

Meantime, the "trial" continued, without the defendants. Paul Turner, counsel to the AAAA, characterized the AFA officers' action as "sheer subterfuge."

Trial Adjourned

The trial was recessed late Wednesday until Friday to allow for the introduction of any new evidence. It was felt unlikely however that any new evidence will be presented.

In the event that no more is made by AFA executives who are being tried, by way of court injunction or some internal action, the case will go to the membership of the international board of the AAAA for final decision; the board being scheduled to meet Friday.

Bernard Reis, an accountant, testified on Monday, in support of the AAAA charges against the AFA leadership. He testified that benefit performance funds were not used for relief; that they were used along with general union funds; that a $1,700 automobile was given to Mr. Whitehead, during the time that the AFA was compelled to use relief funds for general union purposes.

Other charges against the AFA leadership have included those of "undemocratic control"; alleged inability of dissidents to obtain a voice in union affairs; and alleged inability of AFA rank-and-filers suffering working condition injustices, to obtain action from their leaders.

On Tuesday, performers of the Billy Rose Aquacade, in the New York World's Fair, testified. They claimed withheld wages, insanitary conditions, and intimidation; and that the AFA officers had refused to help them.

Denies Equity Domination

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the SAG, then took the stand, and denied that his union was dominated by the Actors' Equity, as claimed by the AFA. He charged the AFA with failure to cooperate with the SAG, and with various items of misconduct.

Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative of the SAG, testified that the AFA had neglected to organize participants in film theatre stage shows.

An affidavit from Fred Keating, a past president of the AFA, and a dissident in the dispute, was then read; this claimed that when the IATSE threatened to invade the jurisdiction of the SAG, he was unable to obtain cooperation from the AFA.

At the AFA offices on Tuesday evening it was said that the AFA had encountered difficulty in staging "walkouts" of film theatre stage persons, because of refusal of New York projectionists' union, Local 306, to cooperate.

Mr. Rose, also on Tuesday evening, after the news of his employees' testimony at the trial was received, denied their allegations, and asserted that conditions wholly opposite from those they described, existed.

Henry Jaffe, attorney for the AAAA investigating committee, whose report formed the basis for the investigation, brought out in Tuesday's testimony the allegations that, although the Los Angeles office sent $11,469 to the New York AFA offices last year, the New York offices had not sent enough money to prevent the closing of the Los Angeles office, the rental of which was $15 monthly.

The trial charges were submitted to the AAAA several weeks ago by an investigating board headed by Mrs. Florence Marston, eastern representative of the Screen Actors' Guild. A trial board was thereupon appointed, and the AFA officers ordered to reply in writing to the charges. The AFA leadership refused at first to do this, and denied the AAAA power or jurisdiction to try a member union. Mr. Whitehead and Miss Tucker finally appeared last week at hearing before the AAAA, and repeated their counter-charges. Mr. Halprin, the AFA attorney, in denying the AAAA powers to order trial, also asked for a bill of particulars from the AAAA, which was delivered last week.

Seek Vote of Confidence

Miss Tucker and Mr. Whitehead had attempted to gain a vote of confidence from the membership of their union. The attempt failed when a meeting at the Hotel Edison, in New York, broke up in a near-riot. The maneuver merely accented the endeavors of a rebellious AFA group known as "The Ferrets," which then held its own meeting, and petitioned the AAAA for redress. The insurgents want permission to reorganize the AFA, if the present leaders are found guilty.

The AFA has maintained, since the order that its leaders stand trial for mismanagement, that the AAAA international board is "unfair" and that the trial is the result of "plotting" by the Actors' Equity officials to gain control of the AFA.

In the AFA charges to Mr. Green, president of the A. F. of L., it is maintained that Actors' Equity dominates the AAAA; that it influenced the naming of board delegates from the Screen Actors' Guild and the American Federation of Radio Artists; that the AAAA paid its officials exorbitant salaries; that it refused to give financial statements; that it permitted the Actors' Equity to collect half the dues paid by the SAG; that the organization was undemocratic; that it had failed to organize the acting profession.

Court action has been hinted at by Mr. Whitehead. However, it was not known at midweek whether the courts would entertain an inter-union fight. The rebellious AFA members, "The Ferrets," have declared they will seek an injunction to prevent AFA union funds from being used in a court battle.

The AAAA trial was begun this week, despite a plea last week by William Green that a special mediation board of the A. F. of L. hear the charges and the AFA answers. The AAAA turned down the plea because such intervention in the business of a subsidiary union would create a "dangerous precedent," and because it would not be binding on both sides.

Halprin's Replies to Charges

At the Friday meeting, in New York, at which Mr. Green made his mediation offer, Mr. Halprin, for the AFA, submitted a 14-page reply to the AAAA charges. In partial detail, these replies say:

That the benefit funds borrowed for general use had been returned and set up in a special account.

That Mr. Whitehead's $1,700 car was needed, and used, for union activity; and besides, the AAAA had no right to question such things.

That union finances made it necessary to pay collectors' expenses and organizers' commissions out of dues pyaments; and besides, it was done by other AAAA unions.

That Mr. Whitehead did not control the union; Miss Tucker was the most active member.

That union meetings were conducted democratically.

That dispersion of union membership through the country made it impossible to hold full council and membership meetings.

That financial status of the union made organization of film houses with stage shows impossible; but that this may still be done.

That the trial board was acting as "persecutor, prosecutor, and judge."

MAY FORM AAAA CONSUMER UNIT

The Associated Actors and Artistes of America may form a consumers co-operative, to obtain for its approximately 100,000 members of films, stage, radio and concert the benefits in reduced material prices that are received by members of the estimated 25,000 other such groups in this country, Paul Turner, general counsel to the AAAA, said this week. The co-operative would begin operations in New York, first; then in Chicago, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. Studies are now being made. Listed as participating in such a plan are all of the AAAA major member unions, except the American Federation of Actors, leaders of which are under fire by the AAAA.

Equity Not to Ask For Increased Minimum

Actors' Equity will not ask for increased minimum on stage salaries from legitimate stage producers when negotiations open with the League of New York Theatres next month, it is understood.

Reforms in the working of the ticket brokers' code may be sought, however, and unless they are granted, Equity will revert to its previous policy of making contracts with individual producers rather than the League, it was further reported. The present contract expires on September 1st, and is a one-year agreement providing that Equity would not seek more favorable working conditions if the producers made an honest effort to enforce the ticket code, which Equity regards as a matter of concern to the union. The talent union feels that if theatre going is made easier, employment in the theatre may increase.

NEW BRITISH PLAN WOULD COMBINE 1,000 INDEPENDENTS ON BOOKINGS

General Council of Exhibitors' Organization Studies Maxwell Backed Plan; Opposition to GB and Odeon Circuits Seen

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

A revolutionary production and booking scheme under which a group of independents, possibly totalling 1,000, would be assured a continuity of product was before the general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association this week for consideration and possible action. The plan would be backed by John Maxwell, who last June informally proposed the formation of a booking block in collaboration with the product of Associated British Pictures, his production company.

Under the new plan, presumably, a group of independents designated by the CEA would receive preferential bookings with the Maxwell circuit for films produced at Elstree and either made or guaranteed financially by Mr. Maxwell. The plan, if made effective, would offer formidable opposition to the Odeon and Gaumont British circuits. It also would create an unparalleled market situation and give Mr. Maxwell unequalled powers to create a new trading situation with American distributors in England.

It will be remembered that Mr. Maxwell has been carrying on a long standing feud with the Ostrer brothers who control Gaumont British. Two years ago, after a plan for realignment of GB control which would have given Joseph and Nicholas Schenck more control than is now exercised by Twentieth Century-Fox (American holder of GB interest) was abandoned, Mr. Maxwell purchased a $3,000,000 Class "A" non-voting interest in the Ostrer company. A year later he filed suit against the Ostrer brothers charging misrepresentation in the sale. Before the action came to trial, however, Mr. Maxwell abruptly resigned from the GB directorate and withdrew the suit.

The CEA general council was to receive the proposed booking plan on Wednesday and it was expected to bring mixed reactions. Obvious difficulties have been pointed out, such as the possibility of similar schemes being adopted by other interests. However general approval of the plan in principle is anticipated.

Internal Strife Mars CEA Session

Hardly discernible over the contented murmurings of delegates sunning themselves at the annual CEA Conference at Britain's biggest pleasure resort Blackpool, but audible none the less to those bent on listening, came once again the rumbles of the incessant exhibitor conflict twixt circuits and independents.

To the sunlit seacoast town came exhibitors armed with golf clubs and dinner jackets. Came, too, a vexed and discontented band, bent on raising in more than one reach the discontent felt among the independents at the alleged lack of communality among the large cinema owning groups. In the general council itself, with a special reference to Bank Nights and television, in discussions over the various papers read at the conference, in at least one paper itself dealing with exhibitor problems, the opinion was markedly expressed that all is not well in the matter. The viewpoint that there is need for an independent group within the association, widely held in various CEA centers, was forcibly expressed at the general council meeting.

Something akin to the atmosphere of battle broke out at the general council meeting to which was presented a report condemning the operation of Bank Nights in general and specifically deprecating the institution of a prize scheme on the Gaumont British circuit and a competition on the Odeon chain.

Bent on defending the Gaumont British citadel against potential attack, Arthur Jarratt journeyed to Blackpool to avail himself of special permission to address the meeting. Despite his impassioned riposte—a challenge to the judicial efficiency of the CEA—independents launched forth into a vigorous attack upon the circuits, not even disdaining to moot the idea of an exclusively independent group.

Dispute on Television

In the report presented to the General Council on the contemporary television situation, reference was made pointedly to the fact that the Postmaster General, hearing the trade deputation's emphatic objection to the present manner of managing television broadcasts through cinemas, had countered with the statement that one powerful cinema group had told him emphatically that the trade wanted big screen television. Likewise was it recorded in the report that though the renters in general were at one with the exhibitors on television policy, certain renters, associated with cinema owning groups, took a different standpoint, insisting that as television progressed they would be forced to install.

This determined independence of operation of the circuits over such matters as television and Bank Nights, thus provoked the discontent among the independents to a state of irascibility which not even the semi-festive air of Blackpool could stifle.

The circuit attitude would seem to remain the same as it was in the matter of overlong programmes—still a cause of provocation and annoyance to the unattached theatre operators, especially in the face of the present product shortage—that until the Association can emphatically and unequivocally give assurance that it can bind its members to a policy, they will continue to trade and to sell their films to the public as they like. Jarratt indeed virtually challenged the General Council on the point, suggesting that if such assurance and guarantee could be forthcoming, circuits would co-operate sympathetically.

The CEA General Council, ever a pacific and conciliatory body, had been moved to protest against the possible spread of Bank Nights in general, condemned not alone for their commercial undesirability, but for the legal dangers they might provoke on the grounds of obstruction by crowds, etc., but against the institution of a prize scheme on the GB circuit in conjunction with a holiday camp. More forcible and less conciliatory were the comments in discussion of veteran Northerner Morrison, who, with impassioned speech, expressed "shame and amazement" that the general council should suggest it be looked upon with blinkers, who, "though he had never advocated an independent association," suggested it might be time to consider whether they should not get together. Ken Nyman, too, pleaded for a trade committee to examine the whole question of inducements to the public. Pacifically, however, the suggestion of an examining committee was sidetracked by President Hinge, who diplomatically manipulated the matter back for discussion to the existent general purposes committee of the CEA.

Urges Local Organizations

Though the intensity of the conflict was not perhaps expressed in public with the vigor which the general state of mind would command, though the most spirited discussions proved to be over the matter of training of projectionists, the rattle of rebel musketry, or at best the cocking of triggers, was heard at other moments in the week's proceedings. Despite the generally uncontroversial character of his paper on Exhibitor Problems, Arthur Watts, South Wales independent, found it incumbent on his examination to comment upon the trading position of the independent faced with circuit opposition, was moved to advocate—with especial reference to MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S recent discussions of the American counterpart—that independents organize locally to enjoy some of the trading position held by the groups and to secure some of the better product presently denied them. It is true that Watts scarified some independents for their bad buying, criticised the bars they set up against one another, emphasized that the solution lies in their own hands. The significant factor is that in so moderate a discussion of the contemporary scene he found it imperative to examine the independent position, not neglecting either to chide the groups with their current devotion to Bank Nights.

The annual CEA Conference has no constitutional status, being little more than an annual outing to permit a general exchange of ideas, and an expression of viewpoints. Decisions and resolutions made there are of no constitutional or binding value. None the less, the occasional outbursts of independent pugnacity, and the general clearing of the air, are likely to have immediate repercussions, not only in the General Council, but in such branches as the London Branch, where an independent sub-committee exists and functions, and no less on other areas likely to follow the lead of London in forming subsidiary bodies within the branches. The independent voice will probably be heard more forcibly than ever in the forthcoming year.

ALLIED BOOKING PLAN AWAITS OKLAHOMA TEST

An Allied States Association plan to gain buying power for independent exhibitors by forming a booking combine for 2,500 theatres is in abeyance pending a test on a smaller scale in Oklahoma. The plan originally was to have been proposed at the Allied convention in Minneapolis early in June but it was decided to withhold plans for its establishment until a test could be made. The newly formed Allied unit in Oklahoma had as one of the important planks in its platform the formation of a booking combine for its members.

Unofficial reports on Tuesday from the meeting of Allied of the Northwest in Minneapolis are that the major plan would be started shortly.

CIO MOVES ON HOLLYWOOD FRONT AS UNIONS CONTINUE TO SQUABBLE

Offers Financial Support to New Group Petitioning NLRB for Bargaining Designation; Vertical Unionism Is Goal

John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization this week actually began its long threatened drive for vertical unionization of Hollywood studio crafts. The attack is aimed at the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which for long has controlled the Hollywood union situation.

Financial Support Offered

Over the weekend, the CIO offered its financial support to the United Studio Technicians, which has opened offices in Hollywood near the offices of the IATSE, and which claims an enrollment of 3,000 of the 12,000 estimated studio technicians. The United leaders voted acceptance on Sunday of the CIO financial assistance.

While the international officers of the IATSE, in their battle with the rebellious members of the Local 37, studio technicians, have charged the insurgents with Communistic tendencies, there has been no connection, publicly, between the Local 37 insurgent figures and the new CIO union. However, the United has not revealed the names of its directors, and its board has been described as temporary.

United has filed an application with the National Labor Relations Board for certification as collective bargaining agency for all crafts now governed by the IATSE. Spokesmen for the new group claim that members of the five new unions set up by the IATSE international officers to take the place of the old Local 37, desire to rid themselves of IATSE affiliation, and join the United.

Attorney Charles J. Katz has been representing the new group in its NLRB relations, and in speaking to the press.

Bargaining Demands Drafted

Meantime, the officers of the five new locals formed by the IATSE from the Local 37, have been drafting demands for bargaining agreements, to be given to Pat Casey, producers' labor contact. However, the demands this week were being held pending the NLRB settlement of the United application for recognition.

International officers of the IATSE, battling the deposed officership of one union, Local 37, and battling for jurisdiction in other quarters, this week called the new union's claims of membership "fantastic."

The jurisdictional battle involving the IATSE resulted this week from demand of the Photographers Local 659, an IATSE affiliate, that the cinematographers and first cameramen of the studios be returned to its jurisdiction. The demands are being made to Mr. Casey, in a formal petition for new wage scales and working conditions. The American Society of Cinematographers now has jurisdiction, having signed a five year contract in 1934 with the studios, and having recently signed a five-year extension of this pact.

The agreement now in force was reached after bitter dispute.

Last Friday, in the suit, in Hollywood, by the Local 37 insurgents to regain control of their union from the IATSE international officership, J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, denied that he participated in the campaign against the international leaders during the 1937 strike and that he had termed the IATSE unit a "company union."

WPA ACTORS OFF ROLLS JULY 31

Approximately 7,900 actors and other workers on the Works Progress Administration Federal Theatre Project will be dropped from the payrolls on July 31, instead of October 1, as originally expected, under provisions of the Federal relief funds bill, passed by Congress after bitter debate, and which ended the activities of the theatre on June 30. The bill contained a clause stating that workers must cease work but that they "might" be paid until October 1. The WPA officers appeared this week to have used their discretionary power adversely for the actors. The excuse given was that it appeared unwise to continue paying workers in a project on which the administrative employees themselves had ceased to function.

SAG Tells Agents: "Sign or Fight"

The dispute on the coast between the Screen Actors' Guild and the talent agents, over terms of the proposed new licensing agreement, will be settled within the month, or there will be no agreement, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the SAG, declared in New York this week. The Guild will force the issue, he said.

Other Developments On The Union Front

The long smoldering dispute between New York projectionists' union, Local 306, and the exhibitors at the New York World's Fair, was estinguished over the weekend, by an agreement under which operators of automatic 16 mm projectors will receive $12.28 for a six-hour day and operators of standard 35 mm machines will continue receiving $16.83 for a six-hour day.

Also in New York, on last Friday, Local 52, studio mechanics, agreed on a contract with the producers, in the offices of Pat Casey, producers' labor contact. All principal points were agreed upon, and the pact becomes valid upon approval of the union's membership.

In Philadelphia, Universal's exchange in that city has been compelled by the National Labor Relations Board to bargain with the United Office and Professional Workers of America, a CIO affiliate. The company was ordered last week to post notices for 60 days, stating that it will bargain with the union; it was also ordered to notify the Philadelphia regional NLRB director of compliance with the order, within two weeks. The Philadelphia union is Local No. 2.

In New York, the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants Union has petitioned the NLRB for recognition as collective bargaining agent at the Paramount warehouse.

In New York also, negotiations between the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers union and the Five Boro Theatre circuit, on a new contract which will recognize the union as the agent of the "front office" employees and readjust wages and hours, continued this week.

In Pensacola, Florida, the city's building and construction trades council has signed agreements with the Gulf and Belmont theatres in West Florida. The agreement, not affecting projectionists, provides that the theatres be removed from the unions' "do not patronize" list, and that the theatres do not hire non-unionists.

In Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eckhardt, operators of the Wisconsin, Palace, and Rapids, signed an agreement with the local projectionists' union, running till September 1, 1940, providing for two men in a booth, closed shop, and upward adjustment of wage scales.

In Detroit, the Fox Theatre was "talking" with the local unions this week, to secure reduction of its maintenance staff of six engineers and four electricians. Manager David Idzal pointed out that all other payrolls had been cut, and that continued operation of the house depended upon the success of the conferences.

Trendle Resigns from United Detroit Circuit

George W. Trendle has resigned as president and operating head of United Detroit Theatres Corporation following discontinuance of extended negotiations with Paramount over a renewal of his operating agreement with the circuit.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, said that no successor to Trendle had been decided on yet. He said that no other officials of United Detroit are affected by the resignation and declared that the theatres would not be placed under operating direction of Balaban and Katz. Earl Hudson, who has been assisting Mr. Trendle, has been mentioned as a possible successor.

Mr. Trendle will devote his entire time to his growing radio interest in Detroit and throughout Michigan, the increasing importance of which is said to have influenced his decision to resign his theatre post. He is president of Michigan Radio Network, which includes nine stations in principal cities in the state, and heads the King-Trendle Broadcasting Corporation, operating Station WXYZ, Detroit. In addition, his radio interests include ownership of The Lone Ranger and The Green Hornet programs.

It is understood Mr. Trendle will continue in charge of the theatre company's affairs until a successor has been named.

Alfred A. Cohn, film writer, has been named to the Los Angeles city board of public utilities and transportation by Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

The outing of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, scheduled for July 25th, has been postponed to July 27th because the former date falls on a Jewish holiday.

MAJORS SEND KILROE TO EUROPE TO DETERMINE COPYRIGHT CHANGES

Survey of Foreign Opinion on Possible Amendments to Berne Convention Next Spring Is Object of Trip

The complex copyright situation is at the moment of serious concern to the major companies, who fear havoc will follow in the motion picture and other large industries if the United States adheres to the Berne Convention on copyrights before the United States Copyright Act is revised. Proposed changes in the U. S. Act are now before congress, but are not due to be acted upon at this session.

Berne Changes Sought

Accordingly, Edwin P. Kilroe, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, sailed Wednesday on the S.S. Normandie to survey European sentiment with reference to the conference to be held in Brussels next spring to amend the Berne Convention.

Mr. Kilroe will confer with foreign office officials in London, Paris, Brussels and Berne to ascertain the probabilities of having radical changes made in the Berne Convention at the Brussels Conference.

"There is a feeling abroad as well as in the United States that the Convention should be revised so that the rights and obligations are fully set forth in the document itself and nothing left to the national laws of each country," Mr. Kilroe said. "These rights should be in force in every country of the Convention. Under the present Convention, the remedies are left to the laws of the country in which the rights are claimed. If the United States adheres to the Berne Convention before the United States Copyright Act is revised, it will play great havoc with many large industries."

Freedom of Adaptation Necessary

Mr. Kilroe will obtain the viewpoints of the representatives of the English speaking countries, and of France, Italy and other European countries on propositions for changes in the Berne Convention. Among these are:

1. Limitation of restrictions in the moral rights clause. Without the right to rearrange, adapt and change the stories and music, the motion picture industry cannot operate, he pointed out. Thousands of stories and plays would have to be cast aside since changes for censorship or other reasons could not be made.
2. Elimination of oral copyright clause.
3. Reservation of certain rights in works which are now in the public domain but would be protected upon the adherence of the United States to the Berne Convention.
4. In accordance with American law, making the producer of a film the author instead of accrediting the authorship of this motion picture to many participating in its production, including the writer of the screen story.

Mr. Kilroe made a similar survey of copyright and Berne Convention conditions in Europe in 1936.

In addition Mr. Kilroe, who is copyright advisor to Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, will be interested in the following:

1. Participation in the preparation and argument of the appeal in the Privy Council in England in the "Monte Carlo" case. This involves the question of the right to use titles in Canada.

Twentieth Century-Fox made a picture entitled "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." Francis Day and Hunter, Ltd., owner of the song of the same title, brought an action for infringement and unfair competition in Canada. The lower court decided in favor of Francis Day and Hunter and awarded judgment in a sum of approximately $1,000. An appeal was taken and the Appellate Court reversed the lower court and held:

(a) There was no conflict in Canada between a song title and a motion picture title;

(b) That although the Canadian Copyright Act states that a title of a work is protected as part of the work if the title is original and distinctive, the Appellate Court held there was no infringement of the title;

(c) The third reason for reversing the lower court given by the Appellate Court was that the song itself, "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," was in the public domain in Canada because of failure to comply with the Canadian Copyright Acts in effect at the time the song was written. This decision threw into the public domain in Canada all works that were published in England prior to January 1, 1924; thus hundreds of thousands of English works are unprotected in Canada if this decision stands.

2. Twentieth Century-Fox has sued in Holland a Dutch motion picture producer for making a motion picture based on the novel "Daddy Long Legs," the motion picture rights to which are owned by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Holland, in the Sax Rohmer case, has held that simultaneous publication in Canada with publication in the United States is not publication within the meaning of that word in the Berne Convention and refused to protect Rohmer's story "The Daughter of Fu Manchu." The story was published in Collier's Weekly and had simultaneous publication in Canada. The Dutch Courts have given a similar ruling in the case involving "Gone With the Wind" and "The Yearling." However, Twentieth Century-Fox is not proceeding in its action on the theory that the work is protected in Holland because it had simultaneous publication in Berne Convention countries, but it is proceeding on the theory that the work, "Daddy Long Legs," is protected in Holland under reciprocal copyright relations existing between Holland and the United States. Holland has certified to the Secretary of State of the United States that the works of American authors are protected in Holland the same as works of citizens of Holland. Relying upon this certification, the President of the United States issued a Proclamation under the United States Copyright Act that the works of citizens of Holland are protected in the United States in the same way as the works of American citizens. This being so, the novel, "Daddy Long Legs," has protection in Holland as though it were writtten by a citizen of Holland.

3. Conference with representatives of the French Government and the French Authors Society on changes to be made in the proposed French Copyright Law which is now pending in the French Parliament, and will come up for a vote in the House of Deputies soon.

U. S. Copyright Changes to Congress But No Action Is Likely This Session

Suggestions and recommendations for changes in the existing U. S. copyright law of 1909 were submitted to Congress last week by Edith Ware, representing the Shotwell Committee, which has been working in New York with film representatives and others. Action on the proposals is not likely before the next session of Congress, however, the current session being scheduled to adjourn August 1st.

The Shotwell Committee is a sub-committee of the Committee for the Study of Copyright of the Committee for International Intellectual Cooperation of the League of Nations; and has been working with legal representatives of films, radio, publishing and other fields in an effort to establish a common basis for recommending changes in the 1909 law, which, it is felt, is outdated. In Washington, the State Department or Senator Bone of the state of Washington, or both, will sponsor the draft.

Among the principal proposals on which most of the industries concerned are in agreement are the minimum damage, divisibility and copyright on creation provisions.

Minimum damages for copyright violation would be reduced from $250 to $150, and the liability of radio networks for violations would be limited to $2,500. At present a network of 100 stations might be liable for $250,000 for a single violation, for example.

The divisibility provisions recognize a separate right for each of the various commercial uses to which an author's creation may be put, such as the screen right, the dramatic right, television, book, magazine and, in the case of music, performing, recording and other rights.

The right to each may be sold separately and actions may be brought on behalf of any one of the rights without joining possessors of any of the other rights.

The provision for copyright on creation recognizes an author's or composer's work as personal property for which copyright protection is automatic. It requires no registration nor filing of two copies of a work, as is now the case. The provision is a requisite of the Berne Convention.

The new provisions would extend the life of a copyright from the present 28-year period to one which would include the lifetime of the author and for 50 years after his death.

Pickford Has New Plans; Capra May Produce for UA

United Artists' 1939-40 program, already extended by expanded plans of several of its affiliated producers, as previously noted, will probably be further increased, with Mary Pickford, co-partner, becoming an active producer, and with the reported association of Frank Capra.

Miss Pickford returned Monday, with Buddy Rogers, her husband, from a 10,000-mile vacation flight through Europe, Scandinavia and the Soviet, announcing the formation, as she disembarked, in New York of a new producing organization, "The Pickford Company."

Capra Leaves Columbia

Mr. Capra, on Monday, ended a 13-year association with Columbia Pictures, announcing, in Hollywood, the formation of Frank Capra Productions, in association with Robert Riskin, who had been working with Samuel Goldwyn.

James Roosevelt, Samuel Goldwyn vice-president, resigned as a member of the United Artists board of directors at its meeting Tuesday in New York, in order "to spend more time in production." His place on the board will be taken by James Mulvey, Goldwyn eastern representative.

Murray Silverstone, operating head of the company, announced at the meeting that an agreement had been reached by Harry Gold, United Artists vice-president and eastern sales manager, and Clayton Bond and Edward Hinchy, executive film buyers for Warner theatres, whereby the entire program of United Artists films for the next two years will be exhibited on the Warner circuit.

At the meeting, in addition to Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Silverstone, were Mary Pickford, Charles Swartz, representing Charles Chaplin, Dennis O'Brien, representing Douglas Fairbanks and Emanuel Silverstone, representing Alexander Korda.

On Tuesday, also, Mr. Roosevelt officially announced the appointment of Fred Storm, Washington United Press correspondent, as new head of publicity for Samuel Goldwyn productions. Jock Lawrence, former publicity head, will become general assistant to Mr. Goldwyn.

Pickford to Make "The Bat"

Miss Pickford's first film for United Artists will probably be "The Bat," former stage play, which she owns, she revealed upon her arrival from Europe. After script preparations at the coast, the film would be produced at the Denham Studio in England, in collaboration with Alexander Korda's production staff. Miss Pickford plans to leave New York for the coast at the end of the month to look over talent for the forthcoming production, on which shooting is tentatively scheduled for the spring of 1940.

Another one of Miss Pickford's story properties, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," in which she appeared for United Artists in 1924, she said would not be scheduled for her first venture inasmuch as it would necessarily be a costly production. If made, she said it would be in color.

On Tuesday, in Hollywood, Frank Capra and Robert Riskin formed Frank Capra Productions as an independent enterprise. Mr. Capra thus ended a 13-year association with Columbia Pictures, during which time he directed such films as "It Happened One Night," "Lost Horizons," "You Can't Take It with You" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," on all of which Mr. Riskin had been associated with him as writer.

Mr. Riskin recently resigned from Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., where he served as associate producer on the Jasha Heifetz film, "They Shall Have Music." Both Mr. Capra and Mr. Riskin will take a vacation before starting the new partnership. It has been reported that the new producing firm may release through United Artists.

However Columbia on Wednesday was reported to be dickering with them.

MANPOWER AND BRAINS CALLED FILM NEEDS

The British film industry's greatest needs today are manpower and brains, and provision for equitable sales arrangements, according to Captain Richard Norton who emphasized these points in a paper read at the summer convention of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at Blackpool.

Captain Norton said the strength of American producers often rested in writers, rather than stars; that it is virtually impossible to find a fair formula for the sale of British independent product; and asked distributors to give producers "a break." He suggested discussions looking toward a better liaison between producers and exhibitors.

May Show "Birth" Clinically in N. Y.

Partial victory for the sponsors of "Birth of a Baby," bitterly debated "sex" film, was won in the New York State Appellate Division on Tuesday, in Albany, when that body upheld the state Board of Regents' ban on the film, but held that it could be shown, under special permit, "for clinical purposes." The close vote, three to two, and a vigorous dissenting opinion, presaged carrying of the case to the Court of Appeals.

The film has been bitterly attacked, and as warmly defended. When banned in New York State, and in many others, it brought into the public forum again the whole question of censorship and public decency. Salient point raised by its critics was this: that it told facts which every normal adult knew; therefore, it was unnecessary.

The Appellate Division majority opinion, in part, reads:

"A picture depicting the actual birth of a child becomes indecent when presented to patrons of places of public entertainment" and further states that exhibition of the picture "would serve no useful purpose, although it may appeal to the morbid and curious."

In part, the minority opinion reads:

"The authors and actors treated the theme in a clean, dignified and reverent manner. To limit the exhibition to educational and clinical groups will defeat the worthy purpose."

Goldwyn Film Exploitation

A new exploitation plan for Samuel Goldwyn's "They Shall Have Music" is being tried by United Artists with the distribution of 20,000 copies of a biographical study of Jascha Heifetz, with reference to his first motion picture, which has been prepared by Deems Taylor, music critic.

CBS Joins NBC In Broadcasting of Film News Abroad

The Columbia Broadcasting System begins on Monday, and the National Broadcasting Company has already started broadcasts of film material to foreign countries, in six languages, English, Spanish, French, German, and Italian. The broadcasts are the result of an agreement reached between the networks and the major companies, to send fan and trade material, via the air, to countries in which product mentioned will soon play. The advertising and publicity directors of the major companies and their foreign publicity directors, have cooperated in furnishing of material to the broadcasters. The material is sent by each company's foreign department to the Hays office, where it is whipped into shape, and sent to the networks. The CBS material is used practically as given to it by the Hays office; the NBC has been incorporating film information in its regular broadcasts to foreign countries. Translation of the material or scripts into the individual languages, is done by network translators.

Educational Film Institute At New York University

The Educational Film Institute has been formed at New York University for the purpose of producing, distributing and evaluating motion pictures in the field of education. The Institute will be enabled to carry on its first year's activities largely through an initial grant for $75,000 from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, according to Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of the University.

Spencer D. Pollard, of the department of economics of Harvard University has been appointed executive director of the Institute, which will have its headquarters at the University's Washington Square Center in New York City. The board of directors is composed of members of the University faculty; Professor Philip O. Badger, assistant to the chancellor; Professor Darrell B. Lucas of the department of marketing, and Professor Herbert B. Dorau, of the department of economics, chairman.

Film on Royal Visit

"Royal Banners over Ottawa," color film of the two-day visit of the King and Queen to the Canadian capital, is being released in the Province by Associated Screen News. Gordon Sparling, who directed, took the film to London for processing and previewing by the Canadian High Commissioner.

Deanna Durbin's new contract with Universal has been approved by Judge Wilson in Hollywood. It is the first contract to be consummated under the so-called Jackie Coogan law drafted as legal safeguard for the earnings of minors in films. The contract calls for three pictures annually for five years.

RADIO TAKES A CODE; "FILMS, RADIO, PRESS THREE GREAT MIRRORS": HAYS

Principles for Self-Regulation Adopted at Broadcasters' Convention; Policy Established for Public Issues

"Recognizing the importance of radio broadcasting in the national life, and believing that broadcasters have sufficient experience with the social side of the industry to formulate basic standards for the guidance of all," the National Association of Broadcasters, at its 17th annual convention, in the Hotel Ambassador in Atlantic City, on Tuesday, adopted a code of ethics and standards for the radio industry, just four weeks after the formulation of a code to govern practices in the motion picture business.

There is a difference in the direct aims of the two codes, however, in that the motion picture's is intended basically to govern inner trade relations, whereas the code for radio is intended to govern not only trade practices, but also radio's relations with the public through the material it broadcasts. It will be remembered that the broadcasters, after talking about a code for years, started to act more expeditiously codewise after press, public and pulpit stormed its doors with protests over the Mae West "cum up 'n' see me sometime" Chase and Sanborn Sunday evening burlesque broadcast on Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. Another motivating factor has been the Federal Communications Commissions' investigations into radio chain broadcasting and "monopolies" allegedly existing therein.

Governs Program Material

Radio's new code touches on children's programs, controversial public issues, educational broadcasting, news and religious broadcasts, commercial programs and length of commercial copy. The incoming board of directors was authorized by the convention to devise the machinery necessary to insure compliance of members with the code and to determine date of taking effect.

In detail, the code provides procedure for each category.

For children's programs, it is provided that they have the "closest supervision" in selection and control of material, characterization, and plot.

"This does not mean," the code says, "that the vigor and vitality common to a child's imagination and love of adventure should be removed." It means merely, the code explains, that the programs should be based on "sound concepts," presented with superior craftsmanship, and should reflect respect for parents, adult authority, law and order, clean living, high morals, fair play, and honorable behavior.

Children's programs, the code states, should not contain sequences with horror, or use of torture, or the supernatural, or superstitious. Any material liable to prejudice the character development of a child, or over-stimulate, must be shunned.

On this category, the code concludes with the declaration that "to establish acceptable and improving standards for children's programs, the NAB will continuously engage in studies and consultations with parent and child study groups. The results of these studies will be made available for application to all children's programs."

The next category, that of "controversial issues," is detailed and was of peculiar interest to the delegates, because of the furor which the broadcasts of Father Coughlin have created.

Time Due to Controversy

Stations should provide time for controversial topics, the code says; it is part of their "public service."

"Such time shall be allotted with due regard to all the other elements of balanced program schedules and to the degree of public interest in the questions to be discussed. Broadcasters shall use their best efforts to allot such time with fairness to all elements in a given controversy," the code stipulates.

The code then says that time for controversial issues shall not be sold, except for political broadcasts. It gives three reasons for this free service:

1. Public duty of broadcasters.
2. If time were sold, it would have to be sold to all with the ability to buy at any given time. Balance, listener interest, and proportion would then be surrendered.
3. If time were sold, those with most money would hold most advantage.

The code's provisions, anent controversy, conclude with this statement:

"Nothing in the prohibition against selling time for the presentation of controversial public issues shall be interpreted as barring sponsorship of the public forum type of program, when such a program is regularly presented as a series of fair sided discussions of public issues, and when control of the fairness of the program rests wholly with the broadcasting station or network."

Education Part of Policy

The next category is educational broadcasting, and on this the code states that broadcasters desire to help "more specific" educational efforts, and that they will continue to help educational groups.

The code then deals with news broadcasting. It stipulates that such shall be presented with "fairness and accuracy"; that news broadcasts shall not be editorial; that the fundamental purpose in news broadcasting is to enable people to "know what is happening and to understand the meaning of events."

"And therefore," the code says, "nothing in the foregoing shall be understood as preventing news broadcasters from analyzing and elucidating news so long as such analysis and elucidation are free of bias."

"Religious broadcasts" is the next code topic. On these, the code says the radio should not be used to convey attacks upon another's race and religion; that, instead, "it should be the purpose of the religious broadcast to promote the spiritual harmony and understanding of mankind. . . ."

The code deals with commercial programs and the length of commercial copy. It says that sponsors of programs shall be accepted only if they and their product are reliable by standards of good taste and fair trade practices.

It recommends that commercial copy be handled briefly; that member stations should hold the length of commercial copy, including that devoted to contests and offers, to the following for daytime:

Fifteen programs—three minutes and 15 seconds; 30 minute programs—four minutes and 30 seconds; 60 minute programs—nine minutes.

For nighttime:

Fifteen minute programs—two minutes and 30 seconds; 30 minute programs—three minutes; 60 minute programs—six minutes.

Varying economic and social conditions in local territories make it possible for member stations to present their cases to the NAB for rulings in exception to the above recommendations.

The incoming board of directors of the NAB was authorized to devise machinery to insure compliance of members with the code, and to determine the date upon which it is to take effect.

The code was approved by vote of 148 to 24. However, some of the delegates of the 422 member stations walked out of the code vote meeting, in protest against some of its regulations.

Hays and Milliken Speakers

Tribute to radio's "importance in the national life" was given by the motion picture's Will H. Hays, who in a message piped from his hotel room in Hollywood into the Ambassador's convention hall, over NBC and CBS, called the screen, radio and the press "the three great media of public thought and opinion," the "three mirrors" of the people.

Mr. Hays asked his audience to consider the motion picture industry, in relation to the welfare of this country.

"Unlike most of the arts, it was not reared in patrician surroundings," he said. "It has no vested rights. It must conform to public demands, public taste, and the public's sense of decency and goodness in entertainment. It is a true child of democracy. Today, in full vigor, it recognizes its privileges and opportunities, and realizes and acknowledges its responsibilities."

Mr. Hays noted that the screen liberties are a corollary of its willingness to serve the public's interests.

"The underlying philosophy of self regulation in the motion picture industry," he said, "always has been, and is, based on developing the greatest measure of liberty for the public to choose its entertainment from the variety of themes posed by life or created by literature. Freedom of the screen means opportunity to attend a theatre with the knowl-

RADIO, LIKE FILMS, GOES TO CLASSROOMS

In an experiment conducted in 10 New York City junior high schools, Board of Education officials found that classroom radio broadcasts are more efficient than the ordinary teacher instruction.

After three years of preparation major motion picture producer-distributors formally entered the business of supplying films to schools last week with the announcement that 600 regular theatrical subjects which have already played theatres are available for educational purposes.

In the radio experiment 4,000 pupils participated. When examinations were given at the end of the school term it was found that the pupils who had heard the broadcasts were superior to those who did not get the radio lessons, according to the annual report of Dr. I. H. Goldberger, assistant director of health education. The broadcasts were on health lessons.

edge that the entertainment will not negative the influence of the school, the church and the home; the certainty that pictures bearing the seal of self regulation will not violate the canons of common decency; the freedom from any but the creative artists' best efforts, that banality shall not masquerade as art or entertainment. . . . This is the liberty which self regulation has brought to the screen and this is the right we propose to protect."

Mr. Hays then went on to note that the three media of public thought, the screen, the radio, and the press, were joined at the NAB speakers' list, and said:

"The very fact of their common purpose as here expressed, demonstrates the principle of their existence: that liberty is not immunity, but that it is responsibility and accountability, that liberty not alone commands respect; it also demands self-respect."

Praises Radio Function

Mr. Hays then declared that the motion picture industry paid, on the occasion of the convention, "its respect" to radio, "the miracle of yesterday, the delightful companion, the discriminating informant, and the charming entertainer of today."

He declared: "This mighty force in America has been employed magnificently for good. Under the leadership which has developed it during the amazingly short time of its existence, the radio has shown determination and its distinguished ability to progressively make itself an agency of good-will, of enlightment, and of general public welfare."

Mr. Hays spoke over the NBC and CBS networks on 11:45 P.M. Wednesday.

Among other speakers were Neville Miller, president of the NAB; Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the MPPDA, and Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt.

Mr. Milliken spoke before consideration of the code, by the convention. He noted similarities between radio and motion pictures: both cater to the masses, both have to consider suitable fare for children, both were faced by foreign problems; both, he asserted, needed self regulation.

He then noted the differences between the two industries: radio is free, and pictures are not; radio, mainly, has simultaneous distribution, but pictures are shown at varying intervals; they have different distribution methods; audiences find radio more convenient; picture audiences resent advertising; radio does not have to spend large exploitation money.

Mr. Milliken outlined the MPPDA work.

Mr. Early reassured broadcasters who feared governmental intervention; such intervention, he said, meant the "end of democracy."

"The myth of censorship and the fallacy that broadcasters goose-step to official pressure seem to a sideline observer to be the twin bogeymen of radio," he commented. "In my opinion, freedom from official censorship, freedom from domination by any administration or political party rests with the radio itself.

"So long as its operations reflect the doctrine of 'fair play,' as expressed by the statutes governing political broadcasts, so long as programs are interesting, informative, and clean—in brief, so long as radio serves democracy, it will remain free," Mr. Early said.

Mr. Early told broadcasters they did not need to fear the "clutching hand" of Government and that he was entirely unaware of "any Marxist plot" to take over the radio business.

Anent international broadcasts from the United States, he declared that the Government was watching them "with interest" to see that there was no "false news" on them; that the effect in foreign countries was so deleterious that such broadcasts should be carefully noted.

The FCC, commonly regarded as an instrument of administrative "coercion" should not be regarded as "an ogre," Mr. Early said; no station owners should object to periodic scrutiny by the FCC, he said.

Mr. Miller's report to the NAB covered the field for the past year, and stressed the high average wage for radio industry—$45.20, highest of any American industry, it was said.

The report of the NAB treasurer showed 419 active NAB stations, and 250 affiliates.

The convention opened Monday morning at the Ambassador, with about 500 registrations. The clear channel, regional and newspaper owner groups met that morning. There was then a luncheon tendered by the Bureau of Radio Advertising and Sales Managers Division, followed in the afternoon by the meeting of the IRNA, and at night by the meeting of the Copyright Committee. Mr. Miller's report was given on Tuesday, and was followed by discussion of the code. Mr. Milliken, Mr. Early and others spoke on Tuesday; Mr. Hays on Wednesday. Additional speakers were Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the Wages and Hours Law of the Department of Labor; and John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education.

The code as adopted is quite different from the code as originally conceived. It is general in terms; and its only really specific provisions appear to be those governing length of time of commercial "plugs." The children's section, particularly; and the religious section, are unspecific, in comparison with what might have been written.

Radio "Censorship" Hearings by FCC

A lengthy debate over the propriety of the Federal Communications Commission "censorship" order on international stations at the hearing which the commission has called for Friday in Washington is foreseen in the list of appearances so far filed and announced by the commission.

The hearing is of interest to the motion picture industry in view of the recently inaugurated short wave broadcasts of film news by the studios in a cooperative arrangement.

Time for argument has been requested by the National Association of Broadcasters, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Columbia Broadcasting System, Crosley Corporation, General Electric Corporation, Isle of Dreams Broadcasting Corporation, National Broadcasting Company, WCAU, Philadelphia; the National Committee on Education by Radio and World Wide Broadcasting Corporation.

STARS PATRONIZE FINGERPRINT BUREAU

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced in Washington Wedneseday that motion picture and radio stars are filing their fingerprints with the Bureau for identification in the event of catastrophe." Among those who could thus be recognized in the event of a California cloudburst, for example, are Eddie Cantor, James Cagney, Freddie Bartholomew, Shirley Temple, Ginger Rogers, Virginia Bruce, Walt Disney, et al. The records, of which more than 1,300,000 have been received in the past six years, are placed in a special file, entirely separate from the criminal records.

Such additional cards are coming into the Bureau at the rate of 2,500 a day, it is said.

Canada Moves on Government Control

Government control of broadcasting throughout the Dominion of Canada has been further cemented by the decision of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, acting on the recommendations of the Radio Committe of the House of Commons, to take over direction and control of all privately owned stations in September, the latter to be organized into chains subsidiary to the CBC network.

A reduction in the program contracts with commercial sponsors of the United States and Canada will be the immediate result of the comprehensive policy of CBC, which has announced that it will replace a large proportion of independent advertising time with government chain broadcasts for which CBC will assume liability, a basic rate to be charged by the company for this service.

There will be a loss of advertising revenue for the independent stations, it is admitted, but there will be compensation, it is promised, in program improvements which will add to the prestige of privately owned stations.

The new regulations will affect upwards of 30 stations across the Dominion which have been operated on an independent basis and these have already received notification of the CBC move. Already 26 private broadcasters are linked with the regular CBC chain programs, these studios being located in areas which are not considered to be directly served by the CBC network.

A joint committee composed of representatives of CBC and private stations will consider any disputes, it is announced, and prior to the establishment of the new system, Horace Stovan, supervisor of CBC, will interview all independent station owners to explain details and discuss local problems. In the meantime, private stations will not be permitted to negotiate with commercial sponsors for lengthy advertising contracts.

"Mr. Chips" Holdovers

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" has been held over in every one of its 16 pre-release key city openings to date, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer said this week. Latest holdovers are in Oklahoma City and Philadelphia. The film ran four weeks in Cleveland and Boston. Indefinite runs are now underway in Chicago, San Francisco and Seattle, and holdevers were recorded in Dayton, Cincinnati, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Toledo, Indianapolis and New Orleans. At the Astor, New York, and Four Star, Los Angeles, "Mr. Chips" is in its ninth week.

Mentone Productions, Inc. (Milton E. Schwartzwald), which formerly produced short subjects for Universal, has filed a certificate of dissolution with the New York secretary of state in Albany.

One of the Most Remarkable Reviews Ever Written About a Motion Picture Is This One in the Bulletin of THE INTER-NATIONAL FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC ALUMNAE, Broadcast Over 27 Important Stations and Circulated to Catholic Churches and Organizations Everywhere!

"FOUR FEATHERS" is the outstanding film on this week's endorsed list. A spectacle replete with thrills, something that will make you re-live emotionally all the adventure that takes place on the screen. It will have you gasping over its excitement, flinching during its horrific moments, breathlessly awaiting its unfolding and spellbound by its eyefilling pageantry. The Technicolor in this film is something that must be commented upon...fascinatingly beautiful. One is almost dazzled by the visual allure of the piece and if the story were less engrossing it might prove the most outstanding angle.

However, "FOUR FEATHERS" also boasts a grand story...so full of stirring scenes that it would be impossible to recall them all for you. For sheer spectacle, the charge of the Dervishes and Fuzzy Wuzzies on the British camp is outstanding. The hordes of men, the countless number of animals involved are things to take your breath away. Then there are scenes of battle at the fort, that terrible prison and torture chamber of the cruel native tribes. Other interesting bits show the method used to haul the Army boats up the Nile. All these interludes are surrounded by dazzling color and show. Almost every moment of this picture is filled with something that is bound to tear your emotions apart. We have endorsed "FOUR FEATHERS" for a family audience. Make it the reason for a family expedition to the theatre. You will be intrigued by a glorious two hours of adventure.

NEW PROJECT PROMISES SPOT NEWS FOR SCREEN

Flashes Received by Wire and Projected by Special Device To Serve Theatre Audiences

Spot-news on international happenings wired into theatres several times daily for immediate presentation on the screen is promised to exhibitors by September 1st by Theatre Communications, Inc., a new company, which formally started this week with the opening of headquarters at Two Park Avenue, New York.

Trans Radio Press, now furnishing most of the spot-news to radio broadcasters, will supply the news flashes, specially pre-edited for the screen, under a long term contract, through central distribution points in the field, according to Paul J. Davis, who has been in the magazine and newspaper business and variously engaged otherwise, and who is head of Theatre Communications.

Will Bring Spot Coverage

The motion picture's newsreel has on occasion competed with the printed page in reporting events of more than ordinary interest, but the broadcasting of news highlights frequently during the day has put radio far ahead of both on spot coverage. Mr. Davis claims that now the screen can flash the news virtually at the same instant as radio, presuming that it is of sufficient importance to break into a film then showing for the flash—which would come from another projector. "Theatres should be brought abreast of the times, newswise," he believes.

Cooperative arrangements would be made with local newspapers, in order not to antagonize the press, explained Mr. Davis, who claims that publishers are "of the opinion that this service will act as a supplement and stimulant to the reading of newspapers." Each news bulletin will conclude with the suggestion: "For further details consult your local newspaper"—a practice employed on radio news broadcasts.

Bulletins To Be Sponsored

News bulletins will be confined to one or one and one-half minutes. Spot news may be delivered to the theatre as often as four times during the afternoon and evening performances. The news may be sponsored in the following ways: by local advertisers, by national advertisers, by combined sponsorship of advertisers and local newspapers, or the exhibitor, himself, may pay the service charge, or, he may have the service without charge in exchange for giving screen rights during the news flashing to Theatre Communications, which would result in Communications selling time to some advertiser. In any event, there will be no mechanical costs, to the exhibitor, either for the special projector or teletypewriter that is installed, nor will there be a charge to him for installation, according to Mr. Davis.

It is felt by the sponsor that the nine midwestern states represent the most practical field for immediate developments, both because of geographical advantages for efficient distribution to the individual theatres, and also because these states, with over 34,000,000 of the country's 135,000,000, are the center of population. Tests are about to be conducted in Michigan.

The plan of distribution calls for primary points, to which Trans Radio Press will "lay down" spot-news. These primary points will immediately flash the news over the Bell System's short-line circuits of private teletypewriters into the theatres. Where no Bell teletypewriter short-line circuits are available, Western Union or Postal Telegraph will be used.

Mr. Davis explains his Theatre Communications has developed a film, like a cellophane, to be manufactured by DuPont Corporation in Wilmington. Rolls of this cellophane will emerge from the teletypewriter in the theatre, with the news punched thereon in stencil form. Inserted then into the special projector, they will appear on the screen with the type lines creeping upwards, in the same manner as some silent-film titles "creep" to explain long lapses of action or story background. Illumination with which the blocked-out newsflashes will be thrown onto the screen will come from the special projector through which the cellophane base film will move, according to Mr. Davis, who said that his company has been in consultation with engineers at the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and DuPont for some 12 months, adding that Kliegl Brothers, manufacturers of Kleig lights and other lighting equipment, will manufacture the projector.

Facsimile Provision Made

The projector, he continued, will be portable, permitting movements to and from existing projection openings in the theatre's projector booths, and, therefore, no new cuts will be necessary in the booth. No additional projection help will be required. Regular staff employes can handle news reception.

Mr. Davis says that the special projector will be devised with facsimile in mind, enabling theatres, eventually, to pick up facsimile news and features. Possibilities of facsimile as a medium for aiding in the dissemination of film and theatre news and exploitation were discussed in Motion Picture Herald on April 13th, on page 25. Facsimiles are already being broadcast out regularly from New York, Columbus, Buffalo, Cleveland, St. Louis, Chicago, Sacramento, Fresno and elsewhere.

"MIKADO" GETS "ENCORE" TRYOUT

The first showing of a musical film at which the audience's applause became the signal for an encore of the music footage applauded was held Wednesday by Universal and RKO for Universal's "Mikado" at RKO's Palace in New York.

Seen by both Lou Pollack of Universal and John O'Connor of RKO as purely an experiment, the showing on Wednesday was held a day before the film went in for the regular RKO circuit run.

Visualized as a possibility for all musical films, the idea utilizes a third projector, on which is an alternate reel corresponding to the reel being shown. The alternate reel is set for a likely encore number, and the projectionist cuts over to it at its place in the normal continuity of the showing. For the encore, a cut back is made to the first reel, which has been set for a repeat of the applauded number. From there, the showing progresses normally until the next number applauded.

Republic Chiefs To Confer on Product Change

Republic is reconstructing its 1930-40 feature and serial lineup as originally announced by Herbert J. Yates at the company's convention in April. Product talks start next week in New York with the arrival of Moe Siegal, managing director of Republic Productions, and Sol Siegal, feature production head. James Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, returned to New York Monday from Baltimore.

Productions will be outlined in full before Mr. Yates leaves for England with Gene Autry on Saturday. The company's bookings on new season product indicate an appreciable gain over 1938-39, it has been reported, with the number of domestic and foreign contracts both seen as in for a rise. While in England with Gene Autry, Mr. Yates will confer with Sam Smith, the head of British Lion, Republic's English affiliate.

Now in the de luxe group of the company's product are "Hit Parade of 1940," "Lady from New Orleans," "Seven Million Dollars" and "The Dark Command." Group originally embraced, in addition to the two latter, "Two Orphans" and "Wagons Westward."

Last named title is now among the six anniversary specials, which group previously included "Lady from New Orleans." Dropped from the anniversary specials are "Gangs of Chicago" and "Guilty of Treason"; replacements include "National Barn Dance" and "Doctors Don't Tell."

Dropped from the 16 Jubilee Productions, announced at the Houston convention in April, are "Escape from Sing Sing," "Call of the North," "The Champ Maker," "Bengal Border Patrol," "Tom Sawyer Abroad," "Bowery Boy," "A Sporting Chance," "Man of the Hour," "The Fighting Irish" and "A Day at the World's Fair," two latter in the Higgins Family series. Title changes are two: "Calling All Marines" for "Here Come the Marines" and "Money to Burn" for "We're in the Money."

Substitute Jubilees embrace "Flight at Midnight," with Roscoe Turner; "Jeepers Creepers," and "In Old Missouri," both with Weaver Bros. and Elviry; "Probate Nurse," "Headline News," "Abraham Lincoln Boggs," "Guilty of Treason," by Peter B. Kyne and "Gangs of Chicago," plus "The Covered Trailer" and "Should Wives Work," two latter in the Higgins series. "Forgotten Girls" will have a story by Vicki Baum instead of Earl Fenton as first announced.

"Old Faithful" is out as a title for a Gene Autry musical Western; replacing is "Grand Old Op'ry." "Death Valley Days" as a title for a Roy Rogers vehicle gives way to "The Saga of Death Valley." There are two substitutions in the Three Mesquiteers series: "Heroes of the Saddle" for "Sons of the Saddle" and "The Kansas Terrors" for "Cowboys from Texas."

In the serial lineup, "The Adventures of the Red Ryder" replaces "Jimmy Valentine Strikes Again."

Bergman Back in New York

Maurice Bergman, advertising and publicity director for Columbia, returned to New York this week from the coast where he viewed new product at the studio, including "Golden Boy" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," both of which are nearing completion.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

HARRY McCORMICK, our long, lean, rawbone correspondent down Texas way, in Dallas, has written a story, for possible motion picture use, about the "inside" human interest inside the prison walls of the Texas state penitentiary. He got the yarn at first hand while serving, reportorially, for the Houston Press. It makes pretty good reading, too.

There's the incident, for one, involving Raymond Hamilton and his pal Clyde Barrow, notorious badmen of the southwest. Barrow, on the loose, smuggled guns into the prison, met Hamilton right on the prison grounds, each sharing a machine gun and a nice assortment of pistols. The two laid down a barrage on the mounted prison guards, killing one, with Hamilton escaping in the melee, making good his previous braggings to the underworld that he would escape, that his pal Barrow would liberate him.

Shortly thereafter Barrow was killed, together with his gun moll, Bonnie Parker, in a copper ambuscade. Hamilton was captured, tried five times for bank robberies and other depredations, and finally was tried for the murder of the prison guard, getting the death penalty.

Harry McCormick was assigned to cover the trial, during which he got to know Hamilton, who one day whispered to Harry that he would escape from the death house and go to McCormick himself to give him "a good interview." Harry chuckled, mentioned that the death house was impregnable.

But, one Sunday, while a prison ball game was in progress, some toughies inside got hold of some pistols, yanked a guard and went on out of the death house. Whitey Walker was killed on the spot, Charlie Frazier of his mob had one lung shot away, but Hamilton laid a ladder against the prison walls and mounted the top among a hail of bullets from pursuing guards, escaping.

McCormick, still reporting for the Houston Press, was warned by his managing editor not to try to get the promised interview, fearing that a posse might flush Hamilton at a time he was with McCormick, and kill both.

One night McCormick was approached by some men and was told to drive his own car with them as passengers. McCormick, unsuspecting, was told they were going on a "secret" mission, riding blindly to a dark spot, where stood Hamilton on the country road. McCormick got his interview all right, and to prove its authenticity, Hamilton wiped the windshield of Harry's car and on the glass imprinted his own fingerprints—"signing" the interview.

Hamilton was later caught and executed, Harry attending the electrocution, at which Hamilton gave him a memento to take back home to the dead desperado's mother.

That Buck Rogers character on radio station WOR, Newark, makes believe that he uses fantastic 25th Century devices as he hurtles through space from planet to planet and elsewhere. Take, for example, the machine he "used" to teach his girl friend and himself the language of the planets. After putting subjects into a deep sleep, the machine supposedly hypnotically injected the language to be learned into them. And, in all seriousness, Station WOR, in a press release, says that hundreds of high school students studying Latin and Greek wrote in for further particulars.

FROM AREQUIPA TO XICHIMILCO

It took the motion picture business and its committee of high-powered educators just three years to get the industry going on its ambitious plan to place the film business in the business of supplying pictures to the nation's classrooms. Actually accomplished two weeks ago, teachers and students who have since received copies of the big, fat catalogue listing all the films to be made available by the majors, are lifting eyebrows at the index of topics on hand—450 of them, running clear from Addis Ababa to Wind, Wine and Wisby.

The majors have catalogued films on Aeronautics and Alaska, Anaesthesia, Annie Laurie and Arequipa; on Bali Bali, Baseball, Beavers and Betsy Ross; Brass, Brazil, Bridges and Brittany; on Captain Kidd, Cattle, Cherry Blossoms, plus Crew, Crime and Crimea; on Diabetes and Disney, plus Dynamite; on Fish and Father Flanagan, Foochow and Football, Germs and Germany, Hollywood, Holland, Hong Kong and Horses; and Insects; on Leprosy and Lincoln, Mussolini and Napoleon; on Peanut Industry and Pleasant Life; Red Cross, Red Tape, Romeo and Juliet and the Roosevelts, and on Sardines and Smallpox, and Storms, Superstitutions, Tahiti and Taj Mahal, Tombstones and Toys and United States, Vaccines, Vocations and Volcanoes, Vultures, Wind and White House.

Alexander Korda's "Four Feathers" got quite a reaction in London, where it was made. There was the case, for instance, of a little man, a little Milquetoast, who, according to the London Era, while witnessing one of the battle scenes where Fuzzy Wuzzies and redcoats merged in unholy slaughter and all hell was let loose, murmured, "That reminds me, I forgot to mail that letter the wife gave me."

THERE have been quite a few psychological pictures coming along of late, but probably the most psychological of the psychological comes from Mr. J. H. Hoffberg, who is marketing in the U. S. the German film of "The Living Dead—a Ghastly Tale," taken from Edgar Allan Poe's "Black Cat" and some of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Suicide Club" thrown in for good measure. Chortles M. Hoffberg:

"The story deals with an erratic inventor who slays his wife and entombs her in the wall of the cellar of his house. The body is discovered by the shrieks of a black cat, his wife's pet, who had been accidentally entombed with her. The shock completely unhinges the mind of the inventor, who flees into a neighboring wax museum. The macabre surroundings are distorted in his mind, as the wax figures come to life. Pursued by a reporter who is seeking a sensational story, he finally flees to a neighboring first-aid station. There, the doctor commits him to an asylum, not knowing that the man is wanted for murder. The reporter, continuing the search for the killer, trails him to the asylum and finds that it has been seized by the inmates, and that the doctors and attendants have been thrown into the cells. Again the killer succeeds in eluding the reporter with the aid of the inmates. The banquet scene of the inmates in the asylum is undoubtedly one of the most fantastic ever portrayed.

"In the final episodes the mad inventor heads a suicide club which he has created, and where those who wish to cease living gather to play with fate."

One way in which motion pictures and aviation worked hand in hand for years has been hardly mentioned, if at all, according to Edward Sutherland, now preparing to direct RKO's "Flying Deuces" in Hollywood. Eddie, himself an old war-time Royal Flying Corps flyer, has followed the experiments with interest.

Seems that in everything from a small single-motored four-place family cabin plane to big winged liners of ocean service, the effects of Hollywood studio engineers' inventive accomplishments can be seen today in the blending and fabrication of those elements in plane cabin construction which eliminate unnecessary sound.

Airplane manufacturers a decade ago were pretty well agreed on many points in construction, but one thing, according to Sutherland, bothered them all, and bothered most—and that was vibration and noise. Talking pictures had just "licked" most of the "bugs" in the early sound stages, and the effects of every little vibration had been studied until studios had whole libraries of reports on the subject. It was to motion picture studios and their libraries that the air manufacturers turned, and from the studies of the film sound engineers they obtained most of the solutions to vibration and attendant noises in transport cabins that would have taken much of the passenger traffic they have since acquired.

DE-CODING THE CODE SERIES ENDS, ANALYSIS OF ARBITRATION STARTS

Nizer Concludes Study of the Conditions of the Agreement and Commences Analysis of Arbitration Clause

by LOUIS NIZER

Clause XV—Agreement to Arbitrate

Every one who signs the Code, agrees to arbitrate with anyone else who signs the Code, any dispute which is subject to arbitration under this Code or the Rules of Arbitration which are annexed.

Rules of Arbitration. The rules of arbitration annexed to the Code shall be followed in such arbitration procedure.

Making an Award Enforceable. The parties agree to sign all necessary papers in order that the award of the arbitrators may, so far as the law permits, have the status of or become a judgment enforceable in the Courts.

Signing Different Arbitration Agreement. If the law in any territory provides for a different form of arbitration agreement, the parties will sign an agreement as required by such law and file it with the Permanent Arbitration Board established under the Rules of Arbitration.

Obeying Awards. If arbitration awards cannot be enforced in certain territories, the parties agree nevertheless to live up to, in good faith, any award that is made under the Rules of Arbitration.

Affiliated Theatres. Distributors who control theatre circuits pledge the full cooperation of the theatres and will use their best efforts to obtain the cooperation of theatres in which they have a partial interest.

Exhibitor Groups. Organized exhibitor groups who sign the Code, will endeavor to obtain the signature of all their members and all other exhibitors operating theatres in the areas where they have members.

Clause XVI—Effective Date

This Code shall apply to all contracts made after January 1, 1939 for 1939/40 product and the product of subsequent years so long as this agreement is in effect.

Clause XVII—Term

The term of this Code shall be for two exhibition seasons beginning with the season 1939/40 and thereafter indefinitely.

Exhibition Season. An exhibition season begins September 1st and ends August 31st.

Withdrawing from Code. Anyone who has signed the Code may withdraw at the end of the second exhibition season or at the end of any subsequent exhibition season.

Notice of Withdrawal. To withdraw from the Code, written notice must be sent to each distributor and organized group of exhibitors who have signed and to the Secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board in each Exchange territory, where the party withdrawing transacts business.

Time of Notice. The withdrawal notice must be sent at least six months prior to the end of the exhibition season.

Withdrawal Because of Others. If a distributor or the operator of a substantial number of theatres withdraws from the Code, any other person who has signed may also withdraw at the end of the same exhibition season by giving written notice prior to the end of that season.

Other Reasons for Withdrawal. There are two other reasons which justify withdrawal from the Code. They are:

(a) Inconsistent Legislation. If laws are passed which are inconsistent with the Code, or require a substantial change in the method of carrying on business, anyone who signed the Code may withdraw from it, but only in the territory governed by such legislation; or

(b) Illegality of Code. If any Court declares the Code illegal, or invalid, or issues an injunction against it or against the clause of any contract substantially identical with a clause in the Code, or requires a substantial change in the method of carrying on business, then withdrawal from the Code is justified.

Rights of Others to Withdrawal. If any distributor or operator of a substantial number of theatres withdraws from the Code because of inconsistent legislation or Court orders (as specified in subdivisions a and b above), then any other person who signed the Code may withdraw whether such legislation or judgment affects it or not.

Notice. In case of such withdrawal, written notice must be given to distributors, organized groups of exhibitors and Secretaries of Permanent Arbitration Boards in the Exchange Territory where business is transacted.

DE-CODING THE CODE

"De-coding the Code"—the majors' new trade practice program for self-regulating distribution-exhibition—as analyzed by Louis Nizer, concludes with an analysis of Clauses XV, XVI and XVII, below. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Nizer starts an analysis of the Arbitration Agreement under the code.

In the first installment, appearing on page 31, June 24th, the following clauses were interpreted:

I—Exclusion Privileges, Cancellations
II—Trade Announcement

In the second installment, appearing on page 30, July 1st, the next six clauses were interpreted:

III—Public Demand for Exceptional Feature
IV—Preferred Playing Time
V—Some Run Available
VI—Regular Customer
VII—Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.
VIII—Score Charges

In the third installment, appearing on page 30, July 8th, six more clauses were interpreted:

IX—Allocation of Features
X—Form of Contract
XI—Selective Contracts
XII—Playing Features in the Order of Release
XIII—Coercing Contracts
XIV—Other Subjects of Arbitration

In the fourth installment, appearing herewith, the three final clauses of the code itself are analyzed, and an analysis is started of the code's Arbitration Agreement. The fourth installment is as follows:

XV—Conditions of Agreement to Arbitrate
XVI—Effective Date
XVII—Term
RULES OF ARBITRATION
I—Exchange Territories
II—Panel of Neutral Arbitrators
III—Permanent Arbitration Board

Rules of Arbitration

Rule I—Exchange Territories

Arbitration of disputes under the Trade Practice Code or under the Rules of Arbitration shall be governed by these rules. Arbitration shall be conducted in the following Exchange territories:

ALBANY
CINCINNATI
DENVER
DETROIT
INDIANAPOLIS
KANSAS CITY

The rules come into effect after the appointment of a panel of neutral arbitrators.

Rule II—Panel of Neutral Arbitrators

In each Exchange territory there shall be appointed a panel of not less than five nor more than ten neutral arbitrators.

Who Appoints Panel. All distributors and affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups which have signed the Trade Practice Code and which carry on their business in an Exchange territory, shall, by unanimous action, appoint the panel. An organized exhibitor group may participate in such appointment if it has members who have signed the Trade Practice Code and are operating theatres.

Compensation. Neutral arbitrators may be compensated for their services.

Qualifications. Neutral arbitrators shall preferably have an understanding and knowledge of the motion picture industry but shall not be associated with either distributor or exhibitor interests.

Rule III—Permanent Arbitration Board

(1) Appointment of Panels. In addition to the panel of neutral arbitrators, there shall be a panel of ten arbitrators appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors, and another panel of ten arbitrators appointed by all organized exhibitor groups, in the Exchange territory. In this manner, there will be created three distinct panels in each Exchange territory:

(a) Five to ten neutral arbitrators appointed by distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups.

(b) Ten arbitrators appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors.

(c) Ten arbitrators appointed by organized exhibitor groups.

Who May Appoint Panels. Distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups may participate in the appointment of

GOVERNORS, RIVERS, ORPHANS, SHIPS, INDIANS, ALL IN PARAMOUNT'S PLANS

Lavish Publicity Programs for Eight 1939-40 Productions Carry National Ballyhoo Technique to New Heights

The trade's comparatively new publicity technique of making the introduction of a motion picture into a national event, synchronized with national advertising, national exploitation and national broadcasts, with banners and ballyhoo, street parades and Governors' proclamations, is about to be put to a new high mark by Paramount, which has pegged eight pictures for extraordinary merchandising treatment within the next eight weeks.

Warners had their "Dodge City" junket to Dodge City, Kansas, and Paramount itself went in for a bit of field ballyhooing for its "Union Pacific," in Omaha. Twentieth Century-Fox had its special-attention trip to Springfield, Illinois, for "Young Mr. Lincoln," and only a week ago, RKO went all the way to Des Moines to launch its "Career." There have been others—all started by Paramount with "The Buccaneer" in New Orleans early in 1938.

Now Paramount is about to adopt the treatment on the wholesale, all for new 1939-40 productions, with no less than 30 special screenings for one picture, screenings for 48 Governors on another; a third will take in a search of orphanages, another will shift the scene to the Indian country of Arizona, where a "Hollywood premiere" will be put on in the dead center of an Apache Reservation.

Studio-built ships will make a trans-continental tour of the nation's waterways, like Paramount's trans-continental rail ride for "Union Pacific." The S.S. Queen Mary, Nassau and other places are all slated for parts in the mass merchandising.

Pictures and Plans

Robert M. Gillham, director of Paramount advertising and publicity, announced that first on the list of field exploitation activities will be key city trade and press screenings of "Beau Geste," lead-off picture for 1939-40. Beginning July 18th with a press preview at the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles, 30 subsequent screenings will be staged throughout the country by Cliff Lewis, Terry DeLapp, Harlan Hobbs, Rufus Blair and Carl Kruger from Mr. Gillham's studio staff and by Alec Moss, Al Wilkie and C. N. Odell of the home office force.

Also, "Beau Geste" will first be presented to Canadian exhibitors at the meeting of theatre managers of Famous Players Canadian, Ltd., who will gather from coast to coast for the first time in a dozen years in Niagara Falls, Ontario, on July 24th-27th.

Next to receive special attention will be Bob Burns' new "Our Leading Citizen," to be screened for the Governors of the 48 states, followed by a special coast-to-coast radio broadcast from Van Buren, Ark., honoring Bob Burns, the town's "leading citizen." Mr. Burns is to head the "all-star" cast to Arkansas, for this broadcast, with appropriate fanfare just prior to the national release date.

A lecture tour by Irvin Cobb, author of the story, and tie-up with the Washington, D. C., Press Club are additional activities tied in.

Because Linda Ware, 13-year-old leading "woman" in Bing Crosby's "The Star Maker" is a graduate of an orphan asylum, Paramount is planning a nationwide search for the "most talented orphan" in a score of key cities who will be joint guests of Miss Ware and Paramount on a "Cinderella" trip to Hollywood. Tie-ups will be made with local papers.

Also, "The Star Maker" will be exploited by a coast-to-coast broadcast honoring Gus Edwards, oldtime showman, whose life story forms the basis for the screen play.

"Geronimo!" the action story based on the life of the Apache chief, will have a "back to the Indians' world premiere" in the town of Geronimo, Arizona, on the Apache Indian reservation early in September. Some 250 Hollywood and New York newspaper correspondents will be the company's guests. A radio broadcast from the station at the nearby town of Stafford is planned.

Following the "Geronimo!" Apache-land premiere, the picture will be opened with special campaigns in Salt Lake City and Denver and these will be followed by five additional selected dates per week until the picture has played approximately 20 test engagements.

"The success of the trans-continental tour of the 'Union Pacific' train has inspired an even more ambitious plan for the exploitation of Frank Lloyd's production, 'Ruler of the Seas,'" says the company. Official permissions are now being obtained from state and national authorities to permit the transportation by truck and natural waterways to a number of important cities of the two 40-foot boats which were built for the picture—reproductions of the "Sirus" and "Dog Star" which staged a trans-Atlantic sail vs. steam race in 1838.

"Premiere" on SS. Queen Mary

A "world premiere" of "Ruler of the Seas" aboard the SS. Queen Mary, tied in with a trans-Atlantic short-wave radio broadcast from Hollywood, New York and London, is now being evolved.

Because of the presence in Hollywood of Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara, star and leading woman of "Jamaica Inn" and Alfred Hitchcock, who directed this Laughton-Pommer-Mayflower production—all three hailing from England—Paramount exploiteers will stage another trans-Atlantic short-wave broadcast in connection with the New York premiere of "Jamaica Inn" at the Rivoli theatre early in the autumn.

A tie-up with the Cunard White Star steamship line modeled on the similar tie-up with the Union Pacific Railroad, has been set up by Hal Danson of the Paramount home office, for the cooperation of the steamship company's facilities for publicizing this story based on the first Cunard steamship venture.

"Are Husbands Necessary?" starring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray has Nassau, Bahamas, as a background for some of its action and appropriately the picture is slated to be premiered in Nassau before a select group of British Colonial dignitaries and socialites in mid-September. Leading newspaper correspondents from the Atlantic seaboard will be guests at this tropical premiere.

Lloyd C. Douglas, author of the best-seller, "Disputed Passage," will lecture in a number of cities prior to the release of the picture, in which Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff and John Howard are featured and the film company's radio contacts are hopeful of presenting the author in a series of broadcasts on or about the release date.

LANSING PRESS CLUB HONORS BUTTERFIELD

The Lansing Press Club, which was dedicated in Lansing, Mich., recently, has a "Colonel Butterfield" room in honor of the late Colonel Walter S. Butterfield, founder of the circuit bearing his name. The room is a tribute paid to him by Lansing newspapermen for the friendship and goodwill he had for them. A photograph of the Colonel, provided by Ed Beatty, now president of the circuit, has been framed and hung in the room.

De-Coding the Code

these panels which have signed the Trade Practice Code and which carry on their business at the time of the appointment. An organized exhibitor group may participate if it has members who have signed the Trade Practice Code and who are operating theatres.

Unanimous Appointment. The ten arbitrators appointed by the distributors and affiliated exhibitors must be selected by unanimous action of that group. Similarly, the ten arbitrators appointed by the organized exhibitor groups must be selected by unanimous action.

No Compensation. The arbitrators on the two panels thus appointed, unlike the neutral arbitrators, shall receive no compensation.

Associated with Industry. The arbitrators on these two panels, unlike the neutral arbitrators, will be associated with some branch of the motion picture industry.

(2) Personnel of Permanent Arbitration Board. In each Exchange territory, there will be organized a Permanent Arbitration Board composed of three arbitrators:

(a) One from the panel appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors.

(b) One from the panel appointed by the organized exhibitor groups.

(c) One from the panel of neutral arbitrators.

Rotation of Arbitrators. All arbitrators, except those from the neutral panel, shall serve in rotation.

Length of Service. The members of each panel shall determine the length of time which each of its members shall serve. It shall also determine the order in which they shall rotate.

Selection of Neutral Arbitrators. The neutral arbitrator shall be designated by the other two arbitrators. If they are unable to agree upon the neutral arbitrator, he shall be chosen by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators.

Chairman of the Board. The neutral arbitrator shall be Chairman of the Permanent Arbitration Board. He shall serve during the term of office of the two arbitrators designating him.

(3) Secretary. All distributors, affiliated exhibitors and organized exhibitor groups which have the right to participate in the appointment of the panel of neutral arbitrators shall, by unimous action, appoint the Secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board for such Exchange territory. The Secretary shall also act as Secretary for Special Arbitration Boards.

(4) Office. Each Permanent Arbitration Board shall maintain an office and have available adequate quarters for the hearing of arbitrations.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Bright Prospects

When half a dozen potential "sure to be box office hit" pictures turn up in the completed work of a week and at the same time four or five exceptionally promising properties are started, it cannot be said that the outlook for summer and early fall business is anything but rosey. The pictures started and finished during Fourth of July week are the basis for the opinion.

The completed lot, of most interest inasmuch as they will reach theatres first in the regular course of events, assays high in entertainment and commercial worth and included are such titles as "The Women," "The Lady And The Knight," "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington," "Unexpected Father," "I Stole A Million" and "The Return Of Dr. X."

Three at Warners, Universal

Of the 13 productions completed, Warners accounted for three. "The Lady And The Knight" which features Bette Davis and Errol Flynn will also present Olivia de Havilland, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp, Vincent Price, Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniell, Robert Warwick, Ralph Forbes, Rosella Towne and Forrester Harvey among many others. Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Lya Lys, John Litel, Dennis Morgan, Charles Wilson and Huntz Hall will be seen in "The Return Of Dr. X." The entire "Dead End" juvenile group is in "Dead End Kids At Military School" and John Litel, Cissie Loftus, Frankie Thomas and Selmar Jackson complete the cast.

Universal matched the pace of its valley neighbor. George Raft is the star of "I Stole a Million" in which Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Victor Jory, Henry Armetta, Irving Bacon, Robert Elliott and Joe Sawyer are featured. "Unexpected Father" is Baby Sandy's first starring picture. Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe, Shirley Ross, Joy Hodges, Donald Briggs, Richard Lane, Dorothy Arnold and Anne Nagel will also be seen. The "Hawaiian Nights" troupe lists Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan, Samuel Hinds, Etienne Girardot, Thurston Hall, Robert Emmett and Matty Mallneck's orchestra.

"Women Finished"

The prize picture during the week from MGM is "The Women." Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell are the ace names, but the all-feminine cast further includes Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, Florence Nash, Lucille Watson, Virginia Weidler, Mary Boland, Ruth Hussey, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Denny Moore, Virginia Grey, Ann Morriss and Marjorie Main. Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Jane Bryan, Owen Davis, Jr., Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes and Marsha Hunt are the principals in "These Glamour Girls."

Two pictures were finished at Republic. "In Old Monterey" is one for the Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, George Hayes and William Hall fans. John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton and Phyllis Isley head the "Raiders Of The Wasteland" cast.

For Monogram, E. B. Derr finished "Girl From Rio" in which Movita, Warren Hull, Alan Baldwin and Adele Pearce are the principals.

"Mr. Smith Goes To Washington" is the picture Columbia will be boasting about shortly. A Frank Capra production it will offer Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi, Ruth Donnelly, Astrid Allwyn, Thomas Mitchell, Larry Sims and Mary MacLaren in the leading roles.

Harry Sherman completed "Argentina" for Paramount. William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna, Sidney Toler, Sidney Blackmer, Pedro de Cordoba, Glenn Strange and Anna Demetrio are featured.

RUSSIA MAKING FILM OF CIVIL WAR PERIOD

Soviet Russian cameramen are filming battle scenes on Russia's western frontier for a film "The First Calvary Army," portraying episodes in the struggle of the young Soviet republic against foreign invaders in the civil war and intervention period, according to the Associated Press.

Technical advisers for the production include Klementy E. Voroshiloff, war commissioner, and Simeon M. Budyenny, vice-commissar of defense. They and Joseph Stalin are portrayed in the film.

On Location

MGM started a crew to location in Idaho to begin filming "Northwest Passage" in which Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan, Laraine Day, Donald MacBride, Truman Bradley, Isabel Jewell, Regis Toomey and Hugh Sothern eventually will be seen.

While this was going on, Warners got busy with four new pictures. The leads in "The World Moves On" are James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh and Joseph Sawyer. Paul Muni with Dolly Haas, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor and Raymond Severn started work on "We Are Not Alone." "20,000 Years In Sing Sing" has John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Jerome Cowan and Willard Robertson as principals. Ronald Reagan and Margot Stevenson head the cast of the fourth picture, "Queer Money."

Durbin Picture Starts

With Deanna Durbin starred, two newcomers, Lewis Howard and Robert Stack, featured and Helen Parrish, Spring Byington, Eugene Pallette and Jack Mulhall in the cast, Universal's "First Love" got under way.

Republic started "Flight At Midnight" in which Phil Regan, noted aviator Roscoe Turner, Jean Parker and Robert Armstrong will be featured.

"Charlie Chan In The City Of Darkness" started at 20th Century-Fox. Sidney Toler heads the cast which includes Sen Young, Douglas Dumbrille and Pedro de Cordoba.

Last of the nine pictures to start is "Wolves Of The Frontier," Monogram. Star Tex Ritter will be supported by Jack Rutherford, Manton Moreland, Jean Joyce, Marian Sease and William McCormick.

Joseph Conrad Novel

"Victory," one of Joseph Conrad's best known novels, a story of stark melodrama in the South Seas, will be brought to the screen by Paramount.

Indicating the important production values that will be given the picture, William LeBaron, the studio's managing director, announced that Marc Connolly who won the Pulitzer Prize for his dramatization of "Green Pastures," will be brought to Hollywood to adapt the Conrad classic. "Victory" tells the story of a man who had been trained from childhood by his father in the development of an aloofness toward life and a belief in the futility of effort. Background of the story are the islands of the Java Sea where the young hero is plunged into a series of romantic and dramatic adventures which violently alter the stoic calm of his life. No cast assignments, choice of director or starting date have as yet been made.

Meanwhile Paramount will launch seven production during the remaining weeks of July. Set to go are "Untamed" which will feature Ray Milland, Patricia Morison and Akim Tamiroff; "Federal Offense," another item in the "Persons In Hiding" series; "Diamonds Are Dangerous" with George Brent and Isa Miranda: "Remember the Night" in which Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray will be co-starred and the next Dorothy Lamour feature "South Of Samoa" which is slated to go on July 31.

News in Brief

Andy Panda, newest addition to the menagerie of animal cartoon characters was introduced to the press by his creator, Walter Lantz, in the short "Life Begins For Andy Panda." First of a series of four which Universal will release, the cute Himalayan Mountain teddy-bear makes his screen debut at a birds and animals birthday party. All the cartoon characters have voices resembling those of screen personalities.

RKO-Radio has signed John Cromwell to direct Robert Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" which Max Gordon and Harry Goetz will produce.

HUTCHINSON, GOODMAN AND COLLI REPORT ON FOREIGN MARKET STATUS

20th Century - Fox, Columbia and Warner Foreign Chiefs Discuss European, South and Central American Markets

The most serious problem confronting American distributors in foreign markets still is their inability to bring out currency on liquidated contracts.

Below the Rio Grande, currency fluctuations, rather than "over-rated" competition of native product, occupy the attention of the American companies.

These are but a few of the observations brought back to New York this week by foreign film department executives of American distributors, after first-hand investigations in Europe, Central and South America, and elsewhere—by Walter Hutchinson, foreign sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox; Morris Goodman, foreign sales manager of Republic, and by Peter Colli, Warner sales supervisor in Cuba, Central American and several of the South American countries.

Goodman Says Latins Resent "Exploitation"

American companies should talk less about their intentions of "cultivating" the Latin American market, because Latin Americans resent the implication that they are being "exploited." And the fact is, that American motion picture companies are doing very well in Latin America, as they always have done.

Such were the thoughts of Morris Goodman, Republic foreign sales manager, in New York last week, after a 14-week tour of Latin American countries except Paraguay, Uruguay, Bolivia, and the Central American countries between Mexico and Panama.

"The chief observation that I can make," said Mr. Goodman, "is this: that the Latin American countries all are good markets; and we can develop them to our interests, without doing a lot of shouting.

Argentina and Mexico

"Some territories are peculiar," he added. "Argentina, for instance, and Mexico. In Argentina, the system of exhibition is a headache, with a fixed system of clearance, and native pictures taking some of the playing time. And in Mexico, it's labor and politics.

"Still," he said, "American pictures get good reception there. It's the same old story. A good picture will always get business."

Mr. Goodman referred to his statement about "shouting" on Latin American possibilities.

"I mean by that the fact that all the companies have made statements about making up in Latin America the markets they have lost elsewhere. I don't think such statements are beneficial. I have heard much resentful comment from local film men in Latin America."

Mr. Goodman declared that the Latin American countries were being "gradually" developed and that American companies were "always" in "close touch" with the situations —"as they always have been."

Reminded that Spanish language pictures are growing in number and in audience, Mr. Goodman asserted that, to answer whether they constituted a "threat" to American supremacy, was "hard."

"However, in our case, it isn't a pressing problem," he said. "That's because our deals are with franchise holders—and most of them are releasing Spanish language pictures.

Concerning Good Pictures

"In any event, the main answer is the one which any film executive dealing in those countries will tell you—a good picture always drags them in," he said.

As for Latin American preferences—well, they like westerns.

Republic releases practically all of its product below the Rio Grande, Mr. Goodman said.

He declared that exhibition in Latin America was "good"; and that, at the present, the main difficulty facing American distributors was the continually fluctuating values of local currencies.

Hutchinson Views Conditions Abroad

Returning to New York from a three month trip to Europe, Central and South America, Walter Hutchinson, Twentieth Century-Fox foreign sales head, reported that:

"The company is doing the best foreign business in its history."

"The most serious problem with respect to foreign film markets is that of getting the currency out of the various countries."

"Currency valuation, throughout the world, is off."

"Productions are now being readied for early release in Spain."

Movietone News, said Mr. Hutchinson, is starting to once again produce a newsreel in Spain; and it was in connection with the Newsreel as well as for the centralized release of features that Twentieth Century-Fox is moving its headquarters from Barcelona, where they had been maintained throughout the Civil War, to Madrid. Some six features will be released as a starter in Spain early in the fall.

Highly enthusiastic about the future of the South American market, Mr. Hutchinson reiterated views expressed by Sidney Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, in saying that personal study of the country would pay dividends in good will as well as providing a basis of knowledge upon which to base film production.

"We hope to increase our business in our neighboring continent through offering Hollywood product that has a native background which will appeal to native audiences there," Mr. Hutchinson said. The company's business in Argentina has increased more than seven per cent, he said, while in Brazil it is up more than nine per cent.

Two Spanish films will be released in the Latin-American market this month by the company.

Saying that currency restrictions are getting increasingly harder and that, as well, the problem of foreign exchange and currency valuation was occupying the time of government and banking heads in New York, London and other financial centers; Mr. Hutchinson characterized the international monetary transactions as "a separate problem."

"Our job," he said, "is to sell films and help get people into theatres to see them. The com-

Wobber Reports Increase in Rentals, Sees Even Higher Returns in 1940

Noting an increase in film rentals over the corresponding period last year for the first time in five or six weeks, Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox general manager of distribution, sees a bright prospect for the coming season, which will witness increased budgets on certain of the company's pictures, he reported this week on his return to New York after four weeks in the field.

With August 1st set as the starting date of the 1939-40 releasing season for his company, Mr. Wobber is highly optimistic about pictures coming up, citing "The Rains Came," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Hollywood Cavalcade," and "Grapes of Wrath."

The upturn in film rentals is especially heartening, he said, in that boxoffice returns for the country as a whole have been off at least 15 per cent. This he sees as due to general conditions rather than product.

"We're making the usual seasonal progress on our circuit deals, and are having no problems with any circuits; all of which have been signed or are about to be," said Mr. Wobber.

Noting a trend towards an increase in the number of films sold on a percentage basis, the Twentieth Century-Fox sales head said that the company hopes to service about 12,000 accounts. "Alexander's Ragtime Band" has had close to 13,500 bookings, he added.

The trade practice code will be offered by Fox to all exhibitors who want it, he said.

"TARZAN" TIPS!

Successful Exploitation Ideas From Profitable Engagements!

(It's easy to duplicate the ideas and the PROFITS!)

LOUISVILLE, KY. A swimming contest was conducted to find Louisville's Tarzan. City winner received a Tarzan Trophy and a trip to Indianapolis, Indiana, to compete in the Kentucky-Indiana State Finals. The State winner received a trip to the New York World's Fair with all expenses paid.

JOHNSTOWN, PA. The Cambria Theatre, arranged with Cole Brothers and Art Mix Circus to have their elephants carry picture banners in the circus parade. A Tarzan Call Contest was exploited over the theatre's PA system with winner receiving a cash prize of $10 and runners-up free movie tickets.

ROCHESTER, N. Y. Caged lion exhibit displayed in front of Loew's Theatre for four days prior to and during picture opening. Jungle atmosphere prevailed with animal skins strung around marquee. "California Jack" was in charge of the exhibit and answered questions relating to his travels in the African wilds. Man in gorilla costume rode a bicycle on the streets for three days. Band paraded to theatre on opening day.

ASBURY PARK, N. J. The St. James Theatre sponsored the first major swim meet of the season, at this noted resort, for its engagement of "Tarzan Finds a Son!" Awards consisted of a gold trophy, a trip to the New York World's Fair and 13 other prizes. The Tarzan Swim Meet was held at the Natatorium and was exploited by the Asbury Park Evening Press.

WASHINGTON, INDIANA. Through arrangement with the Indiana Theatre, and the Washington Democrat, a state-wide contest for a Tarzan type of swimmer was put over. The stunt had the cooperation of the mayor and the president of the local chamber of commerce. Voting coupons appeared in the paper and readers were urged to cast their votes for the young man they felt was best qualified to represent Washington in the Indianapolis finals. One of the prizes in this big promotion undertaking was a trip to the New York World's Fair. The contest was widely published in many cities in the States of Indiana and Kentucky.

CLEVELAND, OHIO. Loew's State Theatre prepared a big jungle float for its play dates. Mounted elephants, tigers and lions were shown together with a man dressed in animal skins, who gave the Tarzan Yell. Mounted animals were also displayed in the lobby and an atmospheric jungle front attracted plenty of attention.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y. The Strand Theatre exploited a Tarzan Camera Contest. Contestants were instructed to take pictures of children with any kind of an animal. Three fine cameras were awarded winners who bore the closest resemblance to Johnny Sheffield.

SEYMOUR AND FRANKLIN, INDIANA. The Vondee and Artcraft Theatres, respectively, tied in with the Washington (Indiana) state-wide Tarzan swim contest.

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., N. Y. The spectacular Tarzan Float, which was seen by New York City's millions who turned out to greet England's King and Queen, and which ballyhooed New York City's Capitol Theatre engagement, was a feature in American Legion's Fourth of July parade. The Southampton Press publicized the presence of the Tarzan Float in front page stories.

HARRISBURG, SCRANTON AND WILKES-BARRE, PA. Due to promotion enterprise Harrisburg had a long line of standees waiting for the opening performance. M-G-M's Tarzan Float covered part of Pennsylvania after its ballyhoo for the Capitol Theatre (N. Y.) engagement. Tarzana, the movie chimpanzee, was a feature of the animal float and attracted large crowds in Harrisburg, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre. Comerford Theatres played the picture in the last two cities. All newspapers cooperated with art and stories on Tarzana.

NEWARK, N. J. Loew's State Theatre searched for a local "Tarzan, Jr." on the basis of athletic development and resemblance to Johnny Sheffield. The winner and his mother were guests of Johnny Weissmuller at the World's Fair and the stunt broke the city's newspapers.

WATERBURY, CONN. Loew-Poli Theatre backed the engagement with one of the biggest campaigns ever seen on a jungle picture attaining coverage by using all ideas, missing no bets!

VANCOUVER, CANADA. The Vancouver Sun conducted a contest along the line of—"Have You a Little Tarzan in Your Home?" Youngsters who most closely resembled Johnny Sheffield, "Tarzan Jr.", or who most closely approximated a set of physical measurements, were eligible to enter. Cash prizes and a free trip to the New York World's Fair were the prizes. The Orpheum Theatre participated.

"TARZAN FINDS A SON!" with the one and only JOHNNY WEISSMULLER • Maureen O'Sullivan and John Sheffield, Ian Hunter, Henry Stephenson, Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Laraine Day • Screen Play by Cyril Hume • Based upon the Characters Created by Edgar Rice Burroughs • Directed by Richard Thorpe • Produced by Sam Zimbalist

378 Properties of 436 Scheduled for 1940 Already Determined by Majors

Only 52 of the 436 features—excluding 76 westerns—to which the ten large distributors are committed to deliver in 1939-40 remain to be identified as to the story properties from which the films will be made. This represents but 12 per cent of the total promised, an unusually low number for this time, with actual releasing of 1939-40 pictures not set to start for another six weeks, around September 1st.

Based on the product announcements made by the ten companies, and which were published variously by Motion Picture Herald during the sales conventions season, starting in March and ending three weeks ago, the distributors' designations to date of pictures schedule stand as follows:

	TOTAL NUMBER OF FEATURES (Excl. Westerns)	PROPERTIES IDENTIFIED	PROPERTIES UNIDENTIFIED
Columbia	42	33	9
MGM	44 to 52	All	None
Monogram	30	19	11
Paramount	58	52	6
Republic	26	All	None
RKO	52	40	12
Twentieth Century-Fox	52	44	2
United Artists	28 to 32	26	2 to 6
Universal	44	40	4
Warner Brothers	48	46	2
TOTALS	424 to 436	378	52

In addition to features listed above, Columbia will have 16 westerns; Monogram will have 16 westerns and 8 western reissues; Republic, 24 westerns; RKO, 6 westerns; Universal, 14 westerns.

ASCAP Holding Television Meets

Meetings are currently under way between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and representatives of television broadcasting stations with regard to definite recognition by the latter that musical rights are subject to protection and that those rights are vested in the Society.

To date, meetings have been held only with NBC, but all of the television companies which would be using music in telecasts will be contacted by ASCAP.

The conferences are still in the preliminary stages, with no definite proposals being made as to rates at this time; ASCAP's feeling being that while television has not made sufficient commercial strides to warrant music fees, it has reached a stage where an understanding should be forthcoming on the question of allocation of rights.

ASCAP executives expressed the opinion that television had made great strides forward and that reception was now at a high peak, at a recent luncheon tendered them by Lenox Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company.

Summers Appointed

James D. Summers, supervisor of checkers for Warner Brothers' New York exchange, has been appointed personnel manager of the company's theatre zone in Chicago and Milwaukee. His headquarters will be in Chicago.

Standard Opens New York Office

Standard Pictures Distributing Company, related to Standard Pictures Productions, Inc., of Hollywood has opened New York sales headquarters in the RKO Building. George Trainer will be general manager and secretary. The company, producers of the "Headley's at Home," will resume production schedule this fall beginning with "20,000,000 Witnesses," a radio mystery.

The distributing company has acquired several independent productions that will be distributed through 29 franchised exchanges in the United States. Press books and exploitation matter is now being prepared on the following releases: "Forbidden Music," "The Prisoner of Corbal" and "The Spy of Napoleon," co-starring Richard Barthelmess and Dolly Haas.

Reelect Officers of Film Relief Fund

Jean Hersholt has been reelected president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund. Other officers reelected were Ralph Block, Joan Crawford and Joseph M. Schenck, vice-presidents. Ginger Rogers was elected a vice-president, and George Bagnall was named treasurer.

James Roosevelt, Goldwyn vice-president, said in Hollywood last week that film producers would contribute from $75,000 to $100,000 a year to the fund.

"Plegaria Gaucha," an Argentine made Spanish film, has been acquired for American release by J. H. Hoffberg. The picture is scheduled for release in the fall.

Colli, Hutchinson And Goodman on Foreign Markets

plex problem of currency inter-relationships must be considered as a separate phase of the business."

Colli Cites Troubles Over Fluctuations

Currency fluctuations, rather than the "overrated" competition of native product, occupy the attention of American film distributors below the Rio Grande, according to Peter Colli, Warner supervisor for Cuba, Mexico, Central America, Ecuador, Bolivia, and Peru, who is in New York this week on a visit to the Warner home offices.

Mr. Colli noted variations in the Cuban exchange rates. The Cuban cent used to be on par with the American, he said. Then the Cuban Government considered a plan to mint 15 million more silver pesos. The Cuban rate then declined to 84 centavos per American dollar. At present, Mr. Colli said, it is about 92 centavos per dollar. The Cuban legislators, he said, decided not to pass the law for the minting of more silver.

Similar financial maneuvers cause slight headaches to American film men in all Latin American countries, he said; but they are nothing compared to the financial exchange manipulations confronting American companies in Europe, he noted. At present, there are no quota restrictions, nor threats of any in his territory, Mr. Colli said.

Mr. Colli noted a general improvement of business throughout the territory he supervises. He was then asked whether the acknowledged rise in the production of, and distribution of, native pictures, did not mean a corollary decline in American bookings. To this, he replied, thus:

"Not at all; these pictures have instead created an entirely new market: the illiterates, in the cities. People are appreciating pictures now, who never went to pictures before. The native productions may be called an aid to business, generally."

Mr. Colli admitted he had submitted a detailed report on native production, to his home office. The report, he emphasized, noted that the "novelty," to Latin American audiences, of Spanish language pictures, was "wearing off," and that it was now becoming "a matter of quality."

Mr. Colli then commented: "Now that the Latin Americans—that is those who have been seeing American pictures, not the 'new market' I was talking about—have had the opportunity of comparing native with American product, they have become great lovers of American pictures."

The increasing attention to Latin America being paid by American film companies, in their pictures—and especially by Warner Brothers—was praised by Mr. Colli, as "the best possible thing" to further good relations and aid business.

Action pictures, with minimum dialogue, do best in his territories, he asserted.

Mr. Colli sails to Havana, his headquarters, next Thursday. After some weeks there, he will visit his territories.

Gaynor to Columbia

Leonard Gaynor, formerly a member of the Twentieth Century-Fox publicity department, joined Columbia Pictures on Tuesday to handle publicity and exploitation on "Golden Boy" and "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

FOREIGN LANGUAGE FILMS SHOW IN 175 THEATRES IN 85 COMMUNITIES

THERE are 175 theatres in 85 different localities showing foreign language pictures in the U. S. This compares with the 182 theatres in 84 communities which were showing imported product last year, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on April 16th, 1938, and with the fewer than 50 theatres showing foreign language films in 1935.

Of the 175 theatres, (out of a total of 17,541 American theatres) 76, or 43 per cent, have only occasional showings. In addition, many large circuits occasionally bill a foreign language picture. "Mayerling," for one, has played Loew's, RKO, Warners, Fox Intermountain, Brandt, Balaban and Katz, Consolidated and Interstate, while "Grand Illusion" played the RKO, Publix and Warner circuits, among others.

Usually Independent Theatres

Theatres showing this type of product are almost always independent. In a few cases more than one house is under the same management. Herbert Rosener, who opened the City Theatre in Cleveland, the Vogue in Kansas City and the Esquire in Portland within the last year, also operates houses showing foreign language films in Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Hollywood.

In New York, Martin Lewis operates the 55th Street Playhouse, the Fifth Avenue Playhouse and the Thalia; while the Visulite Theatre, Norfolk, Virginia, and the Visulite theatre in Charlotte, North Carolina, are under the same management.

The growth, according to Joseph Burstyn of Mayer and Burstyn, foreign distributors, is in the direction of increased playing time in American theatres, rather than in the development of foreign language circuits. Citing "Ballerina," Mr. Burstyn said that 60 per cent of that film's gross had come from its playdates at theatres which typically showed American rather than foreign films. It has played such circuits as Warners, Consolidated, Randforce, Cocalis, Brandt and Skouras.

French Eye on U. S.

Mr. Burstyn added that rising production costs for French films made it necessary, when possible, to play them in the American circuits, and that French films were being made with an eye to the American market.

Martin Lewis points out that "Nothing systematic has been done about circuits as far as 'foreign' houses are concerned. Business is too spotty for the sustained operations required in a circuit, and small houses are necessary due to the need for small overhead and the limited quantity of good films."

Jean Lenauer, of Lenauer International Films and New York's Filmarte Theatre, has said that there has been some increase in the average seating capacity of theatres showing foreign language films, due to the entry into the field of some larger theatres. But he points out that the average seating capacity in this type of house is between 300-400, despite the Filmarte's 800 seats. The average for all American theatres is 623 seats.

The showing of double features in foreign language houses is not typical, according to Mr. Lenauer, who feels that it defeats its own purpose. Mr. Burstyn adds that double billing is usually found only in third or fourth run situations, as far as two foreign films are concerned, but that the double billing of an American and a foreign language film has worked out successfully.

With the New York World's Fair providing an opportunity for the showings of films by various foreign countries, among them England, France, Russia, Poland and the Scandinavian countries, in their respective pavilions at the Fair, Mr. Lenauer feels that there will be a beneficial effect on foreign films by these showings, typically depictions of the national life in the different countries.

Only One Foreign Language Theatre in Arkansas

The Conway Theatre, Conway, Arkansas, is the only house which has shown foreign language films in Arkansas in recent years. The films shown are for educational purposes, being French pictures brought to Conway for French classes in Hendrix College, Arkansas State Teachers College, Central College and Conway High School.

Films made in Great Britain and released through American distributors have had short runs at houses in all larger Arkansas towns.

Fine Arts Theatre Continues Foreign Policy

The Fine Arts Theatre in Boston, operated on a foreign language film policy, finds British films the most successful, with French second. Long runs during the past season included 25 weeks of "Moonlight Sonata" and nine weeks of "Grand Illusion," according to Leonard Kraska, manager of the theatre.

The theatre seats 587, with prices ranging from 30 cents to 99 cents.

Few Foreign Films In Cincinnati Territory

There are no theatres in Cincinnati or the Cincinnati trade territory now playing foreign language films. Although repeatedly tried, it never has been a commercial success.

The Mayfair, a 400-seat house in downtown Cincinnati, was opened in January for a short season of foreign films, closing April 15th.

Hiawatha Theatre Shows All Foreign Types

The Hiawatha Theatre, in Denver, Colorado, shows all types of foreign language films.

Included are French, German, Russian, Yiddish, Swedish, Spanish, Polish, Chinese and English.

Foreign Language Showings Increase in Detroit

Foreign language films showed an increase of 40 per cent in the total footage reviewed by Police Censor Charles Snyder during 1938, while American and English films showed a drop of approximately 20 per cent.

The censor reviewed films in 16 language groups.

New Brunswick Theatre Serves Hungarian Group

The Europa Theatre, in New Brunswick, New Jersey, which has 300 seats, plays Hungarian pictures exclusively, with a change of bill every week. The house serves a local Hungarian community of about 8,000 people.

A recent shift to French and Russian films, aimed at the college element, was unsuccessful, and the house returned to its exclusively Hungarian policy.

Fewer New York Houses Show Foreign Product

The 30 theatres in New York City which showed foreign language films last year have been reduced to 22; with the Little Carnegie no longer showing them, and the Tiffany, Belmont and Squire, among others, closed.

During the year, "Grand Illusion" played a six months' engagement, from September 13th, 1938, to March 13th, 1939, at the Filmarte Theatre.

Visulite Theatres Running Occasional Foreign Films

The Visulite Theatre, in Norfolk, Virginia, runs approximately one foreign film a month. During the past year, "Mayerling," "Moonlight Sonata," "Grand Illusion," "Life Dances On," "Victoria the Great" and "The Lady Vanishes" have been shown.

The Visulite Theatre, Charlotte, under the same management, has also run all the same films with the exception of "Life Dances On."

One Theatre in Philadelphia Devoted to Foreign Films

The Philadelphia area has but one theatre devoted entirely to foreign films. This is the Studio, in the mid-town area, which was formerly known as the Europea.

There are quite a few houses which show foreign language pictures mixed in with their showings of American product.

Theatres and Cities

The following list presents, alphabetically, the names of the theatres and the communities they serve, in which foreign language films are shown. When no foreign language is specifically mentioned, product from more than two countries is shown.

U. S. LISTS 388 NEGRO THEATRES, AN INCREASE OF 156 IN TWO YEARS

Motion Picture Theatres Operated Exclusively for Negroes in 28 States, 175 Cities; Florida in Lead with 39 Houses

The United States Government reports 388 all-Negro motion picture theatres operating in 175 cities in 28 states. This is a 67 per cent increase in two years, since the last count was made, in April, 1937, when 232 Negro film houses were checked by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and listed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on April 24 of that year.

The 388 all-Negro houses are far insufficient from the standpoint of seating capacity to serve the country's 12,000,000 Negro population, representing one house for every 21,000 Negroes. It must be remembered, however, that seats are available to Negroes in most theatres.

The new list was prepared in the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce with the cooperation of the Specialist on Negro Statistics of the United States Census Bureau, and Sack Amusement Enterprises, of Dallas, largest distributor of Negro pictures in the country.

States where all-Negro theatres are not operated, according to the Census Bureau report, are as follows:

ARIZONA — NEVADA
CONNECTICUT — NEW HAMPSHIRE
DELAWARE — NEW MEXICO
IDAHO — NORTH DAKOTA
IOWA — OREGON
INDIANA — RHODE ISLAND
MAINE — SOUTH DAKOTA
MASSACHUSETTS — UTAH
MINNESOTA — VERMONT
MONTANA — WASHINGTON
WISCONSIN

Not a single all-Negro theatre was listed for any of the six New England states. The Northwest, too, is practically without any.

The 388 theatres in the 28 states line up as follows:

State	No. of Cities	No. of Theatres
ALABAMA	11	15
ARKANSAS	3	3
CALIFORNIA	2	7

LIBRARY COLLECTION HAS 1,000 FILMS

Some 300 films have been added to the National Film Library of the British Film Institute during the past nine months. The Library now has in its collection over 1,000 films with a total footage of more than 2,000,000 feet.

The National Film Library of the British Film Institute is one of the original members of the International Federation of Film Archives. Other members are the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Cinematheque Francaise in Paris, and the Reichsfilm-archiv in Berlin. Though some of the other Archives may have more footage than Great Britain, the National Film Library has the finest collection in the world of pre-war films, and on a number of occasions copies of some of this unique material has been supplied at their request to other Film Archives.

Sees Savings in Group Insurance

The reduction of overhead costs, under group insurance, would immediately save the average exhibitor about 24 per cent of the cost of his liability insurance, Arthur Pelterson, of the office of Mitchell May, Jr., New York insurance brokers to the trade, said this week. Mr. Pelterson, who is proposing a new group insurance plan to New York Allied and the New York Independent Theatre Owners, claims also that the added interest that the exhibitor would take in an insurance plan of which he had a direct knowledge would further reduce the cost of liability insurance; in fact, Mr. Pelterson thinks that, within a short time after a group insurance plan began operation, the exhibitor would find his liability insurance rates cut by "fully one half."

Provides for "Service Company"

"Only, the plan will not function without complete cooperation," he warned, "and with two to four hundred theatres in it."

The plan, which is an outgrowth of the new rate increases nationally, would provide for a service company, "not an insurance company," to which the exhibitor would pay his premiums, and which would buy his insurance as part of a group. Any accumulations above cost of premiums and operation would be refunded to the exhibitor pro-rata.

"The insurance company dollar for liability insurance is split into 49 per cent for overhead and 51 per cent for losses," Mr. Pelterson explained. "I feel that if a group of theatre owners would get together, they could have an organization that would function just as efficiently as an insurance company. And the cost of the organization, including necessary reinsurance (excess coverage over heavy losses), will not exceed 25 per cent of the premium dollar. Thus the exhibitor starts off with a saving of 24 per cent.

Furthermore, insurance companies must get rid of their claims quickly, because they have to post reserves against any unsettled claims; therefore they pay ten, twenty-five, fifty dollars for a great many claims just to get rid of them; whereas a self-insured group could ignore those nuisance claims and save money."

"A great many of those nuisance claims," he elaborated, "are rackets; and, if you fight them, the people advancing them will drop the cases because the cost of fighting for them in court is greater than the claims.

"Furthermore, if the theatre owner is carrying his own insurance, so to speak, he will keep his place in better shape and train his employees properly, to see that people do not get hurt, and how to act if they do."

Sees Lower Rates

Insurance companies would take heed of the new plan, Mr. Pelterson asserted.

"It will make the underwriters realize that increasing the cost of liability insurance is not the solution to the problem, but that there must be closer cooperation between the exhibitor and the insurance company for the elimination of accidents and the efficient settling of claims. And when the trend to self-insurance becomes wholly evident, theatre owners will find their rates on a downward trend."

The rates in New York City amount now to about 71 cents per seat, Mr. Pelterson pointed out; and next year may be one dollar per seat. The National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, which fixes liability insurance rates, lately increased the rates in New York City from 11 to 18 cents per 100 admissions. This excepts the borough of Richmond. The rates were also raised elsewhere.

Pioneer Work of George Eastman Cited

In discussing fire prevention in the motion picture industry before the tenth annual convention of the Greater New York Safety Council, at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, A. F. Sulzer, vice president and assistant general manager of the Eastman Kodak Company, outlined the history of film manufacture. In a story in MOTION PICTURE HERALD reporting Mr. Sulzer's remarks, it was stated that he traced the making of film "from the time Thomas Alva Edison began the manufacture of dry plates." The reference of course should have been to George Eastman.

Artists on "Hotel" Ads

Twentieth Century-Fox has engaged nationally famous illustrators to do the art work on the advertising campaign of "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," slated for release early in the new season. Contributing to the campaign will be Bradshaw Crandall, George Petty, McClelland Barclay and John LaGatta.

High Budget Films In Britain—Wallis

Warner Brothers may begin production of high budget pictures at the company's British studio at Teddington in a change of foreign production policy now under consideration, Hal Wallis, executive producer for Warners, said Monday on his arrival in New York on the Normandie. Warners produce about 26 quota pictures a year in England.

Mr. Wallis conferred with Sam Sax, head of the company's British production activities, while in England. He was abroad nine weeks with Mrs. Wallis, the former screen comedienne, Louise Fazenda. Mr. and Mrs. Wallis left Monday for the coast.

"Spy" Doing Well

Mr. Wallis said that "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" was doing exceptional business in France, England and several other European countries. The film will wind up with a profit, he said, and has encouraged Warners in making a second feature of similar theme.

The Teddington policy, Mr. Wallis said, will be the making of multiple quota pictures, probably five as a minimum for the new season, each utilizing Hollywood stars and players and each with budgets comparable with top Hollywood films. The Warner staff abroad is looking forward to the impending visit of Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production.

Foreign audiences, he said, are highly responsive to biographical films, and several outstanding properties in this classification will be made at Teddington and Burbank.

Also arriving from abroad Monday on the Normandie were Herbert Wilcox, Arthur Hornblow, paramount producer and his wife, Myrna Loy, and Elsa Lanchester, wife of Charles Laughton.

Mr. Wilcox arrived from a brief visit in England during which he arranged to produce "Bonnie Prince Charlie" in Scotland, beginning late in August. He was greeted at the pier by S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director of RKO; Ann Neagle, who will star in the picture, and William Boehnel, film editor of the New York World Telegram.

Mr. Hornblow reported that French pictures are increasing in popularity in the Scandinavian countries to such an extent that they threaten to displace Hollywood's "B" product.

Miss Lanchester, en route to Hollywood to join her husband, who is working RKO's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," said she would return with him to England early in October to make "The Admirable Crichton" there for Paramount.

Ten More Manufacturers Sign

In addition to 27 manufacturers previously signed to sponsor novelties based on characters in Max Fleischer's forthcoming feature length color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," contracts have been closed by Paramount with 10 other manufacturers.

They are Brian Fabrics, Phoenix Manufacturing Company, Eagle Pencil Company, J. Chein and Company, Cyrus Clark Company, Stereouve, S. R. Leon, Inc., Whitney Manufacturing Company, Wira Company and Famous Music Corporation.

Polish RCA Licensee

The Polskie Zaklady Filmore Company has contracted to use RCA Photophone ultra-violet recording equipment. The agreement includes recording, re-recording and reproducing equipment.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Ruler of the Seas

(Paramount)

Maritime Adventure

Not just "another sea picture," but the kind of sea picture that Frank Lloyd has been anxious to make since he completed "Mutiny on the Bounty" is the simplest yet most complete advance description we can give of Paramount's forthcoming "Ruler of the Seas." In it the man, who in recent years passed from "Mutiny" to "Maid of Salem," "Under Two Flags" and "Wells Fargo" to "If I Were King," will tell story of the last days of sailing vessels as the only medium of oceanic transportation and the first days of the steam propelled ocean liners. The authentic historical facts upon which the melodramatic human interest story is founded will be used to the full value. But in the sustaining theme, showmen may be assured there will be found all the romance, drama, action, suspense, spectacular expression of those theatric elements that reflect man's courage, refusal to admit defeat and determination to triumph over the most discouraging handicaps.

Mr. Lloyd's record is known. All but one of his recent pictures have been Box Office Champions. Of the three writers who prepared the story, Talbot Jennings, who was associated with "Mutiny," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Good Earth" and "Marie Antoinette," is probably the best known although Richard Collins helped on the "In Old Chicago" story. Thus in the writer-director combination there is a promise that this subject will be one of more than usual entertainment and exploitation value.

For name values, Mr. Lloyd broke a long standing custom and went to England for two of his leading personalities and engaged the services of Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyffe. Neither are unknown quantities. They appeared together in "To The Victor." Miss Lockwood has since been seen in "The Lady Vanishes" and with Shirley Temple in "Susannah Of The Mounties." For the other principal roles, Mr. Lloyd lined up Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as the hero and chose George Bancroft and Montague Love for the main heavy roles. There will be 56 supporting speaking parts and the list of players assigned includes David Torrence, Vaughan Glaser, Lester Matthews, Ivan Simpson, Olaf Hytton, Pierre Watkin, William Haade, Leonard Mudie, Wade Boteler and Lionel Belmore.

The picture is one of those high budget affairs. It was allotted a four month shooting schedule and this has been extended. During filming technical and photographic crews made trips to England and the Atlantic seaboard. Two old vessels were re-rigged for the installation of steam power and John Shaw's engines were rebuilt from the original specifications. Weeks were spent filming seascapes on the nearby Pacific and in the studio settings authentically reflecting the background of a century ago were constructed. The storm scenes, occurring early and late in the production, having been seen by the writer, may be described as fully as vivid as those which were a sensational part of "The Hurricane" or "Captains Courageous."

Release date: November 24, 1939.

(MGM)

Comedy

No attempt will be made herein to list the long list of gags, jokes, characterizations, situations or the wholesale lots of bizaare and hilarious comedy that will be parts of "A Day at the Circus." Suffice it to say, it will be a Marx (Groucho, Chico and Harpo) Brothers picture and the type of amusement they concoct is well known. For other names the show will make available those of radio star Kenny Baker now appearing in "The Mikado," Florence Rice, Nat Pendleton, Margaret Dumont, midget Gerard Marenhi and Eve Arden. Additionally there will be an entire circus complete from menagerie to bands, clowns, trapeze performers and sensational acts in which some of the world's foremost big top artists will be featured.

The title tells some of the story but not all. In accordance with the stars' customs, it will have a crazy quilt pattern, all of which should be the basis for hysterical merriment with the real side-splitting socks coming in the last reels when Newport's swank society is presented with a wild and wooly circus instead of the symphonic concert it had been lead to expect.

Being made under the production supervision of Mervyn LeRoy with Eddie Buzzell, a specialist in comedy material directing, the dance extravaganzas and lavish musical numbers built around singing Kenny Baker were arranged by Bobby Connolly. The music and lyrics were composed by Yip Harberg and Harold Arlen who contributed to "Golddiggers of 1937" and "Artists and Models."

Girl from Rio

(Monogram)

Musical Melodrama

Music, murder, mystery and menace are the entertainment elements being woven into "Girl From Rio." A Mexican musical star, about to embark on a South American tour, learns that her brother has been arrested in New York City for murder. Throwing her career to the winds, the girl, joining her sister-in-law, journeys to the site of the crime to track down the real killer. In New York, where a swank night club brilliantly provides the principal background, the musical girl gets an entertainer's job with the club's owner whose guilt she suspects. Ensues a complicated series of relationships, interluded with music, before, under the spur of jealousy, the heroine is given a tip that confirms her suspicions. It leads to the arrest of the club owner-killer and firebug, after which the star, wedded to her manager, with her brother reunited to his wife, picks up the heroine's career again.

Movita will be seen in the title role. Her support includes Warren Hull, Alan Baldwin, Kay Kinaker, Clay Clement, Adele Pearce, Soledad Jiminez, Richard Tucker Dennis Moore and Byron Foulger.

Last number in the series which E. B. Derr has produced for Monogram on the 1938-39 schedule, "Girl From Rio" is based on an original screen play by Milton Raison and John T. Neville. Lambert Hillyer is directing.

Release date: August 14, 1939.

Chicken Wagon Family

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

It should be welcome news to exhibitors and theatre goers that in "Chicken Wagon Family," the long planned departure in type of story material and characterization for Jane Withers has been effected. In this picturization of Barry Benefield's popular novel for which Viola Brothers Shore prepared the screen play the two year box office leader will reach a new milestone in her career. While her madcap comedy antics will have a place in the scheme of things, her erstwhile specialties will be subordinated to a dramatic characterization. She will be seen as the youngest member of an itinerant Mississippi River Valley French-American trading family. With her father, she forms a happy go lucky team thoroughly enjoying their gypsy life. But when her mother and older sister prevail upon them to settle down in New York and start a new mode of living, the adventures which befall the family while exciting and hilarious also have a human interest and emotion stirring quality.

To mark the transition in the young star's career, 20th Century-Fox has given her the benefit of an unusually strong supporting cast. Leo Carrillo who was with Miss Withers in "Arizona Wildcat" will be seen as her father, with Spring Byington and Marjorie Weaver, last in "Young Mr. Lincoln" as mother and sister. Kane Richmond who was in "Return of the Cisco Kid" will share the romantic lead with Miss Weaver.

Herbert I. Leeds who handled "Return of the Cisco Kid" is directing.

Release date: Not set.

Desperate Trails

(Universal)

Action Adventure

To begin this news series of pictures, which Albert Ray will both produce and direct and in which Johnny Mack Brown will be starred, Universal has chosen a story which, in compast fashion, will include all the thrills characteristic of serials.

Following a long practiced and popular formula the Andrew Bennison original screen play which is the story basis of the production, will concern itself with the adventures of a carefree young peace officer whose quick wit, nimble brain and speed on the draw made him the dread of lawless elements in the old west. Mysterious raids by outlaws, stage coach hold-ups and cattle rustlings will provide the action background as the schemes of a pair of supposedly respectable citizens play havoc with the fortunes of the residents of a little frontier cowtown. Their success is great until they start to fool around with the land of the girl whom the hero happens to love.

For names in addition to Brown, who during his screen career has been identified with westerns, "Desperate Trails" will offer the singing cowboy of the screen and radio, Bob Baker, also Fuzzy Knight, Frances Robinson, whose latest picture is "Modern Cinderella," 12-year-old Bill Cody, Jr., Russell Simpson, Clarence Wilson, Ed Cassidy and Charles Stevens.

Release date: To be determined.

Of every woman, it asks...

EXHIBITORS WOULD AID IN SEARCH FOR TALENT

Production Unit Would Have Franchises with Theatres in U. S. and Abroad for Tests

A nationwide search for potential screen talent, possibly extending to Canada, Mexico and South and Central America, is part of a new formulated plan which would feature the winners in a film made annually under the possible guidance of, and released through, one of the major film companies, and, in addition, create sources of new talent for all companies.

Letters Sent to Executives

Letters outlining the plan in some detail have been sent to 40 leading film executives, in New York and Hollywood, and to Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, by Alexander Markey, former Universal editor and producer, and head of Worldart Productions. With Mr. Markey on the coast, Harry Gell, former Twentieth Century-Fox manager in Austria, is handling the eastern phase of the projected plan.

Mr. Markey, who returned about a year ago from European film work, has registered the name "Discovery Pictures" at the U. S. Patent Office for use in connection with his plan. Basically, the plan consists in the organization of a production unit, "Discovery Pictures," which will "enter into franchise arrangements with specified theatres in this and other countries for an exclusive, periodical 'screen test' week," according to Mr. Markey.

Each of the franchised theatres, it is planned, will be supplied with numbered registration forms to be given to contestants, with the screen tests to follow the order of registration.

Tests at Theatres

On the stages of the franchised theatres screen tests will be conducted for approximately an hour, during which time a number of tests could be made; with these tests of local people, it is felt, doing away with the need for a second feature at that time.

Taking the tests will be traveling units, consisting of a manager-director, a cameraman-technician and a script girl. The tests will be arranged to cover the whole range of acting, from ingenue to character roles. The units will in all probability, Mr. Markey has said, use "16 mm. sound cameras to reduce the cost of operation, weight of the equipment and processing cost.

"The exposed tests will be sent to the 'Discovery' home office to be developed, printed, tabulated and screened. From these," Mr. Markey says, "the audiences in the franchise theatres will select local winners from a completely edited reel of local contestants. These winners will pass through regional semi-finals to be reviewed by a board of judges composed of men and women within and without the industry.

"All of the winners of the contest will then be included in a new story written for the purpose, from which either one or two films will be made yearly. These pictures will be used as testing grounds for new talent, will be produced on a moderate budget, and released through regular channels as a special feature attraction."

Mr. Gell points out that the possibility for local and national exploitation campaigns and publicity should be of aid to the studio or studios cooperating on the plan, to whom the talent discovered would be available.

EXHIBITORS OF 34 STATES VISIT RKO

Showmen from 34 States have been guests at RKO Radio's exhibitors' lounge in New York. The States having the largest representation are New York, 32; Michigan, 16; Texas, seven; Maryland, seven; Illinois, five; Kansas, four, and Ohio, four. Twelve foreign countries are represented on the register.

Further Realignment Of RKO Sales Staff

A further realignment of RKO sales districts was completed over the week end by Jules Levy, RKO general sales manager. The changes add the Detroit and Indianapolis branches to the midwestern district under Walter Branson, district manager, and Cresson E. Smith, western and southern division manager. With this change Nat Levy, eastern central district manager, will transfer his headquarters from Detroit to Philadelphia and will have supervision over Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Washington, in addition. Buffalo has been added to J. H. MacIntyre's northeastern district which includes, in addition, Albany, Boston and New Haven.

RKO will hold a United Kingdom sales convention in London on August 10th at the Trocadero. Branch managers, sales managers and salesmen of the RKO English branches, as well as March of Time and Walt Disney representatives, will be present.

Ralph Hanbury, RKO's managing director in London, sailed for that city Friday after attending the company's sales convention at Rye, N. Y.

Life of Father Duffy

Twentieth Century-Fox is planning to start production shortly of a film based on the life of the late Reverend Francis P. Duffy, Chaplain of the 165th Regiment (old 69th New York National Guard) during the World War.

Jordan, Murray Tour

James Jordan, of the Universal contract department, and Tom Murray, branch operations assistant to William Scully, the company's general sales manager, have been touring the company branches.

H. G. Knox Quits As Erpi Officer

Harry Gard Knox, engineering vice-president of Electrical Research Products for the past nine years, resigned Wednesday on the advice of his physician to take a year's rest, during which he will, however, be retained by Erpi as a consultant.

Mr. Knox, who graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1906, was in the service 18 years. He received a degree of Master of Science in naval architecture from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, later the degree of Master of Science in electrical engineering from Union College. At the end of the war he resigned the rank of commander.

In 1926 he joined the Vitaphone Corporation, organizing a service department for Western Electric sound systems in theatres. When Western Electric formed its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, in 1927, Mr. Knox became service manager. Soon thereafter he went to London to become managing director of Western Electric in England.

Returning in 1929, Mr. Knox became a vice-president in charge of the Hollywood office, then upon the death of J. J. Lyng in 1930, he was transferred to New York as vice-president in charge of engineering.

Patel Purchasing Equipment For Bombay Sound Studio

A. J. Patel, who is organizing Central Cinema Industries, of India, is in Hollywood purchasing equipment for a $1,500,000 two sound stage studio to be erected in Bombay and a modern air-conditioned laboratory which will cost $125,000 and have a capacity of 75,000 feet daily. The laboratory will be opened before the end of the year while the studio will start operating next June. Western Electric equipment will be used in the studio.

Central Cinema plans to produce 12 features and a series of scenic short subjects, designed for the world market. Mr. Patel will also install scenario, art and research departments, which, he said, have not been used to date by native producers although 200 features were made in India in the past 12 months. Mr. Patel said that he would send six native technicians to Hollywood in September to study its methods. He is on a six months trip and has already studied production methods in Germany, France and England.

Richard Ettelson Dies

Richard ("Dick") Ettelson, operator of seven houses in New Jersey, and well known in Northern New Jersey, and New York, exhibition circles, died of heart failure on Tuesday morning, at his home in Passaic, New Jersey, aged 46. Funeral services were held Wednesday, from his home, attended by many local exchangemen and exhibitors, and by executives of the Fabian circuit. He leaves three children. He was a brother-in-law of Si Fabian, head of the circuit of that name.

Henry Morrison is the new film editor of the Indianapolis Times, succeeding James D. Thrasher, transferred to the city staff.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Heart of London

Plans of producer Josef Somlo to weave a film tapestry of contemporary Britain are in full process. Work upon "A Window in London," a picture with an essentially London setting and designed to recreate in narrative form the personality and atmosphere of London against authentic city backgrounds, has concluded production.

Work is currently in full swing at the Denham Studios on "On the Night of the Fire," which is a story of ordinary folk against a background of industrial Newcastle. Ralph Richardson plays the part of a North country barber, frustrated and embittered by his life, whilst Diana Wynard plays his wife. Exteriors have been shot already in Newcastle.

Third of the trilogy is "The Arsenal Stadium Mystery," which goes into production immediately and aims to put on to the screen the highly popular British Association football. Action is laid almost exclusively on the world famed Arsenal ground at Highbury during a match between the Arsenal and another team. Numerous members of the Arsenal eleven have been signed up for the film as well as Club manager, George Allison, and trainer Tom Whittaker. A speed-up of production is aimed in order to have the film ready for release by the start of the football season next September.

All three films are to be handled in Britain by General Film Distributors.

Mare Nostrum

A topical subject—trouble in the Mediterranean—is in production at the Associated British Studios, Elstree, under the title of "On Guard in the Mediterranean," action of which takes place in one of Europe's danger spots. The story is woven around three warships, British, French and Russian all in the harbor at Tangier.

Penelope Dudley Ward has been assigned a leading role in the film, and Harold Huth is to direct.

Keeping to his policy of having three leading ladies instead of one in his films, Stanley Lupino has added Antoinette Cellier to the cast of "You're Lucky to Me," currently on the floor at Elstree. The cast is already graced by Barbara Blair and Phyllis Brooks. Others in the film include Bruce Seton, David Hutcheson, Gene Sheldon and Geoffrey Sumner. Thomas Bentley is directing.

Horse Comedy

Reproduced with the aid of copious blueprints and architects' plans, a replica of a British racing stable has been built at the Ealing Studios for the George Formby comedy "Come on George."

Fresh from Newmarket six well groomed race-horses, loaned by Captain Younghusband's stables, and genuine dyed-in-the-blue stable boys from the racing headquarters, added realism to the scene.

Meanwhile a camera unit has been filming in the Amusement Park at Southend, securing material for use in the fairground sequences of the film.

To follow "Come on George" in ten days' time is "Goodness, How Sad," in which Robert Stevenson is to direct Clive Brook and Anna Lee.

FILMS NEW VOCATION FOR RETIRED POLICE

A new metier for retired police officers is opened up by Detective Inspector Jack Henry, retired from the Metropolitan police force in January after 25 years' service, who has entered British film production as an expert on police detail. He is now working on "A Bullet in the Ballet", mystery drama which is to go into production at the Ealing Studios under the production aegis of Michael Balcon sometime in August. Walter Forde will direct.

Inspector Henry is to ensure that British film detectives and British police station sets are true to life.

Four for Buchanan

Jack Buchanan, musical comedy idol and producer-star of British films, returns to active production this year with a programme of four pictures to be made at the Riverside Studios, Hammersmith.

First of these is a comedy drama inspired by the Territorial Army and with a Territorial setting. The title is "Be Prepared," and Jack Buchanan will himself star. John Mills is under contract to Buchanan and will appear in the first of the series.

Lockwood Returns

Back from her Hollywood spell Margaret Lockwood, twenty-one-year-old Gainsborough star, has arrived in England and is to go into production immediately, starring in the picture version of A. J. Cronin's "The Stars Look Down" being produced by Grand National. She has been loaned to Grand National by Gainsborough.

On the completion of this film Margaret Lockwood will go to Scotland with Will Fyffe —also due back from America soon—and Michael Redgrave, to play in the color production of "Rob Roy," which is to be made in the Trossachs, noted Scottish beauty spot.

Market Setting

A reproduction of London's celebrated Caledonian cattle market, which two days a week becomes London's open air junk store, has been set up at the M. P. Studios, Elstree as a setting for the British National film "Mr. Walker Wants to Know." Syd Walker, star of the radio feature "Band Wagon" is, of course, star of the film and to support him are Jean Gillie, Wally Patch, Jack Barty and Peter Gawthorne. John Baxter is to direct and John Corfield will produce.

Lang Play Set

The famous Matheson Lang play "Chinese Bungalow" is to be filmed immediately by producer George King, and Paul Lukas, presently holiday-making at Cannes, is returning to England to play the role of the millionaire Chinese merchant, Yuan Sing. Co-starring with Lukas will be Robert Douglas as Richard.

The unit is to start work shooting exteriors on the Thames at Shepperton, where a replica of the native village of Saru is to be built. Interiors will be shot at the British Lion Studios at Beaconsfield. Release will be through British Lion.

Zampi's Next

Shooting has concluded at Sound City on the ambitious Paramount British production "French Without Tears" and Ray Milland, star of the film, has returned to Hollywood.

Following "French Without Tears" Mario Zampi, producer of that film, is to produce and direct "Live and Let Live," in which Douglas Wakefield, British provincial comedian, is to star.

Anatole de Grunwald, who is working on the script of the film, has a play of his running in the West End, which had a great provincial success; it is titled "Bridge of Sighs."

Westminster Dawn

In the early hours of a June morning an Ealing Studio film unit set to work outside the British Houses of Parliament filming location exteriors for the Michael Balcon film "Young Man's Fancy."

The film is set in the 1870's and in the deserted streets of Westminster, for a brief hour or two, horse-drawn buses, landaus, ladies in bustles and gentlemen in side whiskers, passed in constant procession before the more modern motor buses and hurrying city workers came pouring into London.

Loder to Star

John Loder, British player, is to have the leading role in RKO Radio's "Archer Plus Twenty" which John Paddy Carstairs—director of "The Saint in London"—is to direct under the production aegis of William Sistrom. An all British production unit is to be employed.

Shooting has concluded on the Tommy Trinder comedy "She Couldn't Say No," which Graham Cutts has been directing at the Associated British Studios, Elstree.

Working at the Ealing Studios is Jack Jones, Welsh miner-author whose play "Rhondda Roundabout" has created considerable interest. He is at work on the script of "David Goliath," the Paul Robeson picture to be directed by Pen Tennyson.

Production has been concluded at the Gainsborough Studios, Islington, on the Twentieth Century Production "Inspector Hornleigh on Holiday."

SEC Reports Stock Changes

Acquisition in May of 1,000 shares of Paramount Pictures common stock by John D. Hertz, New York, director, was reported Thursday by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly summary of the transactions of officers and directors in the securities of their corporations.

The acquisition represented Mr. Hertz' entire holdings of that class of stock direct, the report showing that he held another 100 shares through Lehman Brothers.

The only other filmstock transactions reported were the acquisition of 200 common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation by Nathan J. Blumberg, New York, president, representing his entire holdings, and 500 certificates by Daniel M. Sheaffer, Philadelphia, director, bringing his holdings to 17,500 direct and 26,500 through Standard Capital Company.

Reports of persons becoming officers and directors in corporations showed that Allen P. Kirby, Jersey City, held 2,100 shares of Pathe common direct, 1,000 shares through holding company "A," 900 shares through holding company "B" and 600 shares in trust when he became a Pathe director April 25th and Aquila Giles, New York, held 200 shares of Trans Lux common when he became an officer January 1, last.

Seek New Receiver For Fox Theatres

The Trust Company of Georgia, $400,000 creditor of Fox Theatres Corporation, this week asked John C. Knox, federal judge, in an application filed in the United States district court in New York, to restrain consummation of the plan of liquidation of Fox Theatres and to remove Milton C. Weisman and Kenneth Stenreich as trustees pending hearings on objections to the accounting filed by Mr. Weisman as receiver.

The petition, which was signed by Robert Aronstein as attorney for the trust company, asked for the appointment of a temporary receiver to replace the trustees. Judge Knox has indicated that he will appoint a referee to conduct hearings on claims of mismanagement and waste raised by creditors to the final accounting of Mr. Weisman.

Record Firm Changes Name

The American Record Corporation, Bridgeport, Connecticut, has changed its name to the Columbia Recording Corporation, to identify the concern more closely with its parent company, the Columbia Broadcasting System. H. S. Maraniss has joined the company's executive staff as assistant to the president, Edward Wallerstein.

Pathe Makes Film for King

Pathe News has made a color film of the Rumanian Pavilion at the New York World's Fair, for the special use of King Carol. Originally intended as a two-reel picture on the Fair, Pathe decided not to release it because of the feeling that the Fair was hurting theatre business in New York. The footage is also being included in a "Realism" subject, which will be released in black and white.

RCA Service Men Get Academy Test Reels

Cooperating with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in its efforts to raise the standards of sound motion picture reproduction in theatres, RCA Photophone has arranged for its field service engineers in all parts of the country to utilize the new Academy test reel for judging sound quality.

The test film was assembled by the Academy in cooperation with all the major producing studios to furnish a reliable "listening" test for speech and music, based on the current quality standards of the various studios. One section of the test reel is designed for checking the power handling capacity of amplifiers and speakers.

In the past, listening tests have usually been made with only a limited variety of film.

Small to Make Six

ASCAP Fights Adverse Moves

Continuing its policy of fighting legislation adverse to its regional operations, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have filed a supplemental bill of complaint and a motion for an injunction at Gainesville, Fla., to restrain state officials from putting the new anti-ASCAP law there into effect.

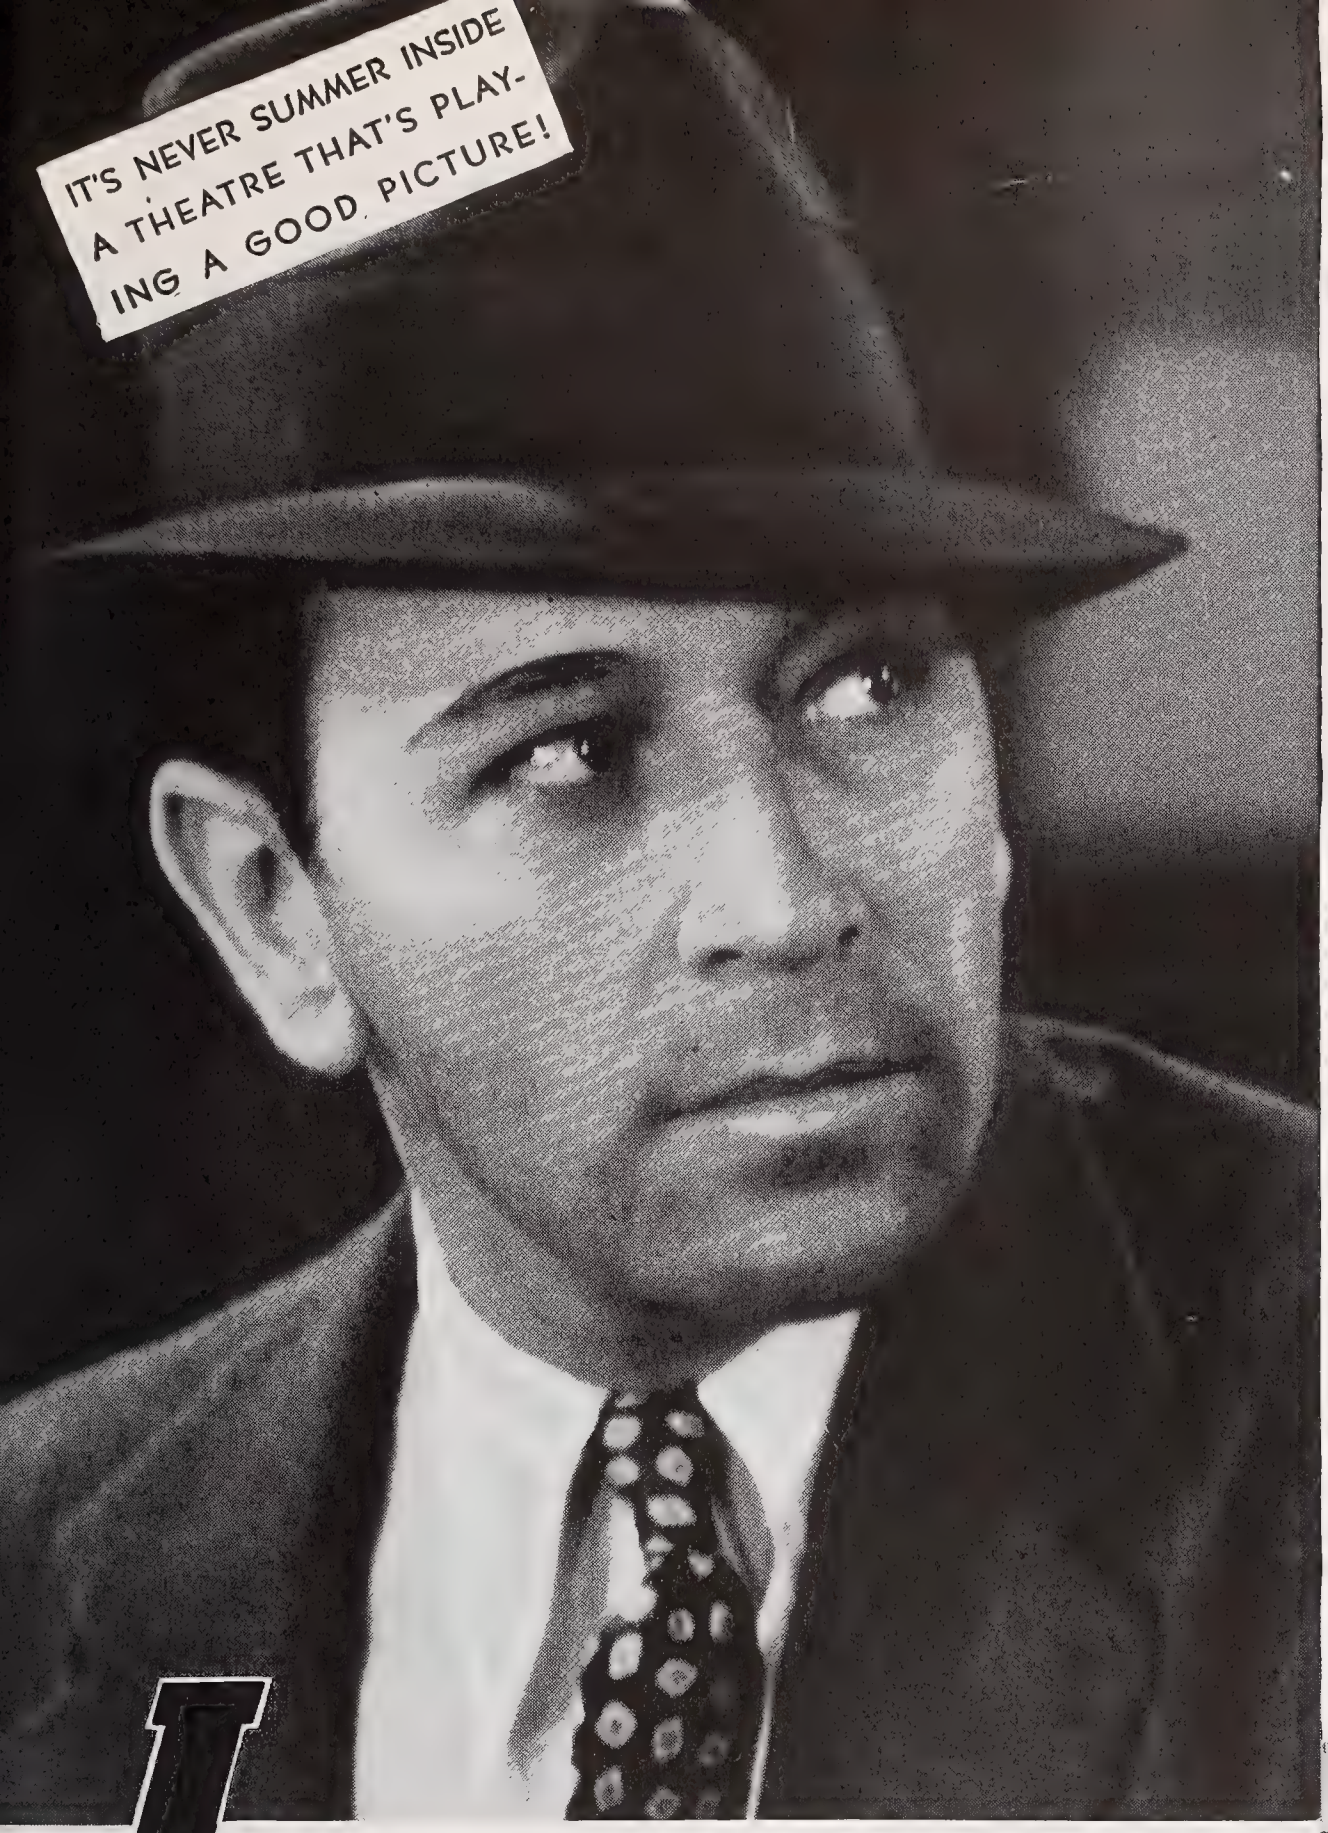
Also, the association has taken the position that North Dakota's anti-ASCAP law has made it impracticable for the society to do business in that state and since no commercial users of music will be licensed in North Dakota, none of the music in the society catalogue may be used for public performance for profit within the state. In line with this decision, ASCAP has directed radio networks to cease feeding its music to North Dakota stations.

"The broadcasters stood by and watched these legislative efforts go on for a long time," an ASCAP spokesman said this week. "Now they must be made to realize that they, too, are affected by laws which prohibit us from operating in any section of the country."

Two suits to restrain North Dakota music users from performing ASCAP music were started in Fargo recently.

Theatres Back Cleanup Drive in Kansas City

Exhibitors and other film men of Kansas City, Mo., voted this week to back the Forward Kansas City Committee, an organization whose purpose is to clean up the city. The film leaders will aid with publicity, which probably will include use of trailers.



E. C. Rhoden, head of Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., is chairman of the motion picture committee. Other members are W. E. Truog, United Artists; Jay Means, Oak Park; W. H. Hendren, Jr., United Film Ad Service; E. S. Young, Central; Arthur Cole, Paramount; Sam Abend, Film Delivery; John Wolfberg, Strand and Mokan; C. H. Mealand Named Story Editor

Richard Mealand, formerly associate editor of Good Housekeeping, has been appointed eastern story editor for Paramount. He succeeds Richard Halliday, who recently was appointed head of the company's studio story department. Mr. Mealand will share editorial duties with John Byram, who will continue as eastern play editor. They will operate under the direct supervision of Russell Holman, New York production chief.

DUTCH PRODUCTION INCREASES BUT U. S. FILMS REMAIN MOST POPULAR

Four Domestic Pictures Prove Successful; No Government Proposals for Quota Restrictions Seen Despite Agitation

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

Dutch production is going strong. After the enormous success of the Dutch picture "Pygmalion," starring Lily Bouwmeester under the direction of Ludwig Berger, Filmex has completed two more big productions, "Vadertje Langbeen" ("Daddy Longlegs"), and "Morgen gaat 't Beter" ("Better Luck Tomorrow"), with the same star, and launched them on what promise to be long runs. No foreign production, American, German or French, is offering real competition to these pictures, which were directed by Friedrich Zelnick and produced by Rudolph Meyer.

New Company Formed

Filmex, in cooperation with the City Theatre Circuit, organized a new company, Neerlandia Film, to produce "Better Luck Tomorrow," which is based on a novel by Anna Maria Selinko. The film was produced in the Cinetone Studios in Amsterdam. It opened for long first runs in City Theatre houses in Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam.

Another picture, made in the Dutch Hollywood "Filmstad," managed by Loet C. Barnstijn, was "Veertig Jaren" ("Forty Years"), dedicated to Queen Wilhelmina's forty years reign. It is not an historical picture but a melodrama telling the story of a Dutch family.

Another series of pictures dedicated to national events followed the birth of Princess Beatrix. These were short subjects, interesting chiefly as documentaries, made by the newsreel companies, Polygoon and Profilti. A three-year-old Dutch production, "Drie Wenschen" ("Three Wishes") made in Italy by a Dutch-Italian combination featuring Dutch stars, had its premiere in Amsterdam in the month of December.

Since the domestic pictures mentioned comprised the total Dutch production during 1938, it is easy to understand that the Dutch pictures do not constitute much competition for American pictures. In spite of agitation by some newspapers for protection of the domestic industry by limitation of imports, no governmental proposal of this kind is in preparation. American companies having their own branch offices here now are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 20th Century-Fox, RKO Radio, Warner Bros. and Paramount. United Artists, Columbia, Universal and Republic are represented here by agencies. The number of American productions released in Holland during 1938 was about the same as during 1937.

During 1937 32 features and three short subjects were rejected by the Dutch censors whereas in 1938 only 17 pictures were disapproved, including some German and French productions. Some decisions of the censor board, however, met with national disappointment and disapproval, for instance, the fact that RKO's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" released here in November in a special Dutch version—the Dutch and German versions were made in Amsterdam—was barred for children under 14. The decision brought protests from the Dutch RKO branch and the Bioscoopbond (Dutch Motion Picture Federation) as well as the newspapers which used the decision as a basis for attacks on the censorship system.

TOO MANY FILMS IS DUTCH PROBLEM

The problem the Netherlands are most concerned with at the moment cinematically is the overabundance of films, according to a report to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce from the American Consulate General, Amsterdam. There were 129 feature and "cultural" films that passed the National Board of Censors (Centrale Commissie voor de Filmkeuring) in the first quarter of 1939 compared with 97 in the similar period a year ago.

This decision was given the special attention of the "Bond" in a six-page article in the Federation's official organ which charged that the Board of Censorship had proved it did not know its work and that its decision ran contrary to public opinion in Holland and other countries. In a special meeting the Motion Picture Federation discussed measures against the Board of Censorship. This attitude of the Bond also is due to the fact that in spite of an existing motion picture law (Bioscoopwet) some municipalities banned some pictures by individual decision, such as "Green Pastures" in Alphen a/d Rijn and "The Road Back" in Dokkum.

Several months after the general release date on "Snow White" for Holland the board finally has agreed to certify the picture for children. Several cuts in the more "frightening" sequences were made.

Money Makers

Biggest money-making American pictures in Holland have been "Hundred Men and a Girl," "Mad About Music," "That Certain Age," "Life of Emile Zola," "The Road Back," "Victoria the Great," "Conquest," "Firefly," "Prisoner of Zenda," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Three Comrades," "Test Pilot," "Robin Hood" and "Hurricane." In recent months "Boys Town" and "Marie Antoinette" have led box office receipts.

French pictures are growing in popularity here. Pictures like "Carnet de Bal," "Quai des Brumes," "La Grande Illusion," etc., have big drawing power, especially in the key cities. French production and distributing companies are not represented, but Dutch independent distributors buy outstanding productions in France and their subsidiaries distribute these vehicles in the Dutch market.

As regards German competition UFA and Tobis have their own offices in Amsterdam releasing together about 60 pictures. UFA has its own theatres in Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague, the Dutch key cities. Most popular German stars are Zarah Leander, Heinz Ruhmann, Willy Fritsch, Lilian Harvey, Hans Moser and Hans Albers.

In spite of the fact that Germany is very near to Holland the influence of American and French productions is much greater than that of the German companies, except in the southeastern and eastern sections of the countries where films from the Reich enjoy some popularity.

A new "Ledenraad" (board of members) has been organized by the Dutch Motion Picture Federation. Distributor members are L. Cohen Barnstijn, Columbia and United Artists; H. S. Boekman, Filmtrust; J. S. Croeze, Universal; J. W. de Groot, Monopole Film; L. Katz, N. V. Netherland; F. L. D. Strengholt, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; C. van der Wilden, Polygoon, Dutch newsreel company, and G. H. Witmondt, I.F.A. Exhibitor members are Joseph van Bommel, G. M. Th. Gielisse, A. Jansen, J. ter Linden, G. J. Milius, W. P. Peters, E. Prager and R. Uges, Jr., A. Hamburger, president, and C. S. Roem, vice-president, represent the managing board of the Federation and A. de Hoop, director of the Bioscoop Bond, is secretary.

Very close cooperation between radio and the film industry exists here, and without any charge broadcasting companies broadcast music from American pictures, giving full credit to producer and theatre by radio and in their programs.

Interviews with leading film personalities are rare but Mr. Max Westebbe, manager of RKO Radio Films in Holland, made an interesting speech over one of the most important stations a short time ago. Sponsored programs are not allowed.

In general the Dutch newspapers, the leading ones included, publish regularly favorable comments on American pictures and in no country in Europe are papers as willing to publish articles on coming productions, stars and current releases. Publicity is given freely and criticisms often have big influence on box-office results. Some examples of outstanding exploitation during the past year are the releases of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in the Amsterdam Nöggerath Theatre, which run was backed by a very extensive exploitation campaign in cooperation with the premiere theatre, and the release of "Marie Antoinette" in the Metro-Alhambra Theatre, exploitation of which was effected by a big tie-up with a department store under the slogan "Fifteen Years of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer."

Attendance Improves

Business here was better than during 1937. Figures on box-office results and number of visitors during the third quarter of 1938 follow:

Amsterdam	1938	1937
Attendance	2,566,750	2,342,678
Gross receipts.....	fl. 1,074,015	fl. 1,028,401

Rotterdam	1938	1937
Attendance	1,392,748	1,238,375
Gross receipts.....	fl. 566,271	fl. 522,188

The Hague	1938	1937
Gross receipts.....	fl. 687,464	fl. 721,365

The second quarter of 1938 shows an increase equal to the same quarter in 1937 and the improvement in the mentioned key-cities was also perceptible in other Dutch towns.

An important decision has been made by the Rotterdam court in connection with cutting of a picture by a Rotterdam theatre owner. The Dutch law stipulates that theatre owners are only allowed to show pictures in a composition as approved by the Dutch censors, but the mentioned exhibitor cut a feature of 2504 meters to a length of about 1925 meters. The court decided that cutting an approved picture is not a violation of the law as after eliminating some parts the story and continuity can remain unchanged.

They Shall Have Music

(UA-Goldwyn)

Jascha Heifetz and His Violin

Not even the confident Samuel Goldwyn who persuaded the great Jascha Heifetz to make a motion picture can tell you, for sure, whether the world at large is waiting with ticket price in hand for "They Shall Have Music" to come to town. That's because the world at large has never before been offered a front seat at a Heifetz concert on a movie price scale. But even the tone-deaf among those who attended the Hollywood preview of the film can tell you that Samuel Goldwyn employed every artifice at his extensive command by way of supplying showmen with ways and means of selling tickets to "They Shall Have Music," even to the tone-deaf.

To dispose at once of the top question in exhibitor minds, Heifetz plays his violin a great deal in the picture, as much as any of his idolators could desire, and it is not news that the Heifetz way with a violin is among the rare perfections to be encountered in this notoriously imperfect world. Showmen may tell their customers that he plays with an adult symphony orchestra at his back, with a juvenile symphony orchestra clustered around him, and alone. They may also tell them that he does this while portraying himself in a story about himself and his music and their relationship to a music school for poor children. It would seem, however, that showmen would not need to do much telling to interest the music conscious members of the congregation, Heifetz being Heifetz.

To dispel whatever fears may lurk in the minds of exhibitors who remember certain painful experiences sustained with previous projects wherein concert artists have been brought within range of the common people, attention is called to the personnel with which Mr. Goldwyn surrounded Mr. Heifetz in this undertaking. Such names as Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Terry Killburn, Tommy Kelly, Marjorie Main and Gene Reynolds are quite capable of filling even a theatre situated in an area, if such there be, where music is what Harry Brandt calls box office poison. Mr. Goldwyn has made it possible for a showman unfortunate enough to possess such a theatre to omit mention of Mr. Heifetz altogether and still corral a profitable quorum.

Mr. Goldwyn has furnished plenty of exploitation material. The picture sells itself automatically to the music lover. The number and variety of school, club and institutional tie-ups available to the enterprising exhibitor are self evident. The name of Heifetz has been magical in its appeal within its special sphere for some 22 years.

The picture Mr. Goldwyn compounded for the purpose somewhat firmly stated in its title is unique in a great many respects. It starts out like "Dead End" and gets back to that key on occasion afterward. But it concerns primarily a music school for poor children, a villain who wants to take the kiddies' instruments away from them just because they aren't paid for, some valiant mothers who keep the sheriff's men from taking them until after a concert vital to the school's success, a boy who steals the Heifetz Stradivarius, another who gets arrested while trying to return it, and, finally, Heifetz' rescue of the school, his performance at the school concert and his promise to sponsor the institution from then on.

Irmgard Von Cube and John Howard Lawson cooked up the story, an obviously implausible but serviceable affair fabricated under visible difficulties, and made it seem to jell by making the individual incidents stand on their own feet. Archie Mayo directed in full sympathy with this objective and associate producer Robert Riskin's deft hand is to be observed again and again in the finished product.

To all of these gentlemen, and to the players who gave of their art to the relatively trivial acting assignments offered them, a great deal of credit is due. They made it possible for the millions to see and hear Heifetz at his best—that best which the camera presents better than the rostrum—without going to Carnegie Hall in a boiled shirt. This may or may not turn out to be, in the opinions of enough millions of people, a great service to humanity. It is, however, and unquestionably, a great job of motion picture making.

Unexpected Father

(Universal)

Opportune Comedy

Young Sandy, the young lady who made good as a very young man in Bing Crosby's "East Side of Heaven," is here to be seen again as a very young person whose present happiness and ultimate condition of domesticity is of vital concern to the players involved in this comedy, and presumably to several millions of ticket purchasers throughout this broad land. He does not have with him this time the lyric Mr. Crosby, but he, which is to say she, does have alongside Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe and Shirley Ross as comrades in entertainment. It is to be reported, without lese majesty to any of these, that Master Sandy is without debt to his support for the substantial response to his histrionic endeavors accorded him at the Hollywood preview of his second cinematic enterprise.

It is of record that Universal sprinted to the finish line with Master Sandy's second vehicle. That was what a showman would have had Universal do. Associate producer Ken Goldsmith, director Charles Lamont and the writers of the screen play, Leonard Spigelgass and Charles Grayson, sprinted likewise, but adroitly concealed symptoms of haste. The result is a screenworthy and audience-qualified piece of entertainment fashioned to fit the requirements of exhibitors and public.

"Unexpected Fathers" is adequate, timely, not terrific. It furnishes showmen an appropriate picture to proffer the customers now. That is its major virtue. It has no vices.

Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever

(MGM)

Love Comes Again to Andy Hardy

Probably nobody, including the overlords of the House of MGM, expected to extract from the Hardy Family setup a picture equal to "Love Finds Andy Hardy," but here is just that thing. "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" brings a new kind of love to Andy, the love of an adolescent schoolboy for his teacher, and the result is the kind of picture that makes the biggest theatre seem too small, the longest run too short.

Young Mr. Rooney is as much older, in fact, as the present story requires him to be, wherefore his performance of the young man fascinated by a dramatics instructress six years his senior is proportionately riper than his headlong portrayal in "Love Finds Andy Hardy." If anyone's been nursing the idea that Mr. Rooney is just a brash kid who got a lucky break in pictures, he can let go of it now, for the young man handles this considerably more exacting assignment as only an actor bred and wedded to his art could be expected to.

The young woman of Mr. Rooney's springtime affections is played by Helen Gilbert, an extremely personable and competent actress discovered playing a cello in the MGM recording orchestra, making in this film an acting debut certain to be followed by a brilliant screen career. She is of that calm, cool type which has included such consistent players as Irene Dunne, Irene Rich, Florence Vidor and Agnes Ayres, to go back a way, a type all too rarely met with in contemporary films. Her handling of the difficult role which is her first is something for veterans to study.

"Andy's" trouble begins when "Polly" introduces a Naval officer as her father's house guest of the summer. Deprived of her society, he rebounds into complete enchantment when a substitute dramatics teacher pays him sympathetic attention. She chooses his play for class production and gives him the leading role. He progresses through all the known stages of calf love to the point of proposing marriage and suffers all the recorded pangs of boyish frustration when he learns his suit is foredoomed to failure. The passage in which the young woman straightens him out and restores his youthful ego is as fine a piece of dialogue writing and execution as the screen has seen this year.

Meanwhile, "Andy's" class has produced a play which is among the funniest incidents filmed in recent years. Meanwhile, too, "Judge Hardy" has been taken in by a pair of confidence men, carrying a number of associates with him, and has managed to take himself and them out of the difficulties accruing from this error of judgment. This is a warmly interesting and excellently played background plot eminently worthwhile in itself.

Kay Van Ripper is again responsible for the screen play, in many respects the best of the series, and this time W. S. Van Dyke II directed the production, an enviable job. The cast is uniformly excellent, the production superb.

Wyoming Outlaw

(Republic)

Western Melodrama

Similar to the story that made headlines in the newspapers a few months ago in which an outlaw held a posse at bay from his hideout in the hills, the latest Three Mesquiteers film has for its climax a like situation. Donald Barry, the outlaw in the picture, is a comparative newcomer to the Republic studio, but he has ample opportunity to render an absorbing, dramatic and deeply moving portrayal of the harassed and hunted lawbreaker. Elmo Lincoln, one time top favorite of the serial and western fans, makes his reappearance after a long retirement.

The Mesquiteers, John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Raymond Hatton, after seeking shelter from a dust storm discover that one of their steers has been slaughtered and carried away by a man on foot. Investigation reveals that the rustling was done by "Will Parker" to get food for his family. A corrupt government, headed by "Balsinger," is running the town. The Mesquiteers go to "Balsinger's" office and a fight ensues for which "Balsinger" has "Stoney," "Tucson" and "Rusty" jailed pending a government investigation. Witnesses, afraid of "Balsinger" and his men, fail to testify at the investigation. "Will Parker" attempts to steal some livestock from the government grazing ground but he is detected and flees into the hills. Eluding the sheriff and his men he doubles back to town and corners "Balsinger" in the local bank. The citizens of the town hearing that "Will" is in the bank arm themselves and both "Will" and "Balsinger" are killed.

In this new Mesquiteer film Raymond Hatton replaces Max Terhune and fits well. His years of acting experience stand him in good stead and he turns in an easy going and natural performance.

News Is Made at Night

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Melodrama

To substantiate the exploitation value of the title, good use is made of almost every item in the photoplay construction catalogue in "News Is Made at Night." The plot is topical stuff. Mainly it concerns the unmasking of a master criminal and ex-convict, who has posed as civic leader and business man, by a dashing newspaper editor and girl reporter, who meanwhile save a condemned man's life. As the theme builds to its surprise denouement, there is a well balanced mixture of mystery, love interest, comedy and action.

With Preston Foster featured as a law and order crusading editor, the show presents Lynn Bari as a country girl reporter who storms the gates of metropolitan journalism, to be alternately hired and fired before she wins recognition and romance. While this pair have a finger in all the goings on, the show's comedy content is competently taken care of by Russell Gleason, George Barbier and Eddie Collins. Similarly its melodrama is ably developed by Minor Watson, Charles Halton, Paul Harvey, Paul Fix and Paul Guilfoyle.

Producer Sol M. Wurtzel and his aide Edward Kaufman apparently granted John Larkin and Alfred Werker liberal license in writing and directing the piece and the result is an entertaining combination of thrills and comedy. Headline hunter "Drum" gets himself into pecks of trouble trying to prevent reporter "Maxine" from joining his staff, meanwhile trying to save the life of a condemned man, "Randall" whom he believes to have been unjustly convicted, and breaks up a crime ring that has been bleeding the city white. Together "Drum" and the girl become involved in all manner of melodramatic misadventures. Yet the suspense of their danger is compenstated for by the comedy which "Hockman," "Clanahan" and "Billiard" create. Eventually, as the hour for "Randall's" execution draws close and the lieutenant governor can neither be bludgeoned nor cajoled into granting a stay, "Maxine" stumbles across a clue that leads to business man "Coulton," "Drum's" best friend. When the girl confronts her quarry with the incriminating evidence, things look black for the girl, but "Drum" arrives in the nick of time, "Randall" is freed, "Coulton" jailed and hero and heroine wind up in each other's arms.

Poison Pen

(Associated British)

Village Drama

Possibly inspired by the growing commercial belief that the English films easiest to sell are those about England, Associated British, in this adaptation of a West End stage play have attempted another minor canvas of the native scene, a half section of village life and conduct, seeking, not only to etch in detail the odd personnel of the country hamlet, but to examine critically their ways of living and narrow states of mind. The picture, thus, may have some appeal outside these waters as an intentionally photographic essay, for it apes nothing either transatlantic or continental, but it is episodic and not necessarily convincing, and evidences in odd corners the hand of a non-English director. Flora Robson, known to a wide circle for her superb Elizabeth in "Fire Over England," is an additional bargaining factor. She puts over a studied and sympathetic performance in a bizarre role. Reginald Tate, however, less known beyond these shores, runs with her into first place, by his restrained and natural reading of the role of her parson brother.

The setting is, as already indicated, an English village, with its dovetailed bricks of communal architecture, its manor house and its vicarage, its shops and its inn, its post office and its gossiping housewives. Across this normally peaceful if narrow world, strikes the hand of a scurrilous writer of anonymous letters, who, by stimulus to malevolent gossip, drives a girl to suicide and provokes a jealous shopkeeper to shoot an innocent husband. The detection element, seeking the culprit, more or less threads the episodes together, with a psychological note in the climax, where it turns out to be the vicar's thwarted and neurotic sister who has done the dirty work, and which she atones for by suicide. It is at times both comic and melodramatic, emotional, religious and, finally, psychological, episodic for the most part, but despite its exaggeration and overpainting of characters, has occasional moments of life, thanks in the main to sympathetic characterization.

Though the more intelligent English audiences may not consider it a faithful recreation of the English scene, non-English audiences may persuade themselves—or be persuaded—that it is. On this, and the dramatic element, the film should have its appeal.

Should Husbands Work

(Republic)

Domestic Comedy

This is a number in the Higgins Family series. For name value it offers James Russell and Lucile Gleason, Marie Wilson, Harry Davenport, Berton Churchill, Henry Kolker.

It's old fashioned fun. The jokes, gags, situations and characters are standard material and as such provoke their proper share of laughter.

The story has to do with husband losing his job and wife getting position for which he had hoped and is fitted, in cosmetic business. Meanwhile the pestiferous grandfather is duly pestiferous, while the romantic, feather-brained son and his dizzy girl friend are as such characters are supposed to be.

They Asked for It

(Universal)

Melodrama

This is the mild sort of melodramatic film, concerning itself with the story of three young men, college graduates, who take over a small town newspaper and, in an effort to arouse lethargic townspeople and stir up circulation, play up the seemingly innocent death of the town drunkard as murder. The story takes hold and proves not to be a trumped up charge but the real thing. From there on the film follows the boys and their co-worker on the newspaper, Joy Hodges, in solving the crime.

Miss Hodges as "Mary Lou Carroll," the hometown girl, has most to do with the eventual solving of the murder. William Lundigan is "Steve Lewis," the editor, and his two college chums are respectively a lawyer, Michael Whalen, and a doctor, Thomas Beck, who have turned to newspaper work momentarily. Isabel Jewell and Lyle Talbot are also to be seen.

Woven into the story are several sequences devoted to portrayal of small town types. It is usually the case that the three impetuous newspapermen with their high pressure citified tactics are at odds with the more placid officialdom and citizenry of the town. When the murder case does go to trial the town experiences a boom with the press services covering the trial nationally, newsreel cameramen on hand and an influx of curiosity seekers. Not to be forgotten though is the romance, if but a thin thread of the whole, between "Mary Lou" and "Steve."

SHORT SUBJECTS

Rembrandt

(French Film Exchange)

Rembrandt's Paintings

The life history of Rembrandt and his works of art are compiled in this interesting subject. The short opens with a description of early Egyptian paintings and quickly progresses up to the seventeenth century. There is Rembrandt's early life as a student under some of the masters of that era, then his decision to leave them and apply his own beliefs.. Such well known paintings by Rembrandt as "The Money Changer," "The Presentation at the Temple" and the "Pilgrims at Emmaus," along with many others, are shown. The film, with English commentary, is obtainable in one or two reel versions in 16 or 35 mm. film.

Ave Maria

(French Film Exchange)

Camera Tour

A camera study of the Cathedral of Notre-Dame in Chartres, France, takes the audience first through the simple village of Chartres and then to the Cathedral with its stained glass and medieval art and architecture. In the musical background, besides instrumental classics of several composers, is the "Ave Maria" by Gounod, sung by Jenny Tourel of the Opera Comique of Paris. The short, though not A-1 in photography, should be enjoyed by those who admire art and music. The film is available in one and two reel versions. All commentary is in English.

The World of Tomorrow

(RKO Pathe)

Flushing Meadows

The once seduously avoided Flushing Meadows, former dumping grounds, and now the site of the stupendous and all-embracing New York World's Fair is the scene here for a pictorial study of Grover Whalen's "World of Tomorrow." The study is an excellent one, combining as it does superior camera work of a superior exposition. Views of the various pavilions, domestic and foreign, the transportation area, the amusement area, and the rest are all presented in a fashion designed to entertain an audience and create an interest in the Fair. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, nine minutes.

Picturesque Udaipur

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Travel Talk

The latest FitzPatrick Traveltalk takes the audience to Udaipur, India. Photographed in color, the film shows the various religious cults, how business is conducted in this ancient and primitive city, means of livelihood with certain religious groups holding animals sacred and refusing to grow crops for support. Many of this faith own vast tracts of land but have peasants of another religion do their farming for them. An interesting subject photographed in an interesting land.—Running time, eight minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 65

(Universal)

Oddities

Divided into many sections, the first deals with historical penny banks. David Hollander in New York City has one of the largest collections of these banks in the country, many of them valued at hundreds of dollars. Secondly, an enterprising group of young men have established themselves in a profitable business building cities for ants. The ants are enclosed between two panes of glass and spectators can watch their construction work from the outside. The rest of the subjects deal with a dog cemetery, a young couple of Memphis, Tenn., who shag and dance on stilts; Tony Sisti, former lightweight boxer, who has turned his hand to painting and is making a profitable living, and finally Ernest Warther of Dover, Ohio, who whittles model locomotives from wood. An interesting collection of people and facts.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

The Bear That Couldn't Sleep

(MGM)

Color Cartoon

With winter setting in, the bear gets set for his annual hibernation. His plans are thwarted first when the roof begins to leak, then when the shutters keep slamming, and to climax these annoyances the fireplace begins to explode and he catches on fire. While he is outside in a snowbank, cooling his singed fur, the door slams shut and he wrecks his home getting back in. At last, after suffering hours of insomnia, he dozes off, only to be awakened by the coming of spring. An entertaining and amusing cartoon.—Running time, nine minutes.

The Barnyard Brat

(Paramount)

Spare the Rod—Spoil the Mule

The old fashioned, common sense saying of "spare the rod, spoil the child" is given a point of barnyard illustration in this page from the pedagogical primer on how to raise the well behaved mule. The personnel of the rural family portrait concern the rambunctious Spunky and his muchly perturbed parent, Hunky. The youngster would appear to be a four-legged example of the modern progressive school of offspring rearing that holds as verboten the use of physical discipline in the development of the young. Spunky justly deserves the opprobrious titular appellation given him for he disturbs the farmyard peace with his practical and annoying child play. Finally, the residents of the barnyard gang up on him and with the assistance of his long suffering mama the mule is given a taste of his own distasteful medicine. The prescription cures Spunky of his wayward manners, at least for the time being. Despite his brat disposition, the miniature mule is still an entertaining and diabollically appealing character and should be able to afford a bit of familiar fun for any familiar gathering.—Running time, seven minutes.

Going Places, No. 64
(Universal)
Camera Tour

A three-sectional camera trip visting interesting places and facts. Taxco de Alarcon, in the Guerrero mountains of Mexico, is a small village which time and modern life has not yet invaded. Recently it has become a mecca for tourists due to its simplicity. The modern methods of clock manufacturing as compared to those of a few decades back are clearly shown in a tour of one of the largest clock factories in the country. Starting with the first assembling of parts and continuing until the final steps in regulating the finished product are clearly shown. In the Botanical Museum of Harvard University is the most famous collection of flowers and plants in the world. These flowers are made of a special glass composition and were constructed by two Bohemian workers. The beauty of the flowers and plants are preserved in the never fading material.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Devil Drivers
(RKO Pathe)
Motor Racing

A Sportscope, this takes up the case of automobile racing by presenting scenes from some of the outstanding annual races in this country and abroad. It has its quota of thrills and in its filming of an accident in the Indianapolis Memorial Day race the rather gruesome spectacle of human bodies and cars somersaulting in the air. The midget auto racers are also shown catapulting around the track cutting in on each other and usually avoiding a crash by the film on the skin of their teeth. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, nine minutes.

The Greener Hills
(MGM)
Miniature

The subject depicts the Miller family with Henry, the man of the house, ever present with new get-rich-quick ideas. First he sells a profitable business to buy a peanut farm. When he finds that there are no peanuts on the land he invests the remainder of the family's small fortune in a bee farm. Mrs. Miller, tired of the whimsical life that she and the children have been leading, revolts and lets Henry go to the bee farm while she stays on the peanut farm. Weeks later Henry returns to the family and finds that Mrs. Miller has discovered how the nuts are grown. The Miller family reunite to conduct a profitable peanut business.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Jamaica
(Paramount)
Travelogue

The romantic tropical isle of Jamaica in the West Indies is the subject of a visit by cameramen. Brought out are many interesting features of the British possession. Kingston, the capital, has a smart shopping center and elaborate government buildings. Shown also are coconut picking and husking, the sugar cane workers, picturesque rapids, old Spanish forts and the beach at Montego Bay. The subject is in color. Running time, 10 minutes.

Wotta Nitemare
(Paramount)
Popeye Cartoon

One of the best of the one-eyed sailor's animators' efforts in the Popeye cartoon series, the subject is replete with laughs, nor does the story seem so unreal or fantastic as the general run of cartoons, for it deals with nightmares. Popeye, the strong, the brave and the confident, finds himself no stronger than a baby, bullied by Bluto and sneered at by Olive Oyl. He reaches for the inevitable can of spinach and finds everything but spinach. When he awakens Popeye searches out Bluto and spanks him for reassurance. Running time, seven minutes.

Swinguette
(RKO Pathe)
Art of Dancing

In this Pathe Reelism the Arthur Murray dancing teachers meet in a New York ballroom to display their skill in group dancing. The dances all have a touch of that certain something called swing. In the order danced they are the Murray-go-round, Swedish Kloppdana and the Kokey-Kokey. It is an entertaining subject for all interested in the dance and especially those who like swing. It is to be noted, incidentally, that the dances mentioned are not of that other extreme, the "jitterbug" type. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan.—Running time, eight minutes.

Farewell Vienna
(Paramount)
Nostalgic Number

This Paragraphic subject is neither a travelogue nor a political depiction of the recently unfortunate fate of the once gay capital city of Austria. It rather presents a nostalgic concert rendition of melodies associated with that locale. However, since the number is an original composition of the conductor-composer, Frederick Feher and is given a debut treatment by way of the screen, the elastic interpretation allowed in the understanding of musical motifs would allow each listener to gather whatever melodic, political or geographical meaning he may be able to deduce from the subject's strains. As played by the 122 members of the National Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Maestro Feher, the theme of the piece alternates between soft, mellow tunes and tones suggestive of martial beats, all of which may be a depicture of the city as it was once in the gay era of waltz time and as it is now with the songs of Mars the number one pieces on the Nazi hit parade. The concert may be a bit mature and sobering for the jitterbug claques but it should prove an interesting interlude for the more serious music students and lovers of the locality.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Health for the Nation
(G.P.O.)
Documentary

Made by the G.P.O. Film Unit for Britain's Ministry of Health, this documentary, produced by Cavalcanti, and directed by John Monk, is something more than a mere statement of a propaganda case. It is in many respects an epic study of the England which preceded the industrial revolution, with all its grime and gloom, disease and decay, and a partisan glimpse of the public health services of today, and the people, towns and factories they have created. As an essay in propaganda the film will meet with criticism not so much of its effectiveness, as of its indiscriminate bid for credits. As a half section of industrial Britain past and present it is unexcelled.

Its first part, treated in a way vaguely reminiscent of "The River," with commentary written by Hugh Gray, and recited by Ralph Richardson, dramatically etches the gloom of the Midlands and the coalfields, captures in smoke climbing industrial canvasses and semi-impressionist cameos.

The latter part records the work of public health services, infant centres and the like.

It is designed with artistry, photographed with the touch of a painter and laid together by hands which know their journalism.—Aubrey Flanagan.

A-Hunting We Will Go
(Universal)
Lantz Cartune

A juvenile ghost unable to frighten Little Eight-Ball kidnaps him and takes him to the haunted house inhabited by the Ghost family. Still unafraid, the ghosts really go to town on the colored boy. Many amusing situations develop and Eight Ball flees home but still claims to be unafraid. An amusing Walter Lantz Cartune.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

FROM READERS

PUBLICITY vs. COMPETITION

To the Editor:

Enclosed is a letter that I have received from one of my customers. I agree with him. I think every manager who has to play pictures after their stories have been broadcasted, feels the same as I do, and I feel that you will be interested in a patron's letter which states his views so clearly.—Mr. Frank Miley, Jr., Granada Theatre, Napanee, Ontario, Canada:

To Frank Miley:

Perhaps you will recall that some time ago we were discussing the matter of certain movie stars appearing on the air.

At that time you were rather strongly of the opinion that these appearances seriously affected the theatre Box Office. I was rather inclined to agree with you at that time, but I have since changed my opinion.

It seems to me that much more damage has been done to theatre Box Offices in allowing plays to be put on the air before they are shown in the theatres. Many thousands of dollars are spent in advertising certain pictures but, in my own case, hearing a play on the air completely removes any desire I might have had to see the story in picture form.

There are undoubtedly certain people who might be attracted to see a picture by having heard the story on the air but, in my opinion, there are many more who feel as I do.

Honestly speaking, I think that the appearance of movie stars on the air in comedy skits or in certain stories, not adaptable to the movies, serves as a real build-up for the stars themselves and for the moving picture industry generally. We come to know them better, and the more we see or hear of a really popular star, the better we like them.

These are my own reactions as an average individual. And I really think that if movie contracts are going to exclude actors and actresses from the air, the movies themselves will suffer. The general public certainly does not like the idea of the movie companies imposing such restrictions and this is bound to show up in Box Office figures.—G. E. Gibbard, Gibbard Furniture Shops, Ltd., Napanee, Canada.

Obviously the correspondent makes an important distinction between the play on the air and the player on the air. One he sees as competition, while the other is publicity.—The Editor.

Your Chairman Talks to Himself

Boy, is it warm—or is it? Just imagine, thirty floors up in Rockefeller Center, and what good is that. Sticky, eh? Even the type keys. Sure is a day for tide-swept beaches, leafy retreats, pine-studded mountainsides. But fooey on that, Vogel. Shake the star dust out of your eyes and get to work. Go through your mail, why don't you? Lot of mail, eh? Up to your ears. That'll cool you off. Read about how the boys are doing. They're out there sweating and you sit squawking.

Okay, pal, okay. Can't a guy just——. All right, then. We'll look. Here's looking at you.

So the kids go away over the summer weekends—the Saturday club business is shot to hell. Managers don't fold up and howl, Vogel. They simply shift the club days to middle of the week. Catch on? Like the Warner boys over in Don Jacocks' Jersey division. Rudy Kuehn and Bob Paskow tell about running these shows on Tuesday and Wednesday during July and August and offer special inducements to the youngsters. Thirty Warner houses are doing it. They call it "Fun Club" with contests on the stage and other gageroos. Business is swell.

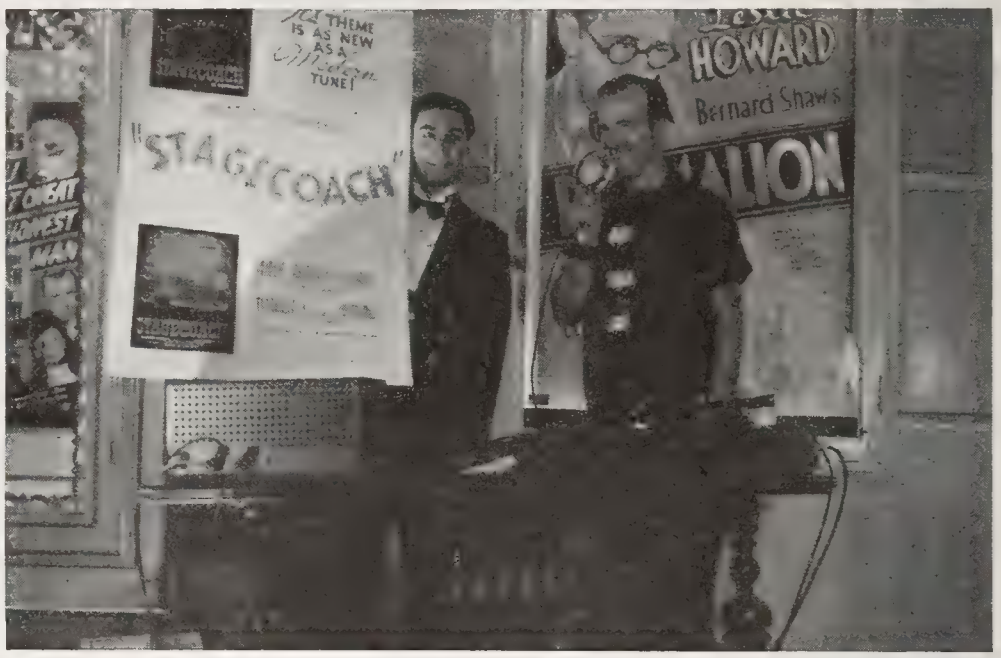
D'yuh know how it gets out in Nebraska, Vogel? Well, in Fairbury, Jimmie Redmond says he once saw a dog chasing a jackrabbit and it was so hot they both were walking. That's hot, kid. But Jim isn't sounding off about tide-swept beaches or pine-studded mountainsides. He's just worked out a summer tiein with the Chamber of Commerce to put on free shows for kids every Tuesday at the Majestic, another unit usually dark for the summer. It's swell advertising for the city. Merchants chip in so that the theatre gets 10 cents for each admission. Everyone loves it. And Redmond says the weekly take has gone up 100 bucks with little expense involved.

And what happens out in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, when visiting royalty comes to town and a parade is arranged that attracts thousands—away from the theatres? No Arctic explorer goes to the Dakotas in the summer, chum. And no Sioux Falls manager takes it on the chin looking for "leafy forest retreats", either. If you gather all your poor strength just long enough to turn to the photo layout in last week's news section, Vogel, just catch that reviewing stand in front of the Orpheum, promoted from the Committee by Manager Fred Weimar. Note the visitors, the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway, with the Governor. That brought the center of attention right down in front of the theatre and it's a cinch that, after the parade broke, plenty of folks finished up the afternoon by seeing the show. You know how those things are.

But that isn't all, chum. Manager Ralph Phillips, another Minnesota Amusement-man at the State, in the same spot, hooked his show into the doings by promoting himself a covered wagon, plentifully bannered, right on to the tail end of the parade. He worked his ears off to do that, my friend, and his bally was the only commercial in the whole thing. Their Highnesses were highly entertained. The papers said so and they mentioned the show, too.

In reporting the promotion to the home office, C. B. Stiff, district chief, wrote, "This is a stunt worth going to the Round Table." Notes John J. Friedl, "I think so, too."

Here's a letter from Joe DiPesa, pal. Joe is one of those workers who keeps going until he cracks. Bet he never worried about a pine-studded mountainside, and, if he did, DiPesa would try to figure out an exploitation stunt for the Boston Loew houses. Well, Joe has just crept out of the hospital and he's tickled pink to be able to put in a few hours a day, hot weather or no. And the old-timer says he soon will be completing his twenty-ninth year of service with Loew's.



So you're hot, Vogel. Well, you should be, but hot with gratification that your end of the deal hooks you up so closely with the real doers of the industry, the lads who get in there every day of the year to sell what they have to sell without worrying whether the mercury cracks through the bottom of the thermometer or climbs out of the top.

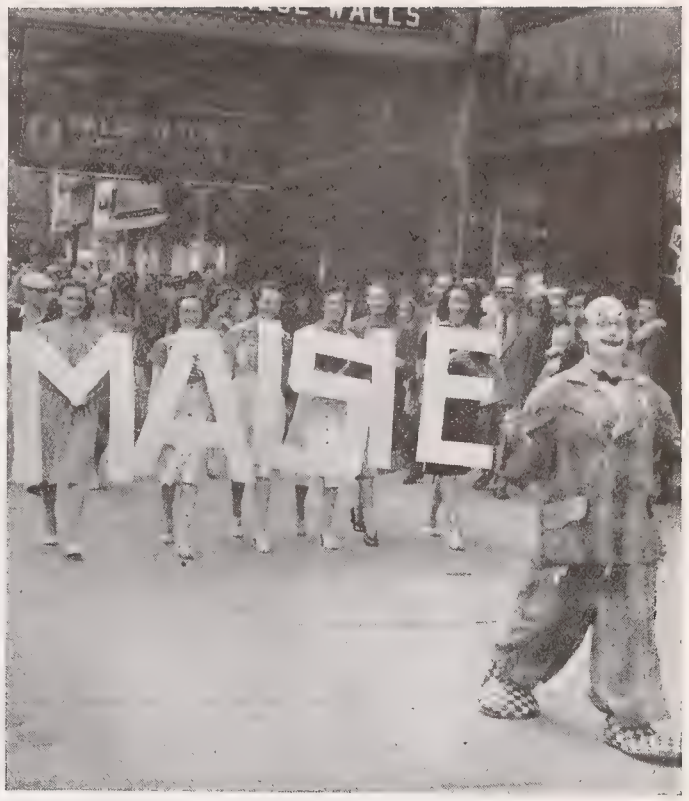
Round Table Pictures

Promoted locally was an old original schooner made in 1838 and used by Bill Harwell for his "Man of Conquest" date at the Ohio Theatre, in Canton. Permission was granted from the City officials to park the wagon overnight in front of theatre and with the drivers sleeping in it. Bally created considerable attention as was anticipated.

Above is illustrated public address system promoted locally by Dave Martin, Fox Paramount, Hollywood, for "Stagecoach" opening. Two men in attendance played recordings in lobby and plugged the picture to passersby on street in advance of opening. A 30 by 40 card, spotlighted, was set up by way of explanation. . . . Below may be seen the treatment accorded the front of the beautiful Bio Na Prikope, in Prague to sell the MGM re-releases during the summer months. Arranged by A. Lapiner, MGM publicist, slogan banner stressed the "Return of Famous Premieres."



Giant cutouts of Rogers and Astaire set in shadow box formed the basis of an attractive lobby setpiece conceived for the opening of "Vernon and Irene Castle" at the Capitol, in Halifax by Round Tabler Larry Graburn. Title letters were flittered as were frames of scene stills from the picture.

On display in the lobby of the Savoy Theatre, in Jamaica, N. Y., week ahead of opening, was the home-constructed covered wagon used by Irving Dashkin for the engagement of "'Dodge City." During run the vehicle was appropriately bannered and used for street ballyhoo, and planted in front of theatre at breaks of each show. At the right may be seen a theatre attendant with Round Tabler Dashkin viewing the scene.

With the circus in town the second day of his "Maisie" engagement, Frank Murphy at Loew's State, in Syracuse used the street bally shown above. Lad dressed as clown preceded girls about town, each of whom carried a cutout letter which spelled picture title. Stunt was planted at rush hours.

Photo at right shows participants in the "Tacky Party" contest held by P. E. McCoy at the Georgia, Athens, Ga., in connection with the Gang comedy. This is the first of a series of contests and parties instituted as a reward to under-privileged kids who take part in playground activities operated by the city and WPA workers. Children to be eligible in monthly contests must make a certain standing of merit in playground activities.

To publicize his showing of "Union Pacific" at the Lyric Theatre, in Harrison, Arkansas, D. E. Fitton promoted local American Legion for use of their 40-and-8 car which, properly bannered was driven about town and surrounding area ahead and during run of picture. For his lobby, Fitton featured an engine, exact replica of the Union Pacific which was constructed by local lad. Credit card accompanied the display which was covered by local newspapers.

OVERSEAS SHOWMEN INAUGURATE TOP TIEINS

Nationwide Campaigns Arranged by Round Tablers in France, Australia Aid Grosses

Keeping pace with the highest grade of showmanship on this side are exploitation campaigns from overseas on activities in recent months and currently reported to the Round Table for the information of readers. Evidence of these activities are outlined below principally from E. Lapinere, MGM Continental Manager, in Paris; the campaigns put over by Dorothy Flukes for Warners First National in Sydney, Australia; Mel Lawton, general manager, Prince Edward Theatre, Sydney and Hermann E. Flynn, Paramount's publicity director there and Jack Davis, managing director, Monseigneur News Theatre, in London.

Lapinere reports the highlights of a number of drives for the Continental openings in Paris on recent MGM pictures, an excellent example of his efforts illustrated by his "Test Pilot" campaign for which he arranged to have Paul Codos, the Lindbergh of France, make an introductory speech in a short film which was incorporated in all trailers and in the picture itself. The flyer in aviator outfit was shown at Le Bourget aerodrome thanking MGM for the film which so faithfully describes the life, hardships and successes of his comrades, the American test pilots.

Contest Covers 12 Provinces

National contest was planted with prizes for each of the 12 French provinces entering, questions concerning air-transport. Special collaboration was obtained from the most important local newspapers with leading air travel company devoting displays to the contest in all offices. Second contest was organized with oil company and aimed at motorists and aviators. Question to be answered here was "How much gasoline was necessary for the realization of the aviation scenes in the picture?" Here also the participating provinces received prizes for winners, cooperating merchant supplying posters for display purposes at all filling stations.

To interest children, through the sponsorship of leading toy factory, a construction set was put on the market representing the different parts of the "flying fortress" to be assembled. This novel set was featured in the toy departments of large stores and important toy shops throughout France, all advertising plugging the date.

"Patrol" Tieup Secures Wide Coverage

A national tieup was effected by Dorothy Flukes for Warners "Dawn Patrol" whereby Colgate-Palmolive-Peet distributed cardboard models of the "Dawn Patrol" plane with every tube of dental cream sold throughout Australia between the first of April and June 30th, thus covering the first release dates in each of the five capitals and the more important suburban and country territories as well. To further interest the public, Miss Flukes promoted inter-state air flights and trips to Bali and Java. Each exhibitor booking the film was asked to donate six seats to Colgate. In conjunction with the giveaway, the company presented a mammoth competition, full details of which were on the wrapper of each aeroplane given, and asked for best answers to "why I prefer Colgate dental cream." To back up the campaign, Colgate contracted for radio time on 76 Australian stations for three months. Counter cards stressing the contest were distributed to druggists all over Australia and 24 sheets were planted strategically.

To further the work, Miss Flukes organized a Civic Air Week which was opened by the Lord Mayor, entire town and shops decorated for the week. The local Aero Club offered a "Dawn Patrol" scholarship, a course in flying, leading paper carrying publicity. Each day stunt flights, formation flights, etc., were arranged.

Fight Broadcast Builds Opening

Though the opening of the Monseigneur News Theatre in London was scheduled for the beginning of March, the news that a nationally publicized prize fight would be televised in theatres on February 23rd caused Managing Director Jack Davis to rush construction so as to open the theatre in time to televise the contest on his screen.

With that well along, difficulties came about by the refusal of the British Broadcasting Company to rediffuse the fight, since it appears that the promoters owned the exclusive rights. Since Davis had expended large amounts in hastening the opening, he took the matter up with the newspapers, receiving unusual publicity in all leading dailies, which caused reconsideration of the official decision.

The resultant publicity brought sensational returns according to the Round Tabler, who took advantage of all of it by refusing to sell reserved seats, announcing that tickets would be sold only on the day of the opening at the boxoffice. He reports thousands of people lined up to gain admittance into the theatre which has a capacity of 400 seats.

Sydney Stores Feature "Zaza"

Planned by Mel Lawton and Hermann E. Flynn for the opening of "Zaza" at the Prince Edward Theatre, in Sydney was a well rounded campaign which included numerous merchant tieups. Stores featured shoe and stocking displays tied to the star, all local beauty salons were circularized with reference to the special "Zaza" coiffure affected by Colbert in the picture with the result that several shops featured this special mode of hairdressing and made displays of stills in their windows.

Leading department store cooperated by featuring a bridal frock following the fashion trend introduced in the picture and copied especially from the one worn by Heather Angel. This also was displayed in main window with due tiein copy.

All the campaigns detailed above, entered in the last Judging Period of the Quigley Awards were honored with the distinction of Fortnight Appointment.

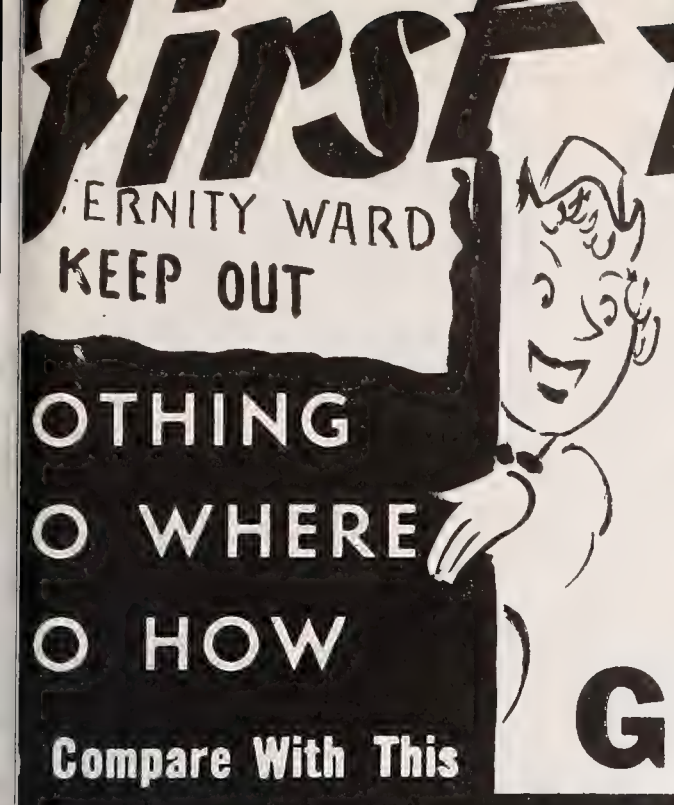
Houston-Men Tie Daily to Contest for Carhop Queen

For the uninitiated, in Texas, a "car-hop" is the curbstone waitress who jumps up on the running board of cars at drive-in food and drink emporiums, takes orders and serves them on trays which are attached to the sidedoors of the autos. Since the girls are counted among the pulchritudinous by their many admirers and since there are many popular drive-ins, especially in Houston, it was the thought of Weldon Parsons, local Interstate director of neighborhood theatres, to find the "Queen of the Car Hops" through a voting contest in the Press, the campaign aided by Bill Bell, publicity director, and staged at the Majestic Theatre by Manager Raymond B. Jones, at the midnight show, on July first.

The contest started well ahead and from June 1, the paper tied in with daily stories and occasional pictures. Vote blanks, to be filled in with the name of favored car hop, name and address of drive-in, were run daily, with cash prizes given to the girls obtaining the greatest number of votes in the hands of the judges before noon of June 29. The money was given in two classifications, beauty and popularity, $25, first, $15, second, and $10, third, in each class, the most popular chosen by vote, the beauties by applause at the midnight show.

Paper Issues Special Eight-Page Section

Frank Starz, Interstate ad head, reports high interest in the contest among the girls themselves, who kept the idea "hot" among patrons and the papers milked the tiein for human interest features. In addition, the cooperating daily went for a special eight-page section in which the drive-ins took space. Each ad carried cut of that spot's most beautiful or popular waitress. The entire section tied into the contest and midnight show at the Majestic, the theatre buying no space but landing almost all the front page and banners on succeeding pages. Merchants were assessed for prize money, the paper also contributing.



Other tieins made by the theatremen included Standard Brands hookups of window cards in all drive-ins. The ace woman reporter of the Press was induced to become a "car hop for a day" and to tell of her experiences in a series of articles illustrated with photos of the reporter in correct costume. For a finale bally, on Saturday, before the presentation of prizes, entrants took part in a foot race holding trays for the block in front of the theatre for extra prizes.

McKibbon Postcards Patrons

While vacationing here in New York, Russ McKibbon, manager of the Royal Theatre, in Guelph, Ontario, had a little heart to heart talk with the manager of his hotel. Result? Postcards mailed from there to his patrons with personal message to the effect that the theatreman while visiting in New York had seen "Only Angels Have Wings" and suggested that folks be sure to see it when it played the Royal.

A Blackboard Discussion of Newspaper Advertising

The First of An Illustrated Series By Representative Round Tabler Ad Heads

by E. A. PATCHEN

Standard Theatres, Oklahoma City, Okla.

In order to give readers an opportunity to know a bit more of the advertising theories and practices of members whose work has been illustrated here from time to time, admen in different sectors have been invited to contribute articles together with representative newspaper displays that point up their ideas.

"Pat" Patchen, advertising and publicity director, is one of the ball-carriers of the well-known Standard showmanship backfield, headed by Walter B. Shuttee, circuit general manager, and completed by Hank Harold, art head. Added support is given by an able managerial line.

Ads used as examples by Patchen and reproduced on opposite page, are identified by number and size in the text matter on this page.

Every Monday afternoon we have a round-table "skull" session in the Boss' office for the purpose of laying out our newspaper ads. But before starting to lay out the ads, we make a careful and thorough analysis of the sales angles of the picture. Local likes and dislikes are aired; good and bad points of the picture are brought to light; every possible sales angle is thoroughly discussed before roughs of the ads are penciled, and catchlines and copy approved to the satisfaction of everyone.

These meetings are not held with the idea that all press sheet ads are bad. Quite the contrary. We use lots of them "as is," right off the exchange mats. Many more are used with a few changes to suit our particular needs and we find them very satisfactory. In selecting examples of our ad work, however, I have purposely chosen ads that did not come from press sheets to give you an idea of how we break down our advertising to fit the local situation.

The sum total of all our managers' experience makes it fairly easy to guess, with some degree of accuracy, the gross of a coming picture. Quite often we feel we can raise this anticipated gross by building up our own ads instead of using producer ads. This was recently done quite successfully on "The Lady's From Kentucky." Racing pictures, or pictures with similar backgrounds, have not given us the grosses they deserve in Oklahoma City. We had the same problem in selling "Kentucky"—in spite of its national acclaim, technicolor, etc.

Uses Special Campaigns Often

Out of our ad meeting on "The Lady's from Kentucky" came our "Cinema Circus" idea (No. 1—110 lines on 2 col.). We built up the program with a strong lineup of shorts, including "name" clips from various subjects and sold the whole deal like a circus and side-show combined. Free pop was even promoted for a mezzanine giveaway. The ads took on a festive air that must have intrigued our patrons away from their firesides. At least the net results were even better than we had hoped.

Quite often, even though we feel the producers' ads are just right and we intend to use them, we still want to give the newspaper campaign a boost—start the ball rolling early and build up an eager anticipation for the picture. Then we lay out a special campaign of our own for use in advance of our regular ads.

We used such a campaign successfully on "Calling Dr. Kildare." The first Kildare picture played first run in our ace suburban theatre. This one we were bringing into an "A" downtown theatre and we felt that some good reasons should be given to justify the booking. We planned a strong advance selling campaign using endorsements from local theatre men (No. 2—70 lines on 2 col.) and wires from popular Hollywood stars (run in issue, May 27). Both ads received a lot of attention and caused lots of discussion among our friends and patrons with a good reaction at the box office.

Follows Colbert Popularity

In selling "It's a Wonderful World" we had another local problem picture. The he-men in this part of the country may like James Stewart, but they definitely don't like the insipid type of roles he has played recently. Nor have the women around these parts stormed our doors demanding more of Stewart. But, on the other hand, Colbert is one of our best bets locally and the fans paid off handsomely to see her in "Midnight."

Obviously we could only get our best gross out of this picture by playing up our best angles—by telling the public they had another Colbert comedy in "It's a Wonderful World." We did just that. Our advance ad congratulated Colbert on turning out such a swell laugh hit. Our opening ad (No. 5—130 lines on 2 col.) bore down heavily on Colbert and comedy, and we followed through in all remaining ads. Our opening day's business more than justified our making up these ads to suit our local preferences.

For the space we had to use on "Tarzan Finds a Son," we could not find just the right press sheet ad with all the "guts" we wanted to get into it. So we made up our own ad on "Tarzan," using the best material from several sources (No. 7—175 lines on 3 col.) and ran what we thought had the strongest appeal to local theatregoers.

A favorite trick of ours, one that we have used often and with success, is our "Show of the Month." In fact it has now become a sort of Trade Mark with our patrons, and because we have never let them down, we recently turned in a top gross on a dual reissue program in a first run house (No. 8—80 lines on 2 col.) by putting it on the market under the "Show of the Month" label.

Makes Up Own Teaser Ads

Occasionally producers provide us with teaser ads, or off-the-amusement-page ads. But usually when we want to use them we have to make our own cuts. We made up a set of teasers on "The Little Princess" using mats. Each one ran the head of some star who had seen the picture and carried a quote. The star heads were taken from old mats; the quotes from publicity material and trade paper ads. The same catch line and border was used in each ad to give the series a continuity leading up to our opening splash on the picture.

Using the Swastika for a stopper, we planted a series of strong selling ads on "Nazi Spy" throughout the paper in advance of its opening day. (No. 10—70 lines on 1 col.) The "Pygmalion" teaser (No. 11—150 lines on 1 col.) completely stole the page on which it ran and no doubt helped sell the unusual title of this picture, as well as intrigued many into reading the copy. A "Wuthering Heights" ad, using quotes from Woollcott, Phelps, and Eleanor Roosevelt was run on the Sunday Books page.

Stresses Local Angles

Quite often strictly local angles pop up in pictures and offer an excellent peg upon which to hang the entire ad campaign. This happened to us in "Persons in Hiding." The story was taken from a chapter in J. Edgar Hoover's book which dealt with Kathryn and "Machine Gun" Kelly and the kidnapping of an Oklahoma City millionaire, Charles F. Urschel. An actual page from the book, with local names, dates, etc., was reproduced in one ad. In another we used names of local persons, including Urschel, who had seen the show, along with local angles in catchlines and copy (No. 14—80 lines on 2 col.). Naturally these ads were totally unlike anything in the press sheet for national consumption.

Two extended run houses in Oklahoma City present us with another problem in ad making. Few producers lay out press sheets with "Hold Over" and "Second Week" ads in them. Since we use two or three ads

Details of Other Entries Chosen for Appointment in Last Issue Reveal Wide Range Coverage

As has been the regular policy of the 1939 Quigley Awards, and to set down in print the details of all winning entries in each Fortnight period, as soon after selection as possible, below are explained the exploitations of other winners in the last judging which were not published in last week's issue.

City Famed in State History; Smith Stages Special Premiere

Since the town of Gonzales holds a top spot in Texas history, Manager Lynn Smith, for "Man of Conquest" at the Crystal Theatre, arranged a special program to be held in front of the house advertising it as "Gonzales' Own Premiere." Lynn was fortunate enough to secure the services of a local resident, great-grandson of the original settler of Old Gonzales to act as master of ceremonies. String orchestra supplied the music rendering patriotic Texas songs and a company from the National Guard was on hand to fire a three-volley salute to the heroes of the Alamo. Dedication speech was made by one of the senior high school girls, also a descendant of one of the early settlers and the program closed with the orchestra playing "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon Us."

Highlight of the campaign was an autograph book in which all attending the premiere were invited to sign their names. Book was mailed to Richard Dix with due ceremonies and newspaper coverage.

First-Time Newspaper Break Marks Premiere of "Juarez"

Selling his premiere of "Juarez" at the Regent, in Springfield, Ohio, on a reserved seat basis, Round Tabler John Gordon made announcements over the Chakeres-Warner weekly radio program and circularized special theatre mailing list stressing the historic background of the picture. All ad layouts were originals and an effort was made to get away from the costumes angle as much as possible. Also secured was a special Sunday art-reader break which Gordon reports as a first time.

Dungan Bucks Stiff Competition With Temple Double and "Johnny"

Put on to buck his stiffest competition of the year, the annual band tournament at Grand Junction which takes all the high school children and most of their parents out of town, Manager Don Dungan at the Fox in Montrose, Colorado, put on an all-covering campaign for "Little Princess" and the personal appearance of Johnny Morris, Jr., of "Call for Philip Morris" fame.

Arrangements were made on opening day of picture to have local child dressed as Shirley Temple arrive on regular train at 9 a.m. At the station, the child was met and presented with a bouquet of flowers by Johnny on behalf of merchants whom Dungan had promoted for a double truck layout. Evening before, Johnny was interviewed on the stage by Don who built up the "little princess'" arrival following morning.

Parade headed by Johnny met the "starlet" at the train where the aggregation proceeded to the theatre for a special morning matinee for kids. Since there was no band available in the town, Dungan used a sound car, interspersing records of tunes from picture with announcements. Papers covered the stunt with stories and art as did the cooperating merchants through store-wide publicity.

Nelson Invites Local Ad Writers To Enter Original Ads on "Juarez"

Novel enough to appeal to the editor of his local paper was an ad contest on "Juarez," conceived by Manager Glenn Nelson for that date at the Harris, Findlay, Ohio, in which readers were invited to write their own ads for the picture's opening. Contest started off with the theatreman's ad selling the contest featured by a cut of Davis and Muni which formed the basis of contestants' entries. Erected in lobby was large easel carrying photos, critic reviews and other pertinent data that not only proved to be of help to the folks taking part in the contest, but also proved to be a very good advance plug on the picture.

Entries were run in paper and at end of contest displayed in the lobby. Promoted cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded to the winners.

Borresen Ties Junior Chamber To Model Contest on "Angels"

Cooperating with the Junior Association of Commerce in connection with "Only Angels Have Wings" opening at the State, in Winona, Minn., Manager Harold F. Borresen promoted prizes to be awarded for best model airplanes. Heralds with picture plug at bottom were distributed, cooperating flying school also stressed the contest which was covered by local dailies.

For his lobby display, Borresen used a booklet of stills, Howard Hawks story and production shots which were mounted on portable easel. Numerous fashion tieups were featured with leading stores including Jean Arthur sports clothes, Dick Barthelmess jackets, Rita Hayworth coiffures, etc., etc.

Shannon Teaser Slugs on "Honolulu" Offer Trip to Islands for 15 Cents

Starting his teaser campaign with slug at bottom of regular theatre ads reading "How would you like to take a trip to Honolulu for only 15 cents," Chuck Shannon launched his campaign for that picture at the subsequent-run Belmar in Pittsburgh. Giant cutout title letters were suspended from building three weeks in advance and then properly sniped during current run. Chain druggist cooperated by featuring a "Honolulu" sundae, streamers plugging the tieup were used on windows and fountain mirrors, entire staff wore leis and mailing list was circularized ahead.

Standard Theatres Ads Originate In Joint Discussions

every week on hold-overs it becomes difficult to break away from routine stuff and keep them different and interesting. One of our most effective second-week ad series was on "Wuthering Heights." The opening day we used several quotes from prominent ladies of this city (No. 15—80 lines on 2 col.) and then followed it up with an ad quoting men only (No. 16—85 lines on 1 col.). The "battle of the sexes" idea might have helped—anyway we got a good gross out of the second week's run.

For force and attention pulling power I have included our hold-over ads on "Dark Victory" (No. 17—55 lines on 2 col.) and "Young Mr. Lincoln" (No. 18—70 lines on 2 col.). They are bold and impressive and stand out on the amusement page. Both are layouts that can easily be adapted to any picture. A "Honolulu" hold-over ad, made up entirely from a patron's comment card, was cause for lots of comment and got the picture off to a good start on its second week (run in issue, May 13).

In presenting these ads I have made no attempt to give credit to the various persons in our organization who submitted the original idea. In fact, most of them come from joint discussions and it would be impossible to say just exactly who did give birth to the ad-idea. For idea sources we study press sheets, trade papers and a tear sheet service which we subscribe to. We also carefully scan the constant stream of producer direct-mail material that pours into our offices.

Then when we lay out our ads—we copy freely and without hesitation and take all we see that is good—whether we thought it up or not!

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Monroe Gets Chuck Wagon As Advance on "Oklahoma

From a local resident of Mangum, Okla., an old time chuck wagon was secured by John Monroe, assistant to Clyde Young at the Temple for their date on "Oklahoma Kid." Equipped with bows and canvas cover, an old fashioned "grub box" was mounted on the rear and placed in the "no parking" zone in front of theatre. Arrangements were made for serving doughnuts and coffee all day Saturday and for a camp fire site, theatremen secured truck load of dirt, which was spread on cement around the wagon; logs were then burned inside a small tile enclosure to minimize fire hazard. Four local boys playing cowboy songs grouped around the camp fire, where microphone and public address system was set up.

To further carry out the pioneer spirit of the picture, a rustic front was constructed, tieup was effected with leading men's clothing store whereby windows were devoted to cowboy clothes, life size cutout of Cagney and large map of Oklahoma, with reproduction of Grover Cleveland's proclamation at the base, were scene stills and tiein copy.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Can't see why any small town would not eat this up. It is a dandy down-to-earth entertainment and fits in as a Saturday attraction when the common people who like homey pictures are here. We did some extra business on it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 9-10.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT TO FAME: Charles Farrell, Jacqueline Wells—Pretty good picture but did below average business. One of those "between pictures." Running time, 57 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY AND THE MOB, THE: Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman—Poorest drawing feature we have had in months. Did exceptionally poor business and the picture did not please those who came. Fay Bainter is entitled to better breaks than this even though she really did a nice job as usual. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Bellamy—Very good picture and excellent acting. Average business. Running time, 69 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE ADVENTURESS: Edith Fellows, Robert Fiske—This picture is not up to par with other Fellows' films. Very disappointing. Did fair business. Running time, 62 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LONE STAR PIONEERS: Bill Elliott, Dorothy Gulliver—These westerns are all alike. The public still likes action pictures and as a result they bring in business. Running time, 63 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND: John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell. It won't get by with a super-super on the front end. If this is a burlesque, bring on the girls. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—Pay no attention to other reports. McPhee says this will get you money at the box office in any place but a thickly populated district with Germans. And is mighty timely and interesting and in such cases will stand extended run. Running time, 102 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TORCHY BLANE IN CHINATOWN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—My head sunk so low in my collar to avoid the scowl of our few patrons that I had to cut away my shirt front to find my way home.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corp., Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Jeffrey Lynn, Priscilla Lane, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Censoring publicity helped this picture. Did fair business and it seemed to please. Running time, 86 minutes.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—A swell entertainment well liked by everybody and we did a little extra business. We sure do like Priscilla Lane. Wish we could have more of her and what a swell contribution Fay Bainter gave to the picture. Nothing objectionable. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—I have to go on record as the only exhibitor to pan this picture but it certainly did not bring out the S.R.O. sign here. No doubt an excellent feature. Metro admits it but had as competition Friday and Saturday nights a Free Medicine show with give aways and everything and it is not a Sunday show. Very good cast with Walter Connolly stealing the show. Rex Ingram is very good. All right if you can get them in but not the type for this town. Running time, 92 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—I think every customer enjoyed it. Some said it was better than the Hardy series. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 2-3.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Small town patronage.

BRIDAL SUITE: Annabella, Walter Connolly, Billie Burke, Robert Young—Let it lay, if you can fill your spot and tell Metro to stick it. I couldn't and with deep regrets I had to inflict it onto my suffering clients. And did they suffer and what they said about Billie Burke and the whole thing would not go through the mails. Metro had better relegate Billie Burke back onto the kerosene circuit. Her technique is reminiscent of that day, the days when the villain still pursued her.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Stander, Frank Morgan—As hard as Metro is trying to build up Taylor, he fails to do business of late. Better put him with Autry. Business only average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Not as good as "Fast Company" but still a very clever picture. Business fair and satisfactory comment. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 28-29.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Alan Marshal, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor, Buddy Ebsen—Another good program picture from Metro. They don't make many weak ones. This did extra business on our mid-week booking and certainly pleased. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres. Original Ice Follies Cast—This one failed to draw. Joan seems to be slipping. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 25-26.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres. Original Ice Follies cast—Very good entertainment with some beautiful ice skating sequences. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres. Original Ice Follies Cast—An average picture for week-end business. Nothing sensational but it's good entertainment and will please. Skating scenes in color well received. Running time, 82 minutes. Played July 2-3.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut—You will have to be an idiot to like Miss Shearer in this one. Gable holds what little interest there is. Only one favorable comment. Several walkouts. Running time, 109 minutes.—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Small town patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—This is just as good as the picture "Bridal Suite" was bad. It probably comes under the title of screwball comedies. For everything happens and the audience got a lot of chuckles all the way through it. It is the type that Miss Claudette belongs in.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Buddy Ebsen—Why can't Metro give us more pictures like this one. Here is a small town natural if there ever was one. A swell picture by a swell company with a pair of swell comedians. Buddy Ebsen did not hurt this picture in the least. He is excellent. An excellent picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—Very good picture which failed to draw and will probably do the same in any small town. Picture has fine cast and plot is an elaborate Gene Autry picture. Played June 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—Don't be afraid of this one. It is O.K. entertainment in all spots. Not extended runs but good B product. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LORD JEFF: Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew—A fair production that did average business. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LUCKY NIGHT: Robert Taylor, Myrna Loy—This picture is little better than a program picture and failed to draw. Despite the big name stars I lost money on it. Played June 28-29—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LUCKY NIGHT: Myrna Loy, Robert Taylor—Have heard this picture panned by a lot of exhibitors but our audience thought that it was an excellent comedy. These two make a swell team and as a result we had satisfied customers go out of the show. Very good. Running time, 82 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—The hot weather did not keep them out on this one. Many new faces at the box office. A real mortgage lifter. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Good picture. Played while I was out of town. Business was poor. But House Officers said O. K. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WITHIN THE LAW: Ruth Hussey, Tom Neal, Paul Kelly—A very good drama that has been made several times but still does a nice business. Nothing big but it satisfies. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BAREFOOT BOY: Jackie Moran, Marcia Mae Jones, Claire Windsor, Ralph Morgan—This picture is quite old but it still went over big. These youngsters have a greater drawing power than a great many older stars. Let's have more like this, Monogram. Running time, 63 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

FRONTIERSMAN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Always good and "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns satisfy. Need more be said? Running time, 74 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

LADY'S FROM KENTUCKY, THE: George Raft, Ellen Drew, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—Played with "Winner Take All." Very little enjoyment my patrons seem to have received from either of these nor myself either.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT: Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, Francis Lederer, John Barrymore, Mary Astor—Fine. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER DOCTOR: Lloyd Nolan, J. Carroll Naish, Heather Angel—So many crime pictures our audiences are tired of them. Biz off bad. Not too bad a picture. Played June 28-30.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Equals house record for year and second run, too! Great picture and did a great biz for us. Never be afraid of big ones like this! Running time, 130 minutes. Played June 24-27—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—No money left in it for us. Played June 28-30.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

FRONTIER PONY EXPRESS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Good western picture which did average business. Played June 30-July 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—These Autrys too short; could be prolonged with more music. However, drew extra business in these times of depression. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

HEROES OF THE HILLS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Priscilla Lawson—A good shoot 'em up western.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Let's give Gene four bells and four stars for this one. Every small exhibitor can depend on Autry to bring him out of that middle-of-the week slump. Running time, 59 minutes—E. I. Hawkins, Hawkins Theatre, Newellton, La. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MISS X: Michael Whalen, Mary Hart, Chick Chandler—Slow getting started but a very good comedy but why play up horror angle in advertising when the picture is just a good comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MY WIFE'S RELATIVES: James, Lucille and Russell Gleason—A dandy comedy for family or Saturday.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Jean Joyce —We thought this a very satisfactory western for a dual bill on the week-end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RED RIVER RANGE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Lorna Gray, Polly Moran—Good western. See that John Wayne is being promoted. Republic, how about Smith Ballew, Big Boy Williams or Tom Tyler to take his place?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BOY SLAVES: Anne Shirley, Roger Daniel—Good program fare. RKO, why not put these "Boy Slaves" Kids together in another picture?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FLYING IRISHMAN: Douglas Corrigan, Robert Armstrong, Paul Kelly—Good picture but Doug Corrigan just wasn't cut out to be an actor. Did only fair business. Running time, 72 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT MAN VOTES, THE: John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler, Katharine Alexander —Not a good product for a small town. Barrymore does a very good job. Some very satisfied customers. Running time, eight reels. Played June 15.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Victor McLaglen, Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Fontaine, Sam Jaffe—Patrons have nothing but praise for this picture. Just enough comedy and a lot of action to please everyone. Those who saw it the first time came back the next night. Advertise it to its utmost and I am sure you will not be disappointed. If we had more pictures like this we could do business. Running time, 107 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer, Lee Bowman—Good picture and good acting. Business below average due to rain but all those who came enjoyed it. Running time, 89 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, New Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

> I wish to pass my opinion on your magazine. It is decidedly the best movie magazine I have ever had. It has been so beneficial that I would not consider being without it.

> Grand Theatre,
> New Salem, N. D.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Fay Bainter, Anne Shirley, Ruby Keeler, James Ellison—A natural for a small town community. Play it. Running time, eight reels. Played June 22.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—This type of picture doesn't go over very good in a small town. It wasn't the fault of the actors though as they played their parts well. Poor business.—Running time, 59 minutes.—H. V. Jebb, Grand Theatre, Salem, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STORY OF VERNON AND IRENE CASTLE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edna Mae Oliver, Walter Brennan—As sweet a picture as one could wish for but failed us at the box office. We don't know why.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—One of the best of the series and they always please our action fans.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GORILLA, THE: Ritz Brothers, Patsy Kelly, Anita Louise, Bela Lugosi—This picture is very comical and did above average business.—Pleased all. The Ritz Bros. failed to draw in recent picture but they came in to see this one. Played July 26-27. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JONES FAMILY "IN HOLLYWOOD": Spring Byington, Jed Prouty—A little weaker than average "Jones Family" fare. However, booked with "Union Pacific" and went over swell. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 24-27.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher, Sybil Jason—Just as fine as we expected. Shirley may be dropping off some in box office draw but that doesn't take away from her ability one bit. She is sure a swell little trouper. And Sybil Jason handled her part with consummate skill. We did hate to see players like Ian Hunter. Richard Greene and Anita Louise supporting in such small roles. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 23-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO'S GAMBLE: Peter Lorre, Lynn Bari Keye Luke—Very good. Made a nice double bill for week-end. Doubled with a western.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson—Here is a honey child that will make the old box office click and entertains every mother's son. Step on, boys, for McPhee knows and never lies. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson—The trailer ballyhooed this picture too strong. The older clients, including myself, liked it but the younger jitterbugs were thumbs down on it unanimously. The picture is okay for its type and Jolson was good in his role. I had a number of patrons express themselves that they were getting tired of Alice Faye. Contrary to the plug in the trailer, it's no "Alexander's Ragtime Band." —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson—An excellent picture but did not do business. Probably due to the public being allergic to Al Jolson. Al's a great entertainer but so were Weber and Fields.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

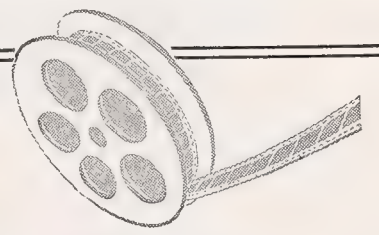
TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Very well received. Looked for poor attendance on account of so many reports that it did not do business elsewhere. What a grand little actress this Kelly girl is! We look for great things from her unless they bury her like they did Marjorie Weaver. Also liked Faye, Bennett and Joan Davis. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 25-26.—Horn and Morgan Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: James Stewart, Carole Lombard, Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson, Eddie Quillan, Esther Dale—An excellent cast and direction turns this somewhat commonplace story into very satisfactory entertainment. There is romance, comedy and thrills, ending with the flight of a mercy plane through a blinding blizzard that had them holding their breath. James Stewart is tops as always, Carole Lombard, Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson, Eddie Quillan very good and Esther Dale as the cook is a riot. Pleased the cash customers. Running time, 94 minutes. Played June 23-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart, Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson—Entertaining. That's all. Need not be afraid; it will please. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Frederic March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mobray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—Entertaining B product. Like all United Artists this year, entertaining but not big. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.



Universal

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winniger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—A well liked picture but to maintain Deanna Durbin popularity more down to earth stories must be picked for her. Forget the opera.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Haviland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victory Jory—Swell! More pictures like this would be like a blood transfusion to the sinking show business; I said sinking. Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 27-29.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

NATION-WIDE RAIL-AIR SERVICE

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield—A beautifully acted picture of war in Mexico many years ago. Big enough for extended runs in all spots. What you will do for business depends much on how your patrons like this kind of a picture. Historical pictures do always a respectable business for me. That's all. Running time, 127 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Extra good western with history behind it. Cagney is well liked here and always satisfies. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BIG BIRDCAST, THE: Color Rhapsodies—After seeing Disney's cartoons, it's hard to speak very highly of others. This one fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT—Color Rhapsodies—Just fair. Running time, seven minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE: Washington Parade, No. 2—Very entertaining and instructive subject. More intimate contacts of this kind with our government's inner workings should be presented in shorts.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PLAY BALL: Special Sport Thrills—Of course, the baseball fans ate this up and the others were somewhat bored. But we believe it is worth playing.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SAP TAKES A WRAP, THE: Charley Chase—Our week-end patrons still like these Chase comedies.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TIME OUT FOR TROUBLE: Broadway Comedies—The usual Chas. Chase slapstick cemedy. Pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

HOW TO DANCE THE SHAG: Song and Comedy Hits—Good reel for the young folks. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough. Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANGEL OF MERCY: Passing Parade, No. 5—These historical subjects always seem to please.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ART GALLERY, THE: Cartoons—Another fine colored cartoon from the new series. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CAIRO, CITY OF CONTRAST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very interesting FitzPatrick.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CLOWN PRINCESS: Our Gang—This is a pretty fair Our Gang comedy, but they lack the punch of former years. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

HELP WANTED: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—An excellent two reeler of the crime series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOBBIES: MGM Miniatures—Just a lot of hokum which the fans seem to like.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small Town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOBBIES: MGM Miniatures—Outstanding. Why is it that Metro's shorts seem so much better than any other company? Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOME FOR LUNCH: Robert Benchley—These Benchleys are too sophisticated for the small town.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JAVA JOURNEY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Average travel talks in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GOLD FISH, THE: Cartoons—Here is a real cartoon. Excellent in color. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: MGM Miniatures—My patrons are so glad to see a short that is not educational or historical that they thought this great. Metro's shorts are sure slipping. My patrons want comedy. Running time, one reel.—Glady E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MONEY TO LOAN: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—All audience absorbing. This short is excellent as is the entire series. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Musical Comedies—As long as we have ever played musical two reelers we consider this the worst ever shown.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PENNY'S PICNIC: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good short subject on cooking for campers. Hard on one's stomach.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

POETRY OF NATURE: Pete Smith Specialties—A very fine single reel by Pete Smith. A real novelty.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

POETRY OF NATURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Good filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRANGE GLORY: Historical Mysteries—Interesting short that did not click. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WHILE AMERICA SLEEPS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These crime reels are excellent. Not only please but carry a lesson.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General Patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE GOES TO TOWN: Passing Parade, No. 6—Interesting.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP: Popeye the Sailor—Good two reeler in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

GOOD SCOUTS: Walt Disney Cartoons—They don't come any better. Running time, eight minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MAIDS AND MUSIC: Nu-Atlas Productions—Splendid entertainment. My audience did not like the antics of the director of the band—spoiled the entertainment value for music lovers. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

POLAR TRAPPERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good short. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

TWENTY GIRLS AND A BAND: Radio Musical Comedies—Enjoyed by my patrons. Running time, two reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DAILY DIET OF DANGER, A: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very interesting Adventure of Newsreel Cameraman. Good for any situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 3: Fashions—Very beautiful. And even the men went for it and why not with such an array of beautiful women. The kids seemed to think it laughable.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIZE GUEST, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRIZE GUEST, THE: Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIKING TRAIL: Magic Carpet Series—A very interesting travelogue by Fox. If it were in color it would have been perfect.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BIRTH OF A TOOTHPICK: Lantz Cartunes—A lot of belly laughs in this cartoon. Run it. Running time, six minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, NO. 59: Just fair. We have had better. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING SANATORIUM: Mentone Musical Comedies—A fair musical that was spoilt by Roscoe Ates who has outlived his comedy. One act especially, the two girls playing on the bottles filled with water, is outstanding. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BARS AND STRIPES FOREVER: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon. This series as a whole is excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAMPUS CINDERELLA: Broadway Brevities—Here is a very beautiful two reel musical comedy of the better grade. Was thoroughly enjoyed.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LEITH STEVENS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very good swing band that continues the high plane that the last few bands of this company has been. Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRESTO CHANGO: Merrie Melodies—A good cartoon, a bit different than the run of the mill. Running time, seven minutes.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

National Decency Legion Classifies 18 Pictures

Of 18 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the past two weeks 11 were approved for general patronage, six were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Bachelor Mothers," "Career," "Hero for a Day," "Mickey the Kid," "Saint in London," "Second Fiddle," "Stunt Pilot," "They Asked for It," "Timber Stampede," "What a Life," "Wyoming Outlaw." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Forgotten Women," "Hell's Kitchen," "On Borrowed Time," "Second Bureau," "Stronger Than Desire," "Two's Company." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Black Limelight."

Hoffberg Gets "Timberlands"

J. H. Hoffberg has acquired national release to "Terror of the Timberlands," a feature production produced by Cinesound and based on the novel "Tall Timbers" by Captain Frank Hurley. The film is scheduled for release this month and features Frank Leighton and Shirley Ann Richards.

Butterfield Building

Butterfield Theatres of Michigan will build a new house in North Lansing, Michigan, and another in Reed City, same state. The circuit is also rebuilding the Garden, in Flint, and the Gladmer, in Lansing.

Astor Pictures Corporation franchise for the Los Angeles area has been given to the Astor Film Company of Southern California, newly formed by Louis Goldstein. Selected Pictures, Inc., had the franchise.

German Club in Quebec Fined for "Le Merite"

The Province of Quebec brought its first open fight with Nazi propaganda agents to a successful close last week when Duetscher Verein Harmonia, Inc., a German club in Montreal received fines totalling almost $600 for filming the Berlin propaganda picture "Pour Le Merite."

The club was raided by Provincial police in April at a showing of the film and the print was seized. About a month ago summonses were issued against the club authorities charging them with two offenses against the Provincial Motion Picture Act; one, that they had used film apparatus without due authorization and the other that they had failed to pay amusement tax on each of the 250 admittances at 25 cents each. On the first charge Judge C. E. Guerin fined the club $500 and $28.50 costs and on the second $50 and $13.50.

Shortly after the raid and seizure the German Consulate General asked return of the film on the grounds that it was privileged property of the German Government and as such enjoyed diplomatic immunity. He was refused.

Settle "Juarez" Suit

Warner Brothers will distribute Miguel C. Torres' production of "Juarez and Maximilian" under the terms of the settlement of the Mexican producer's $1,000,000 damage suit brought in federal court, in which it was charged that Warners plagiarized the plot in "Juarez," starring Bette Davis and Paul Muni. Attorneys for Warners said that under the terms of the agreement, in which the suit is dismissed by Torres, the Torres film, made as an English version of the Mexican picture, would be released probably in September.

Long, Smith Suit Settled

The suit against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Irwin S. Cobb brought by the late Ray Long, and R. R. Smith Corporation, was settled and discontinued under a stipulation filed in federal court in New York this week. Defendants had been named on a charge that the film "Judge Priest" used as its plot a story "A Tree Full of Hoot Owls," and that Mr. Cobb in 1932 had sold this story to the plaintiff in a collection called "Down Yonder with Judge Priest and Irwin S. Cobb." Plaintiffs contended that the motion picture rights to the story had been sold with publication rights. Terms of the settlement were not made known. Mr. Long was a dramatic critic and one time editor of Cosmopolitan.

Miss Darrieux Upheld

Danielle Darrieux has been upheld by a decision of a civil court in Paris in her refusal to play the lead role in a feature picture entitled "The French Can-Can." The suit had been brought by Regina Film Company seeking damages of 1,000,000 francs, but the court ruled that it was the privilege of the actress to choose her role, and assessed cost of the action against the company.

RKO Seeks Reduction Of Tax on Six Houses

Louis Nizer, attorney, on Tuesday brought action against the City of New York to diminish the tax assessment on six RKO theatres. In presenting to the tri-departmental tax board of the city the claims of RKO, Mr. Nizer claimed that the assessments of $19,684,000 were on the Palace, 58th Street, Alhambra, Collesium, Colonial and the 95th Street was too high by $3,088,000.

Mr. Nizer said that the six theatres involved had been built to acommodate vaudeville and when the theatres went on a straight motion picture policy the stage, dressing rooms, trap doors underneath the stage, ceiling equipment for changing sets, and other portions of the buildings were not used. He claimed that the replacement costs of the building was their true value and that this should be computed without the obsolete space. Witnesses included Major Leslie E. Thompson; Thomas W. Lamb, architect; Joseph W. Garry, building constructor; A. N. Gitterman, real estate expert and A. Reoch of the RKO real estate department.

Nick-Weston Appeal Set for September

Two cases connected with the ouster of John P. Nick, International vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, and Clyde A. Weston, former business manager of Local 143, St. Louis operators' union, from control of the latter by Ernest F. Oakley, circuit judge of St. Louis, will be heard by the Missouri supreme court at its September term.

One of the cases is the appeal of Nick and Weston from the order of Judge Oakley appointing a temporary receiver for Local 143, while the second case is based on the unsuccessful attempt of William F. Canavan and other defense interveners to compel Judge Oakley to accept an appeal bond, which would have automatically superseded the receivership and returned control of Local 143 to Nick and Weston until such time as the high courts would pass on the receivership suit.

Settle Plagiarism Suit

The suit against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation brought in the United States district court by Morgan Wallace and Lawrence Shubert Lawrence was settled this week for an undisclosed amount. Plagiarism of the plaintiff's play, "Congratulations," by the picture, "Thanks a Million," was charged.

Seek Merger of Suits

Columbia Pictures Corporation this week filed application in New York supreme court to consolidate three stockholders' suits brought against it and 12 of its officers and directors charging waste and mismanagement.

Nicholls Sues Republic

George Nicholls, Jr., film director, this week filed in superior court in Los Angeles a suit against Republic seeking $5,500 back pay he claims is due him under a contract which he said was illegally terminated by the company.

Court Decision in Air-Conditioning Suit

Air diffusers with two series of vanes, employed in the ventilation of theatres and other buildings, do not involve a patentable principle, it has been held in a decision handed down by Judge Barnes in United States district court in Chicago. The suit had been brought by the United States Air-Conditioning Corporation, Minneapolis, against the Carrier Corporation and subsidiaries, and also citing the Air Comfort Corporation, charging infringement of a patent issued October 5, 1926.

Patent Suit Dismissed

The patent infringement suit of Virgil C. Crites against Warner Brothers Pictures Corporation, Radtke Patents Corporation, United Research Corporation, Albert A. Radtke, Leonard Day and Thomas J. Martin was dismissed this week by Mortimer W. Byers, federal judge, in New York who ruled that no evidence of infringement had been produced at the trial.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"IT'S ALL M-G-M!"

Let us consider a few items from the current (hot-weather) issue of Variety:

BALTIMORE—"General let-down here this week with only bright spot CHIPS at Century."

KANSAS CITY—"CHIPS top flight, one of best of the year. Last week MAISIE a pleasant surprise."

CHICAGO—"CHIPS holding to strong pace looks set for a stay at Apollo."

"HARDYS RIDE HIGH repeat flicker better than average take. Last week SOCIETY LAWYER came in with surprising gross."

PITTSBURGH—"Penn's leading the way with MAISIE reacting to slick campaign. CHIPS frisky, better than holding its own in 3rd week downtown, having moved to Warners. Only second picture in history to move here after playing 2 stanzas at Penn."

NEW YORK—"CHIPS powerful play at Astor. Huge profit being shown here. 9th Week."

"Capitol ON BORROWED TIME more action here."

PORTLAND—"ON BORROWED TIME good. Last week MAISIE nice."

SAN FRANCISCO—"ON BORROWED TIME will grab sizable gross. It's giving the best take in some time. MR. CHIPS sprinting toward excellent biz. Looks good for 6 weeks here. Last week equalled first week. Almost unheard of here."

LINCOLN, NEB.—"The town's sweltering. DR. KILDARE, O. K. Last week MAISIE good."

WASHINGTON, D. C. — "MR. CHIPS leading town, a socko, way out front with beauteous gross."

BOSTON—"CHIPS holdover very good and the town's standout. First week smasho." (Holdover day and date at State and Orpheum).

LOS ANGELES—"Straight picture houses not faring well, except CHIPS now in 9th week."

TORONTO—"WONDERFUL WORLD excellent. Last week DR. KILDARE fine."

INDIANAPOLIS—"TARZAN sweet. Others off. Topping the town with socko gross."

MINNEAPOLIS—"CHIPS big, garnering the box-office laurels. Effective advertising campaign got fine opening."

LOUISVILLE—"MR. CHIPS is setting the b. o. pace. Last week MAISIE exceeded expectations, snaring good gross."

DENVER—"MR. CHIPS Big and holds. Last week MAISIE good."

PHILADELPHIA—"CHIPS stacking 'em up to lofty gross. Nifty second week."

DETROIT—"TARZAN looks tops!"

PROVIDENCE—"MR. CHIPS strongest in town."

He's off again on his annual hot-weather spree! Whee!

TO THE RESCUE!

Those glowing M-G-M box-office reports reprinted above are just the beginning. Look what's ahead:

July 21st. "ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER"

Eyes of the industry watch with amazement Los Angeles day-and-date engagement topping all previous Hardys; Portland equally sensational; First 4 days in Detroit biggest of this entire season; Denver where first 4 days beat "Pygmalion", "Boys Town" and all other Big Ones! Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney and all the folks in the Lucky Seventh Hardy Hit! Sure-fire for extended runs! Watch!

July 28th. National Release "GOODBYE MR. CHIPS"

The delight of the dog days! Keep extra time wide open!

Aug. 4th. "MIRACLES FOR SALE"

A sleeper! Watch for it! Robert Young and Florence Rice in thriller! Summer showmanship special!

Aug. 11th. ROBERT TAYLOR, HEDY LAMARR in "LADY OF THE TROPICS" (need we say more!)

Aug. 18th. "THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS"

Lew Ayres and a screenful of beauties, including Lana Turner, Anita Louise and others in a sure-fire box-office show!

—and then on August 25 comes the biggest sensation since "Snow White":

"THE WIZARD OF OZ"

Watch for further announcements about M-G-M's Technicolor Wonder Show playing hundreds of day-and-date engagements simultaneous with giant ad campaign!

DEAF, also DUMB

THE most, and most amazingly, neglected element of the the motion picture promotion is the sound track and its musical content.

It would appear that only when the musical component is made visible to the eye in a screened personality, a Stokowsky, or a Heifetz, exploitation becomes importantly aware.

Volumes have been said about how the motion picture has taken to "the road", and the whole public, dramatic entertainment of an order that could not be had in pre-picture days. More might be said about what the sound component of the picture has done in delivering competent music with the show.

Whereas once upon a time the best of musical treatment for the picture show could be had only by the limited audiences served by such artists as Mr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Mr. Erno Rapee, and Mr. Carl Edouard on Broadway, today the film is taking to the whole field of patronage the efforts of such ranking musical names as Korngold, Hageman, Janssen, Stothart and Newman, to name only a few.

Rarely in either theatre advertising or in the reviews and other attentions of the critics are the musicians and their work mentioned.

There was a time in the Riesenfeld period when both the Rialto and Rivoli theatres in New York sold sizeable blocks of seats each week to groups whose interest was entirely musical and who attended without heed to the picture playing.

The music audience still exists—and in every community. The motion picture is now doing the most competent musical work that popular entertainment has ever offered.

This might be mentioned, now and then, to the customers.

AN entirely unique and special example of musical awareness has just been had in the devices of Mr. Lou Pollock of Universal in offering the New York audiences of "The Mikado" encores of the most applauded song numbers—supplied by separate and duplicate sound prints on a secondary projector.

This all worked so well, with so many demands that the encore policy had to be put in abeyance until further prints were made.

Mr. Pollock's notion is capable of some alarming developments. Just suppose that audiences of the cinema masterpieces should be inspired to shout "Author, Author," or "We want Zanuck," or some such notion. Consider the stock of applause-and-encore responses that would have to be filmed, distributed, presented.

Just one Hollywood super-preview might start it—and why not? Watch for the curtain call pictures to come.

OFTEN enough it has been remarked on this page that decency is quite often more a question of "where and when" than "what." Now comes a decision of the New York state courts, appellate division, ruling that the "Birth of a Baby" may be shown for "clinical purposes" but not as entertainment, for which it "would serve no useful purpose." Says the court: "It is not inherently indecent in the ordinary, accepted sense of the word, but it becomes indecent when presented in places of amusement."

SO far the only producer's fingerprints on file in Washington are Mr. Walt Disney's—and he sent them in voluntarily, for the national identification file. This positively has no reference to matters and persons who have been mentioned by Mr. Frank Murphy, U. S. attorney general.

WHEN an exhibitor sues a lawyer, that's news. Fanchon & Marco have done it in St. Louis, asking for $42,000 in fees back. Several corporations one can think of would be on a high dividend basis if they could get back what they have been spending on lawyers and lawing.

ADVERTISING

DEPARTMENT store figures from the National Dry Goods Association indicate that in 1938 the department stores spent more than three-fourths of all advertising dollars in the newspapers. Direct mail got 5 cents per dollar. Upwards of five per cent of net sales were spent on advertising. Institutional copy is now taking as much as ten per cent of the advertising budget in some stores. New York's morning papers have been gaining lineage through the first six months of this year, while two afternoon papers have been losing. The biggest increase is from the automobile business. It might be suggested that if the customers have the money to go out for a ride they also have enough to come in and sit down at the show.

SAYS WHICH?

INVENTION is moving faster, producing more, these days than ever before, and in the main with considerably less showmanship of personality than in the years agone.

Through the years of the rise of the industrial age and its technology, from Watts to Edison and Westinghouse, inventions were made by men. Today they are being made by institutions, laboratories, corporations, universities. Only just occasionally a name comes through, like Armstrong in radio. Generally speaking, the day of the lone inventor, the researcher of story and tradition, bent over his workbench and test tubes, is over. We get a synthetic voice machine, the Voder, and the inventor is the Telephone Company. We get a synthetic bristle, better than a boar can raise, and it's Nylon by the DuPont concern. We get a new airplane motor and eight men did it, namelessly for a corporation.

So there is adventure prowling the papers of the U. S. Patent Office to discover that one man invention survives, of all places, in the nascent art of Television, with an array of patents issued and pending for Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, one time chief engineer for the Radio Corporation of America and now a consulting engineer in matters of electrons and noises. It seems that more recently he had been tinkering with notions about how to make Television cost less and has arrived at a method of putting backgrounds behind actors, so that a lantern slide can take the place of expensive sets. It is done by a manner of making "an electronic splice," paralleling in effect,

This Week

Curtain Raisers

Hollywood today stands ready to deliver at least 90 and a possible 100 feature pictures to exhibitors for the opening of their new show season September 1st.

In analyzing the product of all Hollywood studios actually to be delivered in the first quarter of 1939-'40 some of the season's most outstanding productions are to be found.

The titles of the pictures from which exhibitors may select product to open the season appear on pages 13, 14, 15 and 16, including release dates, star, director and other credits and brief description of the pictures.

SAYS WHICH?

but more simply, the rear projection process of the motion picture studio.

HE, also, is not the attic inventor of tradition. He does it all with a slide rule, a book of logarithms and a trick lead pencil in an office in Madison Avenue, high enough to overlook everything, including St. Patrick's and the giant waffles of Radio City.

It would be a most important additional service if Dr. Goldsmith would suggest something for Television to show and say. At the moment your editor's impression of the art is reminiscent of those free telephone calls at the World's Fair, resulting commonly in a discussion of the weather between Flushing Meadows and the Pacific Coast.

Television, as an examination of programs to date will prove, is indeed a miracle of "how" and an itching void of "what."

So far the best that the televisors have thought up for transmission is a prize fight.

Some perversity reminds one of that first telegraph message about "what God hath wrought."

If there is something that television can do that is specially its own, that it alone can do, or can do best, that something is yet to be discovered.

Meanwhile, we are not to be too impatient. The motion picture fumbled along from 1894 to 1903 before it learned to tell a story. Then it started to become an industry.

On the Calendar

The United States Government's New York anti-trust suit will not reach trial until next March, if it follows ordinary procedure. Disclosure that the suit has been on the federal court calendar in New York since last March during which time it has, of course, been drawing nearer to a trial, was made Wednesday by attaches of the U. S. attorney-general's office in New York.

Oddly, attorneys for both the Government and the major defendants had been unaware that the case was on the calendar. It was placed there automatically last March 4th when Adolph Ramish, former Universal director, filed an answer—the calendar running a year behind.

On discovering the calendar listing Paul Williams, assistant to the U. S. attorney general, prepared Wednesday to move at once to obtain a preference for the case.

Defense counsel in the anti-trust suit brought by the Government against the Griffith circuit and the major distributors filed motions Wednesday in the U. S. district court in Oklahoma City for bill of particulars and a more definite statement of the charges against them.

Copyright Victory

After two days of argument, the Privy Council in London Wednesday dismissed the appeal of Francis Day and Hunter, Ltd., song publishers, in an action against Twentieth Century-Fox over Fox's use of the title "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" for a film. The English song publishing concern, owners of a song of the same title, brought an action for infringement and unfair competition. The case is one of the matters which received attention by Edwin P. Kilroe, chairman of the copyright committee of the Hays office, and copyright counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox, who will also handle other copyright and legal matters while in Europe, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week. A home office spokesman pointed out, "The decision is of great importance to the American film industry in the matter of selecting titles for its pictures."

Action

The board of managers of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, meeting in Philadelphia Wednesday, appointed a committee to attack the "problem of high film rentals" with the idea of gaining the cooperation of other exhibitor groups in national action. The new industry code was approved though it was held not to be a solution of exhibitor problems.

This and other code developments on page 17.

Off-Stage Noises

The Associated Actors and Artistes of America, the American Guild of Variety Artists and other members of the Four A's, were ordered on Wednesday by Justice Timothy A. Leary to show cause in New York supreme court on Friday why a temporary injunction should not be granted pending trial of a suit filed by the American Federation of Actors. The Federation suit reiterated the charges against the Four A board which have been made to the press in the past few weeks.

The complainants seek nine forms of relief: a decree vacating the revocation of Federation charter; declaration that the organization of the American Guild of Variety Artists is of no effect; damages from the defendant unions; order that no Federation member be denied privileges guaranteed under the Federation constitution; injunction against seizure of books or funds of the Federation or interference with its employer contracts; restraint against solicitation of Federation members to join the new Guild; injunction against threats to employers who refuse to contract with the Guild; injunction against solicitation of employers to breach Federation contracts; and injunction against proceeding under the Four A resolution or withholding credentials from the Federation or its members.

The story of the stage tempest leading up to the suit starts on page 59.

Code and Suits

More changes are anticipated in the fair trade practice program, as the result of complaints, but not rejection, by many of the country's exhibitor organizations, especially on the arbitration provisions. Major company sales executives, instrumental in forming the code, which has been rejected in its present form only by the national Allied States Association, amidst some division of sentiment in that organization itself, this week were "ironing out" final details, in New York City. Meanwhile, cognizant of the industry's efforts to regulate itself, the Department of Commerce continued this week to meet with industry leaders. The Department hopes to find a cure for the industry's evils; but it first wants to find out what the evils are.

Meanwhile, two new anti-trust suits, in which the majors are defendants along with local circuits and large operators, turned up in Frankfort, Ky., and Baltimore.

Developments are on page 17.

That Movie Quiz

The committee in charge of that Movie Quiz contest of the Motion Pictures Are Your Greatest Entertainment drive of last year, finally reported this week on the costs of the campaign, disclosing that from distributors they gathered contributions of $500,000 and another $488,000 from theatres, and of this they spent all but $92,587, which is now in the vaults of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company.

The audit is reported on page 34.

ASCAP Conference

Montana radio stations, in their continuing fight with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers over the latter's five per cent music fee, held a conference in Washington this week with their state's Senator Burton K. Wheeler and representatives of the society.

Present at the meeting, in addition to Senator Wheeler, were Gene Buck, president of the Society; Louis Frohlich, of Schwartz and Frohlich, ASCAP counsel; and Ed Craney and Phil Louchs, representing Montana's seven radio stations.

The Montana stations are now in the position of infringers, according to ASCAP spokesmen, as a notice was sent by the Society to the Montana group about a month ago saying that if the fees were not paid the stations would no longer receive permission to use ASCAP music.

Senator Wheeler, it is said, agreed that ASCAP was in the right, and asked that its representatives and those of the Montana stations try to agree on a new and workable plan.

Word from Washington that the long-dormant suit against the Society is again under consideration by the Department of Justice was denied by ASCAP representatives in New York Tuesday. Filed in New York several years ago, the case was sidetracked almost before the trial got well under way, to permit the negotiation of stipulations, and was never resumed.

Financing

Grand National-Educational is nearing the conclusion of negotiations for financing with which to obtain pictures from independent producers, reorganize its sales staff, the conclusion of negotiations for financing the sum is to come from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in a deal to be completed shortly. About $950,000 is to be procured from the Wall Street firm of Felt & Company. The stockholders of Educational and Grand National on Friday, in New York, approved the new financing plans.

The story is on page 66.

Summer Closings

The yearly closing of motion picture theatres for the summer months remained the same, or slightly less in number this year, with approximately 300 houses reported as closed. A desire on the part of exhibitors to "see the summer through," and the increase in air conditioned theatres are seen as responsible for the lack of any increase in closed houses over preceding years when as many as 500 were shuttered.

Reports from the field, and a listing of some of the houses closed, start on page 39.

Short Wave

Offsetting the propaganda programs being pumped into South America by the totalitarian states, notably Germany and Italy, the motion picture industry on Monday started to broadcast its own news of films and picture personalities by short wave through the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System. The same day saw the last of the sessions held in Washington by the Federal Communications Commission, at which, after cries of "censorship" had been raised within and without the radio industry, the Commission repealed its ruling requiring international broadcasting stations in the U. S. to transmit only programs "which will promote international good will, understanding and cooperation."

News of both programs and rulings is on page 45.

Hollywood Air Show

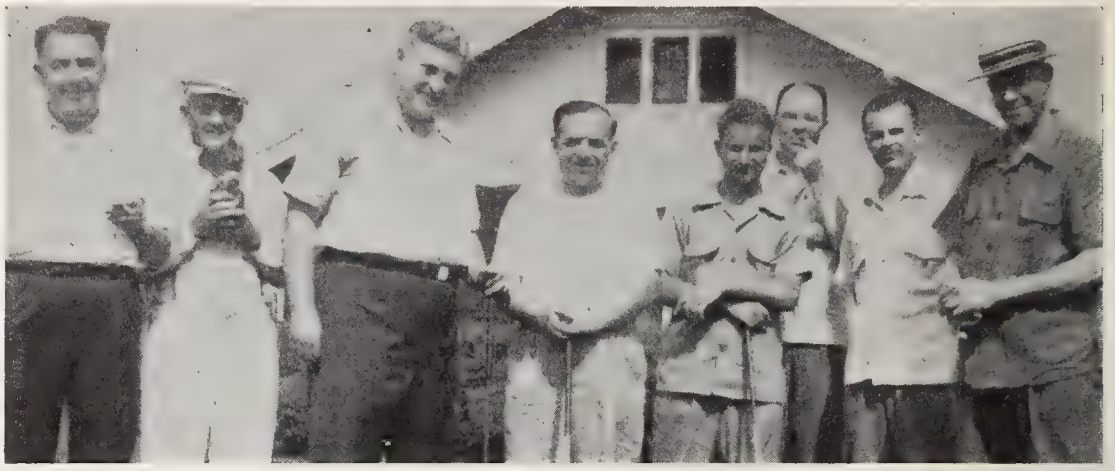
The Screen Guild show comes back to the air lanes on September 24, under the sponsorship of the Gulf Oil Corporation, over the Columbia Broadcasting System network. Last year the program earned $220,000 for the Motion Picture Relief Fund, of Hollywood; the new season program is expected to double the amount. The stars, writers and directors all contribute their services free. The company will donate $10,000 weekly to the Fund, and pay all costs of the program. Supporting the Fund, which will build a home for the indigents of the motion picture industry, are the Screen Actors' Guild, the Screen Writers' Guild and the Screen Directors' Guild. At the end of the new season the Fund will be above $500,000, it is expected.

Censorship

Censorship of movies, radio, the theatre and literature generally declined during the past year, reports the American Civil Liberties Union, in its annual summation of all censorship in this country, which adds that the films censored were almost entirely either foreign films or those independently produced in the U. S.

The Union's report is detailed on page 46.

Properties



The last six months witnessed an increase in the number of story properties purchased, rising from 230 bought from January through June in 1938, to 319 in the same period this year. During the month of June, 10 producers bought 43 properties, including several notable plays and books.

A listing of the month's purchases is on page 72.

90 FEATURES READY FOR START OF 1940 SEASON

Product Now Available for New Season Seen Largest Number and Widest Assortment of Pictures in Decade

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

Hollywood today stands ready to fortify exhibitors of the country with the largest number and one of the widest assortments of feature productions to be made available in a decade for the opening of a new show season.

Embracing some of the strongest productions on schedule for 1939-40, Hollywood's producers will have in the exchanges of their distribution affiliates a minimum of 90 and possibly 100 feature pictures for delivery to exhibitors on or around September 1st, when the new 1940 season officially opens. In some instances, distributors will start releasing the product even during August.

On Wednesday, not many days after 1939-40's last sales conventions had adjourned, Hollywood was making record progress substantiating with product tangibilities the flexible promises which had been put on paper by their sales managers in convention session for the enlightenment of their field sales forces as the salesmen packed contracts in portfolios on their way to sell exhibitor prospects.

Release Dates Set on Nearly Half

The results of a first-hand inspection of Hollywood studios show enough pictures already in the can, cutting, shooting or preparing to make satisfying news to exhibitors who at this time are dating their booking sheets for the new season's first quarter period.

Release dates have actually been set on nearly half of the pictures, running from August through September and into October, with a few in November. Other dates will be set daily from now on.

The positions of the "Big Five" are unusually favorable productwise. Paramount definitely will have 20 pictures ready for exhibitors to start the new 1940 program in September, Twentieth Century-Fox lining up at least 14, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at least 13, Warner Brothers, with a minimum of 12, and RKO Radio following along with at least 10. The conditions of the other producing companies is proportionate.

World political and economic conditions which narrowed the field of filming and of distribution for Hollywood's producers have wrought a change which during the coming months will be reflected in pronounced manner in the story and production character of Hollywood motion pictures. While there will be a number of productions which will make use of foreign themes and locales, the great majority of pictures will concern themselves with subjects of domestic interest—an "American pictures for Americans" trend. In them the whole gamut of entertainment possibilities will be treated. The various studios' greatest box office personalities will be featured and the story properties and technical arrangements will be the creations of Hollywood's ablest creative, player, director, producer and technical talents.

Pictures to Start Season

Listing but a few of the more important productions from which exhibitors will have opportunity to start their new show season, one finds Columbia starting off with Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," in which Mr. Capra furthers his idea of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," important at the box office some time ago. "Golden Boy" is another at Columbia. At MGM, there is "The Wizard of Oz," "The Return of the Thin Man," and King Vidor's "Northwest Passage," among 13 others.

Paramount mentions "The Cat and the Canary," "Geronimo"; RKO Radio points to its "Nurse Edith Cavell" and Joe Penner's "The Day the Bookies Wept." Important at Twentieth Century-Fox is "The Mark of Zorro," "Swanee River" and Irving Berlin's "Say It With Music." Samuel Goldwyn has "The Real Glory" for United Artists, David Selznick has "Intermezzo" and "Rebecca." At Universal, there is "The Underpup," "Rio" and Deanna Durbin's "First Love," while Warners point up to "The Sea Hawk," "Beethoven," "The Old Maid" and many others.

41 Features Shooting in Hollywood This Week As 14 Finish, 10 Start

Mid-summer finds Hollywood busier than it has been at this time in years, working practically all lots to wind up commitments of their distribution affiliates for 1938-39 and to get a long start on the 1939-40 season which opens on September 1st.

Forty-one pictures were shooting this week as 14 finished and ten started. Eighteen are being prepared and 81 are in the cutting room. Started were "Konga," "Prison Surgeon," and an untitled western; "Irish Luck," Monogram; "Untamed," Paramount; "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Alleghany Frontier," "Fighting Gringo," R.K.O.; "Outlawed Marshal," Universal.

In addition to these shooting were: "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," Columbia; "A Day at the Circus," "Ninatchka," "Blackmail," "Balalaika," M-G-M; "Are Husbands Necessary?" "Dr. Cyclops," "The Light That Failed," "Our Neighbors the Carters," "Seventeen," Paramount; "The Day The Bookies Wept," R-K-O; "Dick Tracy's G-Men," "Flight of Midnight," Republic; "Housekeeper's Daughter," Roach; "Intermezzo," Selznick; "Here I Am A Stranger," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Tin Hats," "City in Darkness," 20th-Fox; "The Underpup," "Modern Cinderella," "First Love," Universal; "Eternally Yours," Wagner; "On Your Toes," "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," "The Roaring Twenties," "We Are Not Alone," Warners.

Finished were: "The Man They Could Not Hang," Columbia; "Thunder Afloat," M-G-M; "Ruler of the Seas," "$1,000 a Touchdown," "Death of a Champion," Paramount; "Everything on Ice," Principal; "Full Confession," "Conspiracy," Radio; "Mob Fury," Republic; "Gone With the Wind," Selznick; "Frontier Marshal," 20th-Fox; "They Can't Hang Me," Universal; "Career Man," Warners.

Columbia

Hollywood studio product advances and New York home office product releasing arrangements for the beginning of 1939-40 follow, some companies starting to release the new season's product as early as late July—release dates being mentioned whenever they were available:

For the past several years, Columbia has looked to Frank Capra for its headlines. It is going to start off its 1939-40 season with one of his pictures, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." In idea this Capra production is a furtherance of the "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" theme, with the nation's capital and its political scene as its background. It will offer Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Beulah Bondi, Ruth Donnelly, Larry Sims and Thomas Mitchell as its principal names.

To follow the company will offer "Golden Boy," (August 31 release) a topical prize-fight story, adapted from a stage play which Rouben Mamoulian directed under William Perlberg's production supervision and in which Barbara Stanwyck, newcomer William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Joseph Calleia, Ed Brophy and Sam Levene will be featured.

"Coast Guard" (July 31 release) will be action-adventure entertainment, directed by Edward Ludwig and presenting Randolph Scott, Ralph Bellamy, Frances Dee, Walter Connolly and Warren Hymer.

These pictures have been finished.

"The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" (August 19 release), which stars Edith Fellows in the first of a series, is in work as is "The Man They Could Not Hang," an "eerie" mystery melodrama which will feature Boris Karloff.

To compensate for the loss of Mr. Capra, Columbia signed Frank Lloyd, Wesley Ruggles and has renewed Howard Hawks to produce. Mr. Hawks is starting shortly "The Bigger They Are," a topical romance drama, in which Cary Grant will be starred.

Location sites are presently being selected by Wesley Ruggles for his "Arizona."

Both of the above films will be released before the close of 1939.

MGM

Twelve of the 13 pictures which MGM will make available on or about September 1st for 1939-40 are in work and the other, "Lady of the Tropics" (August 4 release), romantic and melodramatic adventure in the South Seas, has been completed. Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr are the stars, and Jack Conway directed.

Among the MGM pictures to come is the in-color production of L. Frank Baum's fantasy, "The Wizard of Oz" (August 25 release). This Mervyn LeRoy production, which Victor Fleming directed, will present Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton and Charley Grapewin. Of course this company will release Selznick-International's "Gone With the Wind."

William Powell will return to the screen and rejoin Myrna Loy in "The Return of the Thin Man," which will be their first co-starring vehicle in two years.

With King Vidor directing, "Northwest Passage" is on location in Idaho. The picturization of the novel will feature Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan and Laraine Day.

Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell are the stars of "The Women" (September 1 release), a Hunt Stromberg production of Claire Booth's Broadway play, directed by George Cukor, which will offer an all-women cast.

Ernst Lubitsch is directing "Ninotchka," a story of international intrigue wherein Greta Garbo will return to the screen in the company of Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire, Sig Rumann, Alexander Grenach and Felix Bressart.

"Babes in Arms," a picturization of the Rogers and Hart musical-comedy which Busby Berkeley is directing, will star Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland with Charles Winninger, Grace Hayes, Betty Janes and June Pressier.

The Marx Brothers, with Florence Rice, Kenny Baker and Nat Pendleton, are the headliners in "A Day at the Circus," a Mervyn LeRoy comedy, which Eddie Buzzell is directing.

Exploitable names in "Balalaika," a romantic love story with music, are Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Walter Woolf King, Joyce Compton and Lionel Atwill.

George B. Seitz is directing "Thunder Afloat," a comedy melodrama of World War naval activities in which Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Regis Toomey, Carl Edmond, John Qualen, Clem Bevans, Douglas Dumbrille and Phillip Terry will be seen.

Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Guinn Williams, Bobs Watson, Gene Lockhart and Esther Dale head the cast in "Blackmail" (August 18 release), a topical crime melodrama.

As these pictures are in various production stages, rehearsals have begun for "Broadway Melody of 1940," in which Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell will be the dancing co-stars.

Monogram

Predicting that "the new season will be the biggest in the company's history," George Weeks, vice president in charge of sales for Monogram, arrived in Hollywood this week to disclose a 40 per cent increase in sales.

Product-wise, Monogram is pointing up to its "Rip Van Winkle," also to "His Father's Son," in which Martin Spellman and John Carroll will appear. "Rip" will be in color.

Instead of six pictures in the top bracket, the new Monogram program will have ten top pictures, the group being headed by a picture starring Jackie Cooper, as yet untitled, and the English "Tom Brown's Schooldays," also as a Cooper vehicle.

"Queen of the Yukon," adapted from Jack London's novel, will be another, to follow "Wolf Call."

Paramount

With 23 features completed and ready for release, "Paramount is enjoying the strongest backlog of product in its history," it was announced by William LeBaron, managing director of production, in Hollywood.

"All pictures remaining on the company's release schedule for the current quarter ending August 31st have been completed, as have all features except one for the first quarter of the 1939-40 season," Mr. LeBaron reported.

Productions awaiting release during the remainder of the current quarter—1938-39—are "Million Dollar Legs," "The Magnificent Fraud," "Island of Lost Men," "Night Work," "Our Leading Citizen," "The Renegade Trail," "This Man Is News" and "The Star Maker."

Already completed for the first quarter of the 1939-40 season are—"Death of a Champion," "The World on Parade," "Beau Geste," "$1,000 a Touchdown," "Range War," "What a Life," "Jamaica Inn," "Geronimo," "Disputed Passage," "Argentina," "The Cat and the Canary," "Llamo Kid" and "Rulers of the Sea."

Five in Work

Now in work for release during 1939-40 are: "Dr. Cyclops," featuring Janice Logan and Albert Dekker, directed by Ernest Schoedsack and produced by Dale Van Every; the William A. Wellman production, "The Light That Failed," starring Ronald Colman; "Our Neighbors—The Carters," starring Fay Bainter and Frank Craven with Ralph Murphy directing and Charles R. Rogers producing; "Seventeen," starring Jackie Cooper under the direction of Louis King and produced by Stuart Walker; and "Untamed," starring Ray Milland, Patricia Morison and Akim Tamiroff, with George Archainbaud directing and Paul Jones producing.

Of the 20 1939-40 pictures Paramount will have ready on or before September 1st, 11 have been completed, six are in the work and three will start this week. In this issue of Motion Picture Herald there is a showman's review of "Beau Geste" (September 15 release) to which the reader is referred for an opinion of what the studio considers one of its ace shows of the season. Six additional productions will be similarly treated shortly.

"The Cat and the Canary" (November 11 release), based on John Willard's play, which Elliott Nugent directed, will feature Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, John Beal and Douglass Montgomery with Gale Sondergaard, Nydia Westman, George Zulcco, Willard Robertson and Elizabeth Patterson.

The names in "What a Life" (October 13 release), a school-day comedy, are Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Janice Logan, Vaughan Glaser, Lionel Stander, Hedda Hopper, James Corner, Katheleen Lockhart and Lucien Littlefield.

The George Arthur production, "Happy Ending," a story of father-daughter love, which Louis Milestone directed, will feature Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna with Roland Young, Reginal Gardner, George E. Stone and Frank Sully.

"Disputed Passage" (October 27 release), a psychological study based on a novel by Louis Bromfield, which Frank Borzage directed, will have Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard, Gordon Jones, Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., and Elizabeth Patterson as its principals.

"Geronimo" (October 20 tentative release), a story of the Apache Indian fighter, will feature Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Gene Lockhart, William Henry, Ralph Morgan, Chief Thundercloud and Marjorie Gateson.

New Lloyd Picture Big

As Paramount is optimistic about "Beau Geste," there is also a feeling at the studio that Frank Lloyd's "Rulers of the Sea" (November 24 tentative release) will take high rank among the company's pictures of the new season. A story of the last days of sail and the first days of steamships on the ocean, it will feature Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the English artists Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyffe, and George Bancroft, David Torrence, Montague Love, Vaughan Glaser and Lester Matthews.

Just finished is "Are Husbands Necessary?" (September 29 tentative release), a comedy romance in which Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick, Osa Massen and Carolyn Lee will have most to do.

Likewise finished are "The Double Dyed Deceiver" (to be released as "The Llamo Kid," November 17), an O. Henry story with music, cast of which is headed by Tito Guizar, Emma Dunn, Alan Mowbray and Gale Sondergaard; and "Argentina" (November 3 tentative release), a "Hopalong Cassidy" story for William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna and Sydney Blackmer. Both films are Harry Sherman productions.

Two other finished productions are "The World On Parade" (tentative release September 8), in which will be pictured some things that might happen when television becomes practical and in which William Henry, Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., Richard Denning and Minor Watson are the principals, and "$1,000 a Touchdown" (September 22 tentative release), a topical football comedy in which the wide-mouthed Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye are the co-stars.

"The Light That Failed," an adaptation of a Rudyard Kipling story, which William Wellman is producing and directing, is one of the important pictures in active work. The cast is headed by Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Muriel Angelus, Ida Lupino, Dudley Digges, Ernest Cossart and Colin Tapley.

Down in Florida, Max Fleischer and his cartoonists and cartoon technicians are busy making the feature-length cartoon "Gulliver's Travels."

Back in the Paramount-Hollywood studio work is progressing under Ernest B. Schoedsack's direction on an adventure story, entitled "Dr. Cyclops," in which Albert Dekker, Janice Logan, Thomas Colen, Charles Halton and Victor Kilian will be featured.

HISTORICAL SUBJECTS PROMINENT

With Stuart Walker producing and Louis King directing, Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, Otto Kruger, Ann Shoemaker and Norma Nelson are making a new adaptation of Booth Tarkington's story of puppy love, "Seventeen."

The remaining activity, "Our Neighbors—The Carters," a Charles R. Rogers' production, story content of which deals with the problems of a typical American family living in a midwest city, will feature Fay Bainter and Frank Craven with Bennie Bartlett, Donald Brennan, Scott Beckett, Joyce Arleen, Gloria Carter, Edward McWade and Edmund Lowe.

Set to start this week are "Diamonds Are Dangerous," which will feature Isa Miranda and George Brent; "Federal Offense," another in the series of J. Edgar Hoover stories, and "Remember the Night," which will star Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray with Mitchell Leisen directing.

Republic

Having completed its 1938-39 program, Republic has started its new year line-up with "Flight At Midnight," an aviation adventure story in which flier Roscoe Turner will be featured.

RKO Radio

Four 1939-40 pictures have been completed by RKO-Radio.

The company will inaugurate its new releases with "Nurse Edith Cavell," the story of the English nurse-martyr, completed. Anna Neagle will be seen in the title role of this Herbert Wilcox production, which will also offer George Sander, Edna Mae Oliver, Jimmy Butler, May Robeson, Zasu Pitts, H. B. Warner, Fritz Leiber and Robert Coote for support.

"My Fith Avenue Girl" is a solo starring picture for Ginger Rogers, in which James Ellison, Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, Franklin Pangborn and Ferike Boros are featured.

Victor McLaglen is the star of "Full Confession," completed, theme of which is personal melodrama. Directed by John Farrow with Robert Sisk producing, the other players are Sally Eilers, Joseph Calleia, Barry Fitzgerald, Elisabeth Risdon, Adele Pearce and Bud McTaggart.

A Joe Penner comedy, "The Day the Bookies Wept," rounds out the completed films.

High-Budget Films

Two productions said to be of more than ordinary interest are in work. William Dieterle is directing Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden, Harry Davenport, Edmund O'Brien, Etienne Girardot, Fritz Leiber, Katherine Alexander and Minna Gombell in the Pandro S. Berman production of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Crowding this costly picture for studio space is "The First Rebel" (formerly "Alleghany Frontier"), another high-budget production. It will star John Wayne and Claire Trevor, with Cedric Hardwicke, Wilfred Lawson, Brian Donlevy, Bruce Cabot and Robert Barrat.

Slated to go into production within the next ten days are "Three Sons," a romantic story of mercantile business building; "Abe Lincoln In Illinois," the adaptation of Robert E. Sherwood's stage play, which Max Gordon and William Goetz will produce with Raymond Massey and Frances Dee starred and John Cromwell directing, and "Swiss Family Robinson," first of the newly-formed Gene Towne-Graham Baker "The Play's the Thing" productions.

20th Century-Fox

"Darryl Zanuck will inaugurate the beginning of the 1939-40 season with the biggest production schedule for one month's shooting in the history of the Twentieth Century-Fox studios," says a statement from the home office.

In August, two color pictures, "The Mark of Zorro," with Tyrone Power heading the cast, and Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," starring Shirley Temple, will go before the cameras and following them will come "Swanee River," with Don Ameche, Nancy Kelly and Al Jolson in the principal roles; the Irving Berlin musical, "Say It With Music," and "Part-Time Wife," starring Warner Baxter.

Work on "Here I Am a Stranger," which was postponed on account of the injury to Richard Greene, also will be resumed and the production of Sonja Henie's first picture for the new season, "Everything Happens At Night"; the "Brigham Young" picture and "Grapes of Wrath" will be going forward in August.

Twentieth Century-Fox already has six of its bigger pictures completed or nearing the final shooting stage. These include "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women," which will be the first release of the new season; "Stanley and Livingston," "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "The Rains Came" and "Drums Along the Mohawk."

Sol Wurtzel, executive producer, has his part of the 1939-40 season equally well under way. He has already completed or in the cutting room the following pictures: "The Chicken Wagon Family," the first Jane Withers' vehicle; "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island"; "The Escape," formerly titled "East Side, West Side," "Stop, Look and Love" and The Jones Family in "Quick Millions."

Director Henry King has already brought in "Stanley and Livingston" (August 18 release), romance and adventure in Africa, which will feature Spencer Tracy, Nancy Kelly, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Hull and Henry Travers. Before that director Gregory Ratoff had finished Elsa Maxwell's "Hotel For Women" (August 4 release). A modern romance drama, it will have Miss Maxwell, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Ann Sothern, John Halliday, Lynn Bari, Katherine Aldridge, Alan Dinehart, Jean Rogers, June Gale, Joyce Compton, Mary Healy and Amanda Duff as its principals.

Work has been practically completed on "The Rains Came" (October 13 release), a Louis Bromfield novel, locale of which is India. The cast includes Myrna Loy, George Brent, Tyrone Power, Joseph Schildkraut, Jane Tarwell, Henry Travers, Marie Ouspenskaya, H. B. Warner, Nigel Bruce, Marjorie Rombeau, Laura Hope Crews and Abner Biberman.

Meanwhile, with John Ford directing, work has just started on "Drums Along the Mohawk," adaptation of the novel, in which Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, John Carradine, Eddie Collins and Doris Bowdon will be seen.

Director Irving Cummings is pushing his history of Hollywood, "Hollywood Cavalcade" (September 15 release), toward completion. Don Ameche and Alice Faye are the stars of today who will be featured along with J. Edward Bromberg, Stuart Erwin, George Givot, Buster

STRESS ACTION AND ADVENTURE

Keaton, Chick Chandler and Lynn Bari and scores of notables who were once great on the Hollywood scene.

While Jane Withers' "Chicken Wagon Family" (August 11 release) is finished, the young star is working with the Ritz Brothers and Lynn Bari in "Tin Hats."

In another series picture the same condition prevails. "Charlie Chan At Treasure Island" (September 8 release) has been finished and "Charlie Chan In the City of Darkness" is in the work.

The second production of a Conan Doyle story, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (September 1 release), is presently engaging the attention of Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino, Alan Marshall and Terry Kilburn under Al Werker's direction, as is "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," in which Glenn Ford, Nick Conti, Jean Rogers and Raymond Walburn will be featured.

Monday, "20,000 Men a Year" (September 29 release), a modern topical political military story started.

United Artists

In this group, Samuel Goldwyn is nearing the finish line with "The Real Glory," a story of adventure and romance in the Philippine Islands just after the Spanish-American War. Handled by director Henry Hathaway, this bit of Goldwynana, upon which they say he has spent upwards of $1,000,000, will present Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven, Reginald Owen, Broderick Crawford, Maurice Moscovitch, Vladimir Sokoloff, Thurston Hall and Russell Hicks, among others. Mr. Goldwyn plans to begin "Raffles" with David Niven and Olivia de Havilland immediately.

Now that all that remains to be done with "Gone With the Wind"—(his Metro release)—is make a few pick-up shots and figure out how to cut approximately 450,000 feet of color negative footage down to somewhere between 15,000 and 20,000 feet, Mr. David O. Selznick who has "Intermezzo" under way for United Artists, is planning to start "Rebecca."

"Intermezzo," a melodramatic romance with music will present Leslie Howard with screen debutante Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best, Cecil Kellaway, Ann Todd, John Halliday and Enid Bennett.

As for "Rebecca," which Alfred Hitchcock will produce and direct, it will star Lawrence Olivier.

Walter Wanger's first contribution to the 1939-40 U. A. program will be "Eternally Yours," "a weird and mysterious melodrama," upon which he is now working with Tay Garnett directing. Loretta Young, the busy David Niven, Hugh Herbert, C. Aubrey Smith, Zasu Pitts, Raymond Walburn, Eve Arden and Virginia Field will be seen.

Hal Roach has completed a Laurel and Hardy featurette, "Chump At Oxford" and at the moment has Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, George E. Stone, Peggy Wood, Lillian Bond and Marc Lawrence occupied making "The Housekeeper's Daughter," under his own direction.

Also on the way (they say) is Charlie Chaplin's "The Dictators."

Completed for release are "Winter Carnival," with Ann Sheridan and Richard Carlson (July 28 release); "Four Feathers" (August 4 release), with John Clements and June Duprez; "The Man in the Iron Mask" (August 11 release); "They Shall Have Music" (August 18 release), the music of which is described by Joseph O'Sullivan on page 54, this issue. It is Jascha Heifetz' picture, with Andrea Leeds; and, "Over the Moon," with Merle Oberon and Rex Harrison.

Universal

Two pictures now in work at Universal to be ready for Sepembter delivery are Joe Pasternak productions: "The Underpup" (September 1 release), a story of turmoil in a girls' school, which will present Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, Gloria Jean, Margaret Lindsay, Beulah Bondi, Raymond Walburn, Ann Gillis, Virginia Weidler, Ernest Truex, Doris Lloyd, C. Aubrey Smith and Shirley Mills and Deanna Durbin's "First Love" (August 25 release), in which Robert Stack and Lewis Howard will make their feature screen debuts. The support includes Helen Parrish, Eugene Pallette, Spring Byington, Marcia Mae Jones and Jack Mulhall.

Meanwhile "Rio" (September 22 release), which is planned to be one of the studio's most ambitious undertakings of the year, started this week. John Brahm is directing and Sigrid Gurie is starred with Basil Rathbone, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo and Victor McLaglan heading the support.

Then there's "Mutiny on the Blackhawk" (September 1 release), with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore and Noah Beery; "Bad Company" (September 8 release), featuring Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew and Melville Cooper; "Desperate Trails" (September 8 release), with Johnnie Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight, Frances Robinson and Russel Simpson; "Hawaiian Holiday" (September 15 release), and a cast consisting of Matty Malneck and Orchestra, Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Eddie Quillan.

Warners

Warner Brothers on Tuesday announced it will place ten top-budget pictures in work during August, September and October. This was decided following conferences between Jack L. Warner and Hal B. Wallis, who had just returned from a two-months' trip in Europe.

Tentative lineup is as follows:

"The Sea Hawk," starring Errol Flynn with Olivia de Havilland. Michael Curtiz will direct.

"And It All Came True," based upon the Louis Bromfield novel, with James Stewart, Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart as possibilities.

"The Army, the Navy and the Girl," featuring Wayne Morris, Gale Page, Rosemary Lane, Henry O'Neill and Dennis Morgan.

"Beethoven," starring Paul Muni.

"City of Iron Men," starring James Cagney.

"The Fighting 69th," starring Pat O'Brien with a cast including Ronald Reagan.

"Forgive Us Our Trespasses," with a cast topped by Fay Bainter and Geraldine Fitzgerald.

"Four Wives," with John Garfield, Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson and Gale Page.

"Gusher," starring Edward G. Robinson.

"The Patent Leather Kid," starring George Raft with Jane Bryan.

Warners have nine pictures ready to place on the September 1st "firing line."

With one exception, they are Class "A."

Bette Davis will be starred in two, "The Old Maid," and "The Lady and The Night." The first picture is a story of frustrated mother love, in which she will have the company of George Brent, Miriam Hopkins, Jane Bryan, Donald Crisp, James Stephenson, Jerome Cowan, Louis Fazenda, William Lundigan and Cecilia Loftus. The second is another version of the Queen Elizabeth and Essex story. Here Miss Davis will be seen with Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniells, Vincent Price and others in a Michael Curtiz-directed production.

"A Child Is Born," which is a modernized recreation of "Life Begins," will be seen again with such players as Jeffrey Lynn, Gale Page, Gladys George, Spring Byington, Johnnie Davis, Gloria Holden, Henry O'Neill and Nanette Farabes. Lloyd Bacon directed.

The fearsome "Dr. Xavier" will be seen again in "The Return of Dr. X." as Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Lya Lys, John Litel, Charles Wilson and Huntz Hall are the screen characters.

In "Dust Be My Destiny," a modern problem play which Lew Seiler directed, John Garfield, Priscilla Lane, Alan Hale, Charles Grapewin, Henry Armetta, Stanley Ridges, Billy Halop and Bobby Jordan will be seen.

More recently made pictures that the company will have ready are: "Career Man," Joel McCrea, Jerry Lynn and Brenda Marshall; "On Your Toes," Eddie Albert, Zorina, Allan Hale, Frank McHugh, James Gleason and Queenie Smith; "Kid Nightingale," John Wayne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett and Ed Brophy and "The Dead End Kids at Military School," in which the original "Dead Enders" will be seen with Frankie Thomas, John Litel, Cissie Loftus and Selmar Jackson.

Last week, the studio started three pictures. "We Are Not Alone" will team Paul Muni and Dolly Hass with Flora Robson, Una O'Connor and Raymond Severn in the principal roles. Edmund Goulding is the director. The cast for "The World Moves On" may be released as "The Roaring 20's," is headed by James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and Frank McHugh working with director Raoul Walsh. In "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," the picturization of a story written by Warden Lewis E. Lawes which Anatole Litvak is directing, John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith, Leo Gorcey, Jerome Cowan and Willard Robertson will be seen.

Distribution Contract Not Assignable, Says Court

A contract for the distribution of a film is personal, and not assignable, since it involves "the rendition of a special service in a field in which the elements of integrity and honesty are of primary importance," according to a decision handed down recently in the New York surrogate's court, in the action brought by the Lina Picture Corporation against the estate of Martin Johnson, explorer and film producer.

The plaintiff, to which had been assigned the rights to properties of the original company distributing Mr. Johnson's film "Across the World," claimed damages of upward of $20,000 for the allegedly illegal failure of Mr. Johnson to provide the negative of his film to them. The original firm with which Mr. Johnson had made a distribution contract, Motion Picture Epics, Inc., had gone into bankruptcy, and stored the negative with the film storage concern which notified Mr. Johnson, now deceased, that the negative would be sold for storage charges. Mr. Johnson then paid the charges and took the negative into his possession, never having approved the assignment of rights to the Lina Corporation.

Joseph C. Keeley is the new publicity director for the J. M. Mathes agency.

CODE REVISION CONTINUES; OWNERS CONFER WITH U. S.; NEW TRUST SUITS

Northern Ohio Owners Reject Trade Program; Others To Vote; Commerce Dept. Holds More Talks with Exhib. Leaders

The major distributors' trade practice committee men, William F. Rodgers, chairman, still are laboring on a revision of the code's arbitration agreement, continuing meetings which have been going on for two weeks in New York. There has been no disclosure of the nature of the changes to be made. Many of the complaints coming from independent owners have centered around the personnel structure of the arbitration boards that were proposed, the owners demanding larger representation of their interests on the panels.

Some 17 or 18 sales managers and company counsel will gather again on Friday morning at the Nimrod Room in New York's Astor Hotel for a climactic session on the revisions.

Wednesday morning, Mr. Rodgers met with Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, on Mr. Kuykendall's demands for a "showdown" on setting a date for enacting the code. "The plan should have been in effect long ago," he said. "The longer the distributors delay the more exhibitors will lose confidence in them." He reported MPTOA state unit reactions to the code to Mr. Rodgers, and left with him additional changes in the code which he said the MPTOA thinks necessary. The two will meet again Monday.

To Equalize Vote

It is considered probable that the revisions will result in reducing the arbitration board votes of affiliated circuits and distributors to one half vote each, instead of a full vote, thus giving the full vote of the independent board member equalization. In any event, the committee continues determined not to discuss publicly any phase of its conversations pending completion of the revised draft. It was learned, however, that clearance disputes is a subject.

Meanwhile, Mr. Rodgers declared that he is as "optimistic as ever" about the code's chances of being effected in the near future. Favoring a fair trial, as he has from the beginning of the document's formulation, Mr. Rodgers said that, while "there are many who would like to see the code abandoned, I know from numerous messages received daily that by far the larger number of exhibitors are anxious to see it given a fair chance." Because of a "favorable response" being received from owners, Mr. Rodgers said he will not find it necessary to tour various territories to get support for the code, as originally intended.

Motion Picture Herald's series of "De-Coding the Code," as written by Louis Nizer, New York motion picture attorney, continues this week, on page 64, where the clauses of the arbitration agreement are analyzed for exhibitors.

Related to motion picture distribution-exhibition practices is the Senate passage, Monday, of the Neely block and blind selling bill, which is reported on page 31.

Ohio Rejects Code, Others Set Votes

Independent exhibitors of northern Ohio, meeting last Friday in Cleveland, unanimously voted approval of the national organization's rejection of the fair trade practice code.

In Omaha, the MPTO of Nebraska resolved, two weeks ago, not to act "definitely" on the code. Charles Williams, president, asserted that the code would be voted upon at the organization's convention in the Fall.

Opinion during the meeting was that the code had "good and bad points," and that the latter might be eliminated by the time the annual convention voted upon it. Reported attempts by distributors to increase rentals to compensate for the increased cancellation privileges granted by the code, caused resentful talk during the meeting.

In Boston, the Independent Exhibitors, Allied unit for New England, were to meet on next Tuesday, at the Statler Hotel, though it was reported at mid-week that there might be a postponement. Because of the inter-Allied dispute concerning the methods by which the national convention at Minneapolis on June 13, had rejected the code, speeches of Al Steffes, William F. Rodgers, Nate Yamins, Colonel Henry Cole, Gradwell Sears, Abe Montague and others who talked to the national convention, were to be played to the meeting over a public address system; so that those who did not attend the national convention could decide the merits of the question.

THEATRES ASK FOR CLEARANCE CUTS

Neighborhood house operators in many large cities are asking reduced clearances between the runs of their houses and the first runs, in answer to new season efforts by disributors to gain increased revenues from neighborhoods this year, the Motion Picture Daily reported last week. So far, the majors have frowned upon the suggestions, it is said. The move would only reduce first run patronage and revenue, they claim.

In advancing their new counter suggestion, neighborhood exhibitors are saying, in effect, that any loss of revenue from first runs during the past few years is compensated for by the increase in the number of neighborhood houses. It is pointed out that in the past 10 years' building has been almost entirely concentrated on neighborhood theatres. In that time, it is said, no new first runs of importance, were built in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco, Cincinnati, and other large cities. In New York, the Music Hall erected some eight years ago, is the last de luxe theatre to have been built.

Commerce Department Continues Film Talks

Heads of the three major exhibitor organizations this week told Department of Justice officials what the theatre owners of the country think of the manner in which distributor policies are applied, completing for the time being the series of conferences initiated last month between Department and industry leaders in an effort to improve conditions in the film industry. Through conferences with Harry Brandt, IOTA

Independent Exhibitors in Baltimore, Texas, and Frankfort, Ky., Cite Majors for Alleged Violation of U. S. Trust Laws

New attacks against the major distributors and circuits for alleged anti-trust law violations were begun this week by independents in Baltimore, Texas, and Frankfort, Ky., after several weeks of comparative quiet.

$75,000 Asked

In Frankfort, seven major companies and a local circuit were named defendants in a $75,000 conspiracy suit filed in Federal District Court by the New Theatre operators, Harry Schwartz and George Myers.

Defendants are Twentieth Century Fox, Republic, MGM, Irving Trust Company, as receivers for RKO, Paramount, United Artists, Frankfort Amusement Company and various of its principals.

Allegations are that the New Theatre was damaged by the alleged conspiracy to the extent of $25,000; but that the Sherman anti-Trust Act, under which the suit is being brought, allows the plaintiff to recover triple the amount of damages sustained.

The conspiracy is alleged to have consisted of the refusal of the defendants to allow any but the amusement company named as defendant, to play first, second, and third run films.

In Baltimore, the Westway Theatre, Inc., has filed suit against the six majors, four individuals, and one theatre company, charging violation of the Sherman anti-trust Act.

The suit was brought by Leon Homand, vice-president of Wesyway. Defendants are Twentieth Century Fox, Columbia, Loew's, Paramount, United Artists, Vitagraph, Universal, Lyndhurst Corporation, Frank H. Durkee, C. Elmer Nolte, Sr., Walter Pacy, and Harry Reddish.

Specifically, the suit involves clearance it alleges that before the Westway was built, its operator was assured by the defendants that it would have first run films, but that the Edgewood Theatre was now getting 14 day's clearance over the Westway.

In Houston, Texas, Joy Amusement Company filed a Sherman anti-trust suit in United States District Court, against two circuits and eight distributors, charging that they prevented it from exhibiting first class features in its theatres.

Defendants, from whom damages of $17,366.31 are asked, include Interstate Circuit, Inc., Horwitz-Texan Theatres Co., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corp. of Texas, RKO Radio Pictures, Republic Pictures Corp. of Texas, Loew's, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Columbia Pictures Corp., Vitagraph, Inc., and 20th Century-Fox Film Corp.

Illinois Law May Alter Trust Case

Although no official statements have been made, it is believed that should Governor Henry Horner sign the bill which would limit film programs in Illinois theatres to two hours and fifteen minutes, the suit filed last summer by Chicago independent exhibitors against Balaban and Katz and the major film companies may be dropped.

The primary reason back of the filing of the suit was to stop double features. The bill just passed by the state legislature and awaiting the Governor's signature is expected to stop president, on Tuesday, Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied president, on Wednesday, and Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, on Thursday, Dr. Willard L. Thorp, assistant to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins; Ernest Tupper, chief Department statistician, and Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture section, were informed of the views of those groups as to the current situation.

Mr. Brandt has consistently opposed the regulation of the motion picture industry by government, and especially, the passage of the bill by Senator Matthew F. Neely, prohibiting block booking and blind selling, which was passed by the Senate on Monday. Mr. Brandt has insisted upon the necessity for accepting the trade practice code, with amendments, rather than its corollary, as he see it, of government regulation.

Lionel Toll, who accompanied Mr. Brandt, told a membership meeting of the ITOA in New York Wednesday that the Commerce Department officials were highly sympathetic and that the ITOA discussion included opposition to the Neely Bill, theatre labor condiitons, legislation and arbitration.

The Department's conferences with industry leaders is attributed, not to any desire to intervene in the present Department of Justice anti-trust actions, nor to any of the far fetched reasons given wide quotation in the lay press (one such, seeing a conference to promote good will in other countries by use of motion picture) but merely to the desire to see the industry harmonious. The Department is described, by observers, as approaching the problem in the manner of a doctor. To make a diagnosis, it must have all the complaints. Then it may suggest a course of action.

Practices To Be Studied

Specifically, the Department wants to find out whether criticised practices in the industry are necessary to its continued operation; whether is essential, such practices can be modified; whether they are harmful; whether, if harmful, they can be substituted for.

Besides declaring itself unwilling to entertain any suggestion of intervening in the Government anti-trust actions, the Department of Commerce has also declared its neutrality in the present motion picture legislation now before Congress.

Its "absolutely neutral" stand is shown, Department officials emphasize, by the invitations, not only to exhibition, but to distribution—and not only to Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who was in Washington several weeks ago, and to Mr. Brandt, but also to Colonel Henry Albert Cole, president of the National Allied States Associaiton, chief dissident exhibitor organization, and the only national organization which rejected the trade practice code.

Colonel Cole, was in Washington on Wednesday, for conferences at the Department. He arrived on Tuesday, and held prior talks with Abram F. Myers, general counsel to the National Allied. Mr. Myers on Monday, intimated that, in view of the passage by the Senate of Senator Neely's bill, that Allied would accept the Department invitation to a conference. However, it had previously been reported that Allied had rejected the invitation. No confirmation, no comment concerning this was forthcoming from the Allied leaders, beyond the mere statement that the pending Neely bill had preference in their consideration. Colonel Cole on Wednesday, however, promised the cooperation of Allied to the Government in its attempt to clarify industry conditions.

Mr. Myers last week had said that the Department of Commerce conferences with industry leaders was an attempt by the majors to "play one department against the other," meaning the Commerce Department against the Department of Justice, which is still prosecuting its anti-trust suits against the majors. Mr. Myers had in mind the fact that the first conference called by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins invited, not exhibitor leaders, but instead the leaders of the major distributors.

Commenting upon the whole affair, Mr. Myers said:

"What's the sense of proceeding with investigation of the motion picture industry by the Commerce Department, when the Justice Department has been investigating all along?"

Meanwhile, Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, met Thursday with the Department as the head of a delegation that included Oscar Lam, of Rome, Georgia; Lewen Pizor, president of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners; Stanley Sumner, of Cambridge, Mass.; Walter Vincent, of New York; and Sidney Lust, of Washington. Mr. Kuykendall has been in Washington this week.

Law May Remove Chicago Suit Basis

twin bills. Thus the need for the suit would, mainly, be unnecessary.

The other things sought in the suit filed by the independents through their attorneys, Rosenberg and Stein, would be taken care of in an anti-trust suit filed against the same defendants by the Government, charging violation of a consent decree handed down in Federal Court here in 1932. The decision regarding this case will materially affect the other suit, it is thought. At present the trial of this case has been postponed until September. It is being heard by Edgar Eldredge, Master-in-Chancery. The hearings in the independent suit before Federal Judge James Wilkerson have also been postponed until late in September.

The limitations bill passed by the state legislature is now being inspected by Attorney General Cassidy regarding its legal status. If the attorney general approves it and the Governor signs, test cases will be started at once to establish its legality.

In Chicago last week, Edward Zorn, president of the United Exhibitors' Association, newly formed, asked "downstate" exhibitors in Illinois to wire Governor Horner in protest against the bill.

Add Members to Picture Pioneers

Terry Ramsaye, Leon Netter and Harry Buxbaum were added to the executive committee of the Picture Pioneers, at a luncheon meeting in the Hotel Astor, New York, on Wednesday, over which Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, presided.

The first conference resulted in a decision to hold a second one in September.

Mr. Cohn said that the charter membership list would remain open to that conference. New members are Phil Reisman, William Fox, Joseph Rothman, J. A. Hopfenberg, Charles J. Gribbon, Lou Rydell, Bert Ennis, Adolph Haas, David A. Levy, Nat Beier, Elmore D. Heins, W. N. Skirball, Henri Elman, Allen Freedman and Morris Joseph.

"Book Night" A New Stunt

"Book Night," a new theatre giveaway, has appeared in Milwaukee, and is about to be brought into Chicago. The plan calls for distribution of books in return for coupons which patrons obtain with admission tickets. The Consolidated Book Publishers, a branch of the Cuneo Press, is the originator of the idea.

At present, one volume of the Standard American Encyclopedia is being given away for every two coupons, plus 10 cents, but patrons may obtain a "de-luxe" edition by paying 25 cents.

In the Tower and Oriental theatres, Milwaukee, both neighborhood houses with 25 and 35-cent admissions, over 8,000 patrons have received volumes one and two. Business at both houses was reported considerably boosted by the new stunt. Exploitation preceded its introduction.

Consolidated Book Publishers, with offices in Chicago, has advertised the idea in the newspapers of Chicago and Milwaukee. In the latter city every daily paper carried full column ads, three columns wide, including a coupon to be used in getting the first volume.

In the theatres, the method of handling the idea so far has been to set up a counter upon which the books are displayed, and in back of which girl attendants hand out the books for coupons and the money. Proponents of the plan claim it is entirely legal under lottery laws.

Plan Theatre in Jacksonville

The first independent exhibitor to definitely announce plans for building a new theatre in opposition to Fox West Coast owing to the availability of Warner Brothers product is P. W. Dickson, who will erect a 1,000 seat house at Jacksonville, Ill., according to Warners. Several new theatres are also planned in the Los Angeles territory; assured of Warner product, J. Pennington is remodelling his two houses at Topeka, Kan., Warners say.

Hartmann Gets Three Houses

George Hartmann, who operates the Armour, North Kansas City; the Lee, Lees Summit, Mo.; the State and Delphus, Mound City, Mo.; and the Jayhawk, Kansas City, Kansas—has taken the Plaza and Little Plaza theatres at Lamar, Mo., and the Plaza, at Greenfield, Mo. The theatres were obtained from A. J. Simmons, who is temporarily retiring from the business, and is on vacation in California.

Griffith Acquires Three

Operation of the Booth and Paramount, Nebraska City, Neb., and the Booth, Auburn, Neb., have been taken over by the Griffith-Dickinson Circuit of Kansas City. Robert Booth, who has been associated with W. W. Booth in the operation of the houses, will remain at Nebraska City as city manager.

Danz Takes Orpheum

John Danz, Pacific Northwest theatre chain operator, will take over the Orpheum, Portland, Oregon, on August 1. He is the operator of about 40 theatres.

CHARLES CHAPLIN

Chaplin's first all-talking picture — Chaplin's first picture in three years — based on the most timely, most important topic in the world today, is now in production. CHARLES CHAPLIN in "THE GREAT DICTATOR", the season's big-news picture, will climax the magnificent career of the greatest of all screen stars. In connection with his plans, Mr. Chaplin says: "I am making a comedy picture on the lives of dictators which I hope will create much healthy laughter throughout the world."

ALEXANDER KORDA

Five big, important scope pictures — all of them in the breathless beauty of final Technicolor perfection—will comprise Alexander Korda's box-office activities for 1939-40. First: FOUR FEATHERS . . . 7,200 seconds of flesh-and-blood excitement, filmed in actual locales in the heart of Africa, bringing authentic thrills no screen has ever held before. Directed by Zoltan Korda with Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith, John Clements and June Duprez. Second Korda hit: OVER THE MOON, giving Merle Oberon, star of "Wuthering Heights", her first comedy role in a story by Robert E. Sherwood. Third Korda hit: THE THIEF OF BAGDAD starring Sabu, Conrad Veidt and John Justin in a spectacle that promises to have the most unique appeal in years. Fourth Korda hit: Merle Oberon in SINNER, with Laurence Olivier, from "Manon Lescaut", the famous love story of a passion-swept man and woman. And Fifth: Kipling's THE JUNGLE BOY with Sabu in the title role.

Douglas Fairbanks resumes his production activities by presenting THE CALIFORNIAN, the kind of colorful, romantic, action picture which in the past made his own starring vehicles so sensationally successful at the ticket window. Now in the role of producer, instead of star, Mr. Fairbanks will soon announce a cast of vigorous marquee strength for this production based on the dramatic career of Lola Montez, dancer, adventuress and sweetheart of kings. The exploits of this exotic woman in the pioneer country of Southern California constitute one of the strangest and most glamorous stories in history.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

SAMUEL GOLDWYN

Samuel Goldwyn Standards of Showmanship — Samuel Goldwyn Business — will be even higher this year than it was with "Wuthering Heights", "The Hurricane", "Dead End" or "Stella Dallas". For Goldwyn starts your new picture season with a new note in entertainment — Jascha Heifetz in [illegible] with Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan and Gene Reynolds, directed by Archie Mayo. Back of this picture is the specific purpose of attracting new patronage for you thru the magic music of Heifetz, with all your regulars revelling in a down-to-earth story of kids with dirty faces and hungry hearts. Mr. Goldwyn's next picture will be Gary Cooper in a fighting role in [illegible] with Andrea Leeds and David Niven, under the direction of Henry Hathaway . . . a roaring thrill-and-action picture of American soldiers in the Philippines, always outnumbered . . . never outfought.

Famous for his showmanship innovations, Wanger leads off with WINTER CARNIVAL starring Ann Sheridan, the most exploitable star since he gave you Hedy Lamarr in "Algiers". This picture of winter sports, youth and fun, takes you behind the scenes at Dartmouth when 1,500 wild women hit the campus. Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong, Marsha Hunt, James Corner and Alan Baldwin give additional cast interest, with Charles R. Riesner directing. Next will be Joan Bennett in THE HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY the story of a woman who dared hope for love while her man was in Alcatraz. MY PERSONAL LIFE by Vincent Sheean takes a reporter around an action-teeming world. ETERNALLY YOURS starring Loretta Young and directed by Tay Garnett, gives your audience the hilarious low-down on a magician with every trick up his sleeve except how to manage his women. Fifth from Wanger will be SEND ANOTHER THEFT by F. G. Presnell, with more laughs per murder than "The Thin Man".

WALTER WANGER

From the greatest stories of today and yesterday, the producer of "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "The Man in the Iron Mask", has shaped his new season's plans. Half a million readers of Howard Spring's best-selling novel, MY SON, MY SON!, are waiting for cast announcements on this story of two fathers and their dreams for their boys. Twelve thousand exhibitors are cooperating with Mr. Small on a direct-to-the-public poll for star selections. TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST by Richard Henry Dana, translated into 25 languages and reaching a book sale of 1,320,000 copies, will follow. Then watch for THE HOUSE OF MONTE CRISTO, unfolding the further amazing exploits of the most fabulous character ever written into a book or pictured on the screen; KIT CARSON based on the career of the colorful frontier hero and adapted from the newspaper serial read by 17,000,000 Hearst readers; SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO, a big production of tropic glamour; and finally VALENTINO, the life of the greatest of all popular idols, an idea which has brought Mr. Small congratulatory letters from thousands of exhibitors.

HAL ROACH

Hal Roach's five special feature productions cover the entire range of audience interest from gay laughter to stark drama. First will be a slight case of murder involving the only girl who's got more than the farmer's daughter—THE HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, from the novel by Donald Henderson Clarke, co-starring Joan Bennett and Adolphe Menjou with Peggy Wood. Next the famous novel and play that shocked a million people by its realism, OF MICE AND MEN, by John Steinbeck, author of "The Grapes of Wrath". Lewis Milestone will direct. Thorne Smith, author of the "Topper" novels in TURNABOUT tells hilariously about a husband and wife who change places and sexes. For adventure follow CAPTAIN CAUTION by Kenneth Roberts, author of "Northwest Passage". And then the startling, astounding 1,000,000 B. C., dramatizing the birth of civilization at the dawn of time . . with special effects by Lewis Tallhurst who took similar credit on "The Good Earth". In addition to these five specials, LAUREL & HARDY will be re-united in FOUR A-REEL FEATURES to carry them to new heights of popularity.

The box-office astuteness of SOL LESSER as a production expert is well known to every exhibitor. The box-office distinction of ERNST LUBITSCH as a director is recognized wherever pictures play. These two names are linked for the first time by UNITED ARTISTS which is happy to add them to its list of eminent producers. Mr. Lubitsch will personally direct an untitled ERNST LUBITSCH PRODUCTION, details of which will soon be announced. Mr. Lesser will produce the Pulitzer Prize Play of 1938, OUR TOWN by Thornton Wilder. Our Town is every American town superbly charged with humanness, romance and dramatic simplicity...so appealing that Alexander Woollcott said: "In all my days as a theatregoer, no play moved me so deeply."

ERNST LUBITSCH · SOL LESSER

It is with a very special pride that UNITED ARTISTS welcomes to its organization a distinguished member of a distinguished motion picture family who have contributed their talents abundantly to the benefit of the film industry.

DAVID L. LOEW brings to production a thorough, practical knowledge of theatres and theatre problems through years of experience in actual theatre operation. His long studio activity, too, has proved dramatically his qualifications as a top UNITED ARTISTS producer. His first release will be the picturization of A CELEBRATED PLAY now in the final stages of negotiation.

Watch for the early announcement of its famous title and the stars who will appear in its cast.

SENATE CUTS PARTY LINE TO PASS NEELY BILL BY VOTE OF 46 TO 28

Passage Marked by Sharp Debate on Senate Floor; Washington Sees Little Chance of House Taking Action

Six months of unremitting effort on the part of Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, Democrat, of West Virginia, culminated successfully for him Monday, when the United States Senate, by a vote of 46 to 28, approved his bill outlawing block booking and blind selling.

The reluctance with which the Senate approved the measure, requiring nearly eight hours of debate and piling up 28 adverse votes, was in contrast with the ease with which the measure was passed through the same body last session. Last year's vote, however, was an unrecorded voice vote, this year's was the first recorded roll-call.

The measure has still to be approved by the House of Representatives, but, in view of the efforts now being made to bring the Congressional session to an early conclusion, there is little chance that any action will be taken on the bill this year, according to Washington observers, who point out that after the Senate voted last year, the bill never emerged from the House committee for a floor vote.

In Committee

The bill reached the House Tuesday and was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. House leaders Tuesday indicated that, barring unforeseen developments, the bill would make no further progress this session.

If brought up in the House next year, it was said, an effort will be made to expand the scope of the measure to divorce exhibition from production, but there is said to be considerable doubt whether Congressional leaders would stand for such legislation, which would be a precedent for the introduction of similar divorce legislation for other industries in which producers also engage in retail trade.

Present in the galleries as the measure was debated were Burt New, Washington representative of the Havs office; Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA; Carter Barron, Loew's Washington theatre executive; Henry R. Atkinson of the Boston chapter of the Motion Picture Research Council, and representatives of several other organizations interested in the legislation.

The major producer-distributors and circuits and many individual independent owners continually attacked the bill on the grounds that it was impractical, economically unsound, would increase cost of films which would be passed on to exhibitor and consumer and would damage the industry greatly, probably forcing some companies out of business. Besides, they contended, such a law is unnecessary with the increased cancellation privileges accorded exhibitors in the new program of self-regulation and with other provisions of the new code which answers arguments of the bill's sponsors that they are forced to play certain pictures which are not suitable for their communities.

Myers Thanks Senators

On the other hand, Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Research Council, principal sponsors of the measure, have stuck to their arguments that block and blind selling is a "pernicious practice."

Allied is gratified over passage of the Neely bill by the Senate and is grateful to the members of that body who have worked for its approval, it was said Monday by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of the association, in Washington.

The success of the efforts demonstrates a growing knowledge on the part of the Congress of the undesirable policies practiced in the motion picture industry and the handicaps under which the independent exhibitor struggles, he said.

Mr. Myers expressed confidence that when the bill would be brought up in the House of Representatives, similar success would be secured by Allied and the national organizations which have thrown themselves behind the measure.

As the Senate undertook consideration of the block booking legislation, starting last Friday, Representative Lyle M. Boren of Oklahoma, in the House of Representatives, submitted for the record a list of salaries paid to officers and talent of motion picture companies and a memorandum in defense of his proposed bill to divorce exhibition from production, outlaw block booking and otherwise reform the industry.

"Workers Starving"

Commenting on the salary list issued by the Treasury Department, Senator Boren told the House "there is still a worse side of the picture, and that is the thousands of legitimate workers in the film industry who are maltreated and paid starvation wages. The situation would more easily be recognized if opposite each name of these high-paid executives was placed, the list and annual income of those thousands of extras, stand-ins, property men, and so forth."

Rejoicing that "the stranglehold of the fleshless fingers of parliamentary rigor mortis in which this proposed legislation has been held for the last six months has at last been miraculously broken," Senator Neely opened the consideration of his bill with a 90-minute speech, in which he repeated his previous attacks on those opposed to the measure and pleaded valiantly for the exhibitors whose every activity, he said, was controlled by the motion picture trust.

He referred first to the contentions of the industry that due to disturbed conditions abroad, foreign business has declined and no additional burden should be placed upon it, and that the industry has initiated a program of self-regulation which makes the bill unnecessary.

Dismissing the first by referring to testimony of Charles C. Pettijohn during the hearings that the industry has gained almost as much in South America as it has lost in Germany and Italy, the Senator disposed of the trade practice proposals as "an effort by the trust to create sentiment against legislation by the Congress or prosecutions in the courts."

Senator Neely told the Senate that 31 national organizations have expressed support of his bill and denied that they knew nothing about its contents, asserting that over 100,000 copies of the measure had been distributed. On the other hand, he said, the opposition consisted solely of the Big Eight or of interests subsidized by them. With the exception of Senator Downey of California, he charged, all of the opposition witnesses appearing at the hearings had their expenses paid by the industry.

Interrupted by Questions

During his speech, Senator Neely was interrupted, first by Senator Tydings of Maryland, whom he told the measure would not result in increasing admission prices, and then by Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, who asked whether the quality of films would be improved under the bill.

Being told that quality certainly would improve, Senator Bridges said "It is my understanding that if the producers could not sell their pictures, we will say, in block or by future contract, then, there would be no guaranty that if they produced certain pictures at tremendous expense, the pictures would be sold, therefore, there would be less likelihood of the producers taking the chance involved in the production of high-class pictures."

COMMITTEE SENATORS URGE DEFEAT

Senator Holman of Oregon asked whether enactment of the bill would improve the intelligence of the "morons" who flock to see undesirable pictures, and was told it would not but that it would enable the community to prevent the showing of such films.

Proceeding to a review of the "extraordinary efforts of the Big Eight and the Hays organization to defeat the bill by means that will perhaps be more effective than the argumentation of the opposition which has just been considered," Mr. Neely asserted that neither the Big Eight or the Hays organization "will finance any Republican candidates in 1940."

"I gather from what the Senator says that most of the so-called motion picture trust in California is not only Democratic, New Deal, but Roosevelt," Mr. Bridges interjected.

"Oh, no," the Senator retorted, "the motion picture magnates are neither Democratic nor Republican. They have no politics. They make alliances, if possible, with whatever party is in power, and contribute most to the primary campaign funds of those who are believed to be able to help them most. But, to the best of my information, a majority of the weathiest motion picture producers profess to be Republicans."

Senator Bridges explained that when he used the name "Roosevelt," he had reference, not to the President, but to his son, James, but Senatory Neely refused to continue the colloquy.

Opposed by Senator Smith

Calling attention to the fact that he would be forced to leave the Chamber in a few minutes to keep an engagement, Senator Smith of South Carolina, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the bill, briefly urged the Senate not to pass it, declaring that "in my opinion, no greater calamity could befall the most marvelous industry of modern times than the enactment of the pending bill at this time."

Admitting that the industry in the past may have been "more or less prostituted to unworthy ends," Senator Smith declared the "common sense and inherent decency amongst the people are already having their effect."

"Much has been said about the obscenity that has characterized some of the motion picture shows," he said. "That may be true, but I do not see any need to burn down the house to get ride of the rats. The public is rapidly eliminating all the pictures which outrage certain long-haired men, and short-haired women, and other people.

"We are now asked to stick the nose of the Government into the moving picture industry. That industry has progressed without setback from the time of the silent, imperfect picture until today, when it reproduces the beautiful form and voice of the actual animate speaker.

"I shall not go into the details with respect to production and distribution, but I beg of my colleagues to let the producers and the distributors and the public solve this problem, rather than to inject into it our views of what would be best for them to do.

"The moving picture industry is the second greatest industry in America, involving more money, providing more recreation, and giving more delight to millions of people than any other. But because some very moral and supermoral people take exception to some pictures, we, forsooth, must now interfere with the industry. I will bet my right arm that if those who wish to censor the industry had a chance to hide themselves in the theatre, they would be the first ones to look at pictures which they condemn."

Expressing full agreement with Senator Smith, Senator Ashurst pointed out that the film industry "is at least one industry in the United States that has within the past 10 years not asked for any loan, largesse, grant or bounty from the Treasury of the United States."

Senator Smith was followed by Senator White of Maine, also a member of the subcommittee, whose opposition of the bill kept him on the floor for more than two hours.

Taking up the charges leveled against the industry by proponents of the legislation, Senator White declared that if there is monopoly a remedy exists in the anti-trust statutes, and pointed out that the Department of Justice has adopted that view and has filed a major suit. If the Government wins that suit, he said, then the legislation is unnecessary; if it loses, the bill is uncalled for. "In any event," he declared, "I am opposed to writing an anti-trust statute for only a single industry, a statute applicable to the motion picture industry alone."

Similarly, he said, the charge of unfair trade practices has been made, and the block booking provision of the bill, he pointed out, is almost identical with the requirements of the stop order issued by the Federal Trade Commission in the Famous Players Lasky case, which was thrown out by the courts.

The penalties of the bill are those for crime —imprisonment and fine—Senator White asserted, but the bill itself is so vague as to what constitutes the crime that no one in the industry could ever be certain he was not acting in violation.

Senator White and Senator Barkley of Kentucky, who also served as a member of the subcommittee, engaged in a colloquy over the method to be followed in setting the prices for films and blocks and those sold separately. Asked by Senator Barkley how that could be done, Senator White said, "I do not know the answer to that question, and I do not see how anybody reading this language could answer it."

"Anybody who reads the language for the purpose of trying to understand it, instead of confuse it, will see that the requirement is simple," Senator Neely interjected heatedly.

"I do not like that suggestion," Senator White snapped.

"I withdraw the expression then," Senator Neely apologized.

Contracts Read

Senator White read into the record the contracts made by the major companies for their 1937-38 program, showing that the most popular pictures had many more contracts than the least popular, declaring this to be a demonstration of "either a power of selection or a large power of cancelation, and it probably means both."

The Maine Senator spent most of his time in reading excerpts from the testimony taken at the hearings, to prove that not all organizations were in favor of the bill.

It then being late in the day, an agreement was reached to postpone further consideration of the measure until Monday.

Monday's debate on the bill was limited to two speeches, Senator Capper of Kansas supporting the bill and Senator King of Utah attacking it as both unnecessary and unconstitutional.

Explaining that his interest had been engaged by farm, religious and other organizations, Senator Capper read voluminous extracts from correspondence he had received from supporters of the measure.

"I do not believe it is sound policy for any distributor of motion pictures or any other commodity to say to the prospective buyer, 'you must take things I have for sale that you do not want in order to get the things you do want,'" he told the Senate. "That seems to me to be restraint of trade."

Coercion Charged

Full-line forcing, the Senator continued, is a form of coercion and, he added, "We all have had letters from independent exhibitors all over the country."

When the local exhibitor has no choice of films, he continued, there is nothing he can do when a poor picture is offered. "Exhibitors should be in a position to cooperate with their local patrons in selecting good pictures," he asserted. To do this, he added, they must have the right of selection and also sufficient information to enable them to make an intelligent selection.

"I have reached the conclusion that this bill is not only unconstitutional, but that it is shot full of objections which, it seems to me, not only justify but require an adverse vote," Senator King said in delivering the final attack on the measure.

The amendments offered by Senator Neely to "ease" the measure, he said, "do not mitigate what I conceive to be injustices, if not the evils of the bill."

Analyzing the argument that block booking and blind selling should be outlawed on the ground that they tend to monopoly, Senator King declared "there is no denying the fact that the bill, if enacted, will seriously interfere with the freedom of distributors in marketing their films.

"Our economy is based upon freedom of competitive enterprise," he said. "There is already protection against monopoly. We are not yet under the control of a dictator, nor have our bureaus, with their tremendous powers and appropriations, gone so far as to interdict free intercourse.

"There is no proof whatever that the practices condemned in the bill tend toward monopoly. If this were so, the persons to be most injured thereby would be the independent producers. They would encounter difficulty in marketing their films. Yet there are more than 100 independent producers, in addition to the Big Eight against whom this bill is aimed."

Monopoly Cited

He was interrupted by Senator Neely, who asserted that Mr. Pettijohn had testified that the Big Eight distributed at least 85 per cent of all pictures—"in other words, the trust has a monopoly on the distribution of pictures just as it controls production."

"I do not think there is a trust," Senator King replied. "There are eight large organizations engaged in the motion picture business, and they do from 75 to 80 per cent of the business. But there are more independent producers now than there were a few years ago.

"If the practice of block booking is to be condemned solely on the ground that it tends toward monopoly, there clearly is no need for the pending measure," he continued. "If a block booking agreement is a contract in restraint of trade or violates the anti-trust acts or other acts of the Government, it may be set aside and forbidden."

If selling pictures in groups is unlawful, the practice can be forbidden under existing law, which, he said, is sought in the equity suit.

"It seems to me that we are attempting to indicate to the courts the course which we should like to see them pursue, or to stretch the statute by giving it a meaning to which it is not particularly susceptible," he added.

Congress should not legislate on block booking while the New York suit is pending, he warned.

BRITISH INDUSTRY WARMS TO PLAN TO SETTLE FIGHTS AT ROUND TABLE

Good Will Surrounds Proposal for Trade Conferences on Redundancy, Clearance, Duals, Standard Contract, Television

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Its fluttering wings hardly audible above the muffled thunder on the European horizons, but louder, probably, than the cocking of flintlocks behind the exhibitor lines, the dove of peace has come floating via Blackpool to Wardour Street. Once again the spirit of joint goodwill, of co-operation and commonweal, is being manifested and invoked, and efforts are again afoot to solve jointly the common problems—or some at least—which beset exhibitor and distributor.

Round Table Planned

Directly resultant on the united action displayed by both camps over the late lamented Simon taxes, following immediately a goodwill gesture by David Griffiths, president of the Kinematograph Renters Society, CEA and KRS will, later this year, meet over a round table to thrash out, in conciliatory and constructive spirit, many of the vexed and controversial riddles which have afflicted them both for so long.

Just exactly what problems will be tackled, remains yet to be seen. The range of the conversations may be wide. It is almost certain that redundancy, at which an abortive attack was made some little time back, and clearance, likewise the subject of joint consideration previously, will be the initial items of discussion. Other matters already flying kite-like in the breeze include the standard contract, overlong programmes and, not least of all, television. Obviously such matters vary in their urgency to the respective sides of the table. Exhibitors may be more bent on a standard contract. Distributors may have their own ideas about overlong programmes. Redundancy, primarily, it is claimed, an exhibitor concern, has obvious repercussions on the renters business. Television presenting different problems to both exhibitor and distributor, may yet see one side being asked to modify its policy on behalf of a supposedly common purpose.

Out of the tangle, which will require long and patient unravelling, some good may come, for it is the declared intention of both presidents to essay only those matters which seem possible of harmonious settlement, matters, too, which are urgent as well as vital. As exhibitors in their local branches are already insisting, the potential success of the new joint talks will depend entirely upon the backing they receive from the rank and file, that the pious promises of presidents are of little use without weight of the masses behind them.

Initiated by Griffiths

To David Griffiths, whose hard work and generous spirit solidified the trade into the solid bloc which secured the abolition of the Simon taxes, goes credit for the initiation of the new moves. To the Blackpool Conference of the CEA this year the KRS president sent a message of goodwill, a nicely timed telegram which told the 700 odd exhibitors and others met around the festive board:

"I sincerely hope that our two Associations may continue to collaborate closely on the many problems waiting to be solved in our industry, and I am confident that wholehearted efforts by both bodies will bring about as great a success as crowned our efforts in the recent tax campaign."

The gesture was received with acclamation throughout the industry, even in those discordant and cynical circles which have already concluded that the fate of any future joint talks will be the fate of those in the past,—failure.

Taking Griffiths at his word, E. J. Hinge, president of the CEA, immediately reciprocated by expressing his readiness to discuss the question of further round tables. Over the luncheon table—a sine qua non of British trade diplomacy—pros and cons were discussed, presidents and secretaries of both sections examining the possibilities and potential range of any such conversations. The way seeming clear for further pacific discussions, the moment of post-budget amity being propitious, and, above all, the mood being for the moment convivial, the principle was approved by both sides, and with ultimate reporting back to the respective Councils all seems set for the peace conferences to be launched, probably in the immediately post-vacation period.

It is not surprising, then, that already such an individual thinker as Jack Prendergast, stormy petrel of the Leeds battle front, should have declared publicly his conviction that it has been the only good thing to come out of this year's Conference. Mr. Prendergast, none the less, voices a great body of exhibitor opinion in his insistence that the real strength of any negotiations depends on the rank and file. It is felt that neither Mr. Hinge nor Mr. Griffiths will be given a blank cheque but that they will be accorded every possible support if there is equity in the solution.

Redundancy Discussed

There has already been an abortive bid to solve the redundancy problem, the first subject to be tackled. If the bid was abortive, it was not to the discredit of the exhibitor camp which, for once, was fairly solid in its policy. Dissentience at the time of the last talks was in the renters' camp, where some of the major distributors did not find it either politic or practicable to fall into line. It was contended then, and nothing has happened in the meantime to alter the situation, that though overbuilding of cinemas did have an effect on the market, with obvious repercussions on the renters business it was primarily an exhibitor problem, last word in which rested with the exhibitor.

Not dissimilar criticisms are currently being levelled in the matter of clearance. Arthur Watts at Blackpool, in an examination of current exhibitor problems which was neither aggressive nor rebellious, was moved to the criticism that some of the bars exhibitors put up against their fellows go far beyond reasonable protection, and appear to be as vindictive as they are senseless. "I suggest," said Mr. Watts, that the question of bars leaves a very fruitful opening for discussion among exhibitors themselves, and a very little commonsense and tolerance would ease a great many of the difficulties existing in this direction." Another Leeds stalwart, W. Greenwood, has since offered the contention that the increase in film rentals is greatly attributable to bars, which has provoked the counter criticism that renters would hardly be anxious for an adjustment much less a removal of protection. The view is increasingly held that bars are a problem which the exhibitor first and last can solve and that whatever pious intentions be forthcoming from other quarters little practical is likely.

Television in Background

Considerations such as these have provoked in the more skeptical minds of the exhibitor camp a consideration of what might lie behind the moves towards a new peace conference. Some sections incline towards the conviction that the nigger in the conferential woodpile is television, a conviction provoked by the knowledge that many major distributors are opposed to the new policy put before the CEA for the payment of a regular fee to the BBC for the right to diffuse their television programmes.

Some color is likely to be lent any joint discussions by recent developments in the direction of exhibitor-producer booking combines. John Maxwell's suggestion to the CEA that he would be prepared to back financially production in which a body of independent exhibitors would interest themselves—he calculated a probable thousand such—and that such product would be available preferentially to the independent group, was before the CEA at their July meeting. Other moves, though without the obviously restrictive factor of association with a large circuit, have been mooted, with such major studios as Ealing and Pinewood named as possible participants. Such a development would change the whole face of film trading in this country, and would have an obvious effect upon the affairs of major distributors here. Naturally any concrete movement in this directoin would affect the temper in which the renters approached joint consideration of problems affecting their business.

NEW BRITISH PICTURE PROTESTED BY NAZIS

The Government controlled press in Germany has begun strong criticism of a British motion picture which is still in production. The film, "An Englishman's Home," being produced at Denham by Aldwych Films, "proclaims, without any disguise, Germans as the enemy invaders who slaughter English citizens," according to a writer in a Nazi newspaper.

The producers strongly deny that the picture, which tells the story of an invasion of Britain, contains anti-German propaganda. A statement from Neville E. Neville, the producer, says: "The picture preaches hate against no nation. Nor can the invaders be identified with any particular nationality. The uniforms they wear are wholly imaginary and were specially designed."

The film, based on a play by Guy du Maurier, is being directed by Albert de Courville.

Set Gibraltar Meeting

Charles R. Gilmour, president, has set the annual convention of Gibraltar Enterprises, Inc., for August 4-7 in Denver. Others in the territory who will attend include E. W. Ward, Everett Cole, William Ostenberg, Ed Schulte, Thomas Murphy, Nathan Salmon and John Greer.

FILM INDUSTRY SPENT $895,556 ON "QUIZ"

Distributors and Theatre Owners Gave $988,143, Leaving Balance of $92,587

To all appearances long since forgotten, the "Motion Pictures Are Your Greatest Entertainment" institutional industry campaign of last year, bobbed up again this week with a report by the committee in New York on the costs of the drive—a total of $895,556, which was paid for by contributions of $988,143 made by producer-distributors and affiliated and unaffiliated exhibitors.

On the basis of the audit's disclosure of disbursements, the drive cost only two and three-quarter cents for each of the replies received from each of the 2,437,000 individuals from among the country's 85,000,000 admissions paid weekly. The cost was far below anticipations, running far less than Old Gold's public contest of a few years earlier, and, according to Radio and Publications Contest Company, which handled the physical procedure for the film business, the "Movie Quiz" brought in the greatest number of participating responses for this type of contest.

Coming now nearly eight months after the end of the contest, last January 1st, the audited report of receipts and disbursements of the drive, as drawn by the New York accounting firm of Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery, follows:

Receipts

Producers and distributors	$500,000.00
Affiliated exhibitors	250,000.00
Independent exhibitors	237,464.76
Sales taxes collected to be paid to city and state agencies	678.30
Total receipts, excluding receipts from sales of accessories	$988,143.06

Disbursements

Newspaper advertisements	$479,216.56
Movie Quiz contest prizes	250,000.00
Movie Quiz contest fees and expenses	25,540.59
Exhibitors' contest prizes and expenses	2,143.86
Short subject—"The World Is Ours"	26,097.71
Campaign Press Book	12,462.76
New York office salaries	39,437.00
New York office, regional and local committee expenses	34,645.28
Hollywood office salaries and expenses	7,837.73
Salaries and expenses of traveling publicity promoters	5,021.55
Total disbursements, excluding expenditures for accessories	$882.403.04
Excess of receipts over disbursements, excluding accessories	$105,740.02
Excess of accessory disbursements over receipts	13,153.01
Cash on deposit in Chemical Bank & Trust Co., May 15, 1939	$ 92,587.01

Coincidentally, the audit came within a few days of announcement by a committee at the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of a "big publicity drive," to be conducted from October 1st to 7th, to mark the Golden Jubilee of motion pictures. It is designed as pure publicity, with very little cost, and this to be expended for the most part on manuals of instruction for exhibitors on the how and when they should put on stunts tying in with the observance. There will be no "million dollar" campaign, no drives, quizzes, contests, pledges, certificates, contributions or largess of advertising to the newspapers such as last year's.

Major companies have approved the "Jubilee" with the understanding that it will require no cash contribution.

On Tuesday, a committee of publicity men was appointed to cooperate with Gabe Yorke of the Hays office to prepare for Hollywood's participation in the observance of the "Golden Jubilee."

The committee is composed of Howard Strickling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Nate Dyches of Twentieth Century-Fox; Terry DeLapp of Paramount; Irving Rubine of Warners, and John P. Miles of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.

One marked omission from all of the statistics, audits, compilations, estimates and announcements resulting from the last campaign is the tangible result from the "Movie Quiz" and attendant drive in the matter of dollar returns at box offices and distributors' rentals—if any. At the outset of the drive, the distributors' committee in New York announced that their goal from the million dollar expenditure was a $20,000,000 increase in theatre business during the three months of the "movie quizzing." Subsequent to that no estimate was ever made or ever attempted, so far as is known. And when the drive was over, on New Year's, the committee was equally as quiet on dollar results.

Home offices of film companies notified their exchanges this week of the industry's intention to celebrate its Golden Jubilee October 1st to 7th. Each exchange was sent an allotment of printed slips to be dispatched in letters to exhibitors.

"Early in August," slips read, "you will receive by mail, free of charge, a manual containing suggestions for participation in the Golden Jubilee of motion pictures.

"This manual is being prepared for the express purpose of aiding you to utilize the occasion to increase attendance in your theater, and, further, to popularize motion picture entertainment.

"Watch for the manual. It will be to your advantage."

The million dollar "Greatest Year" campaign of 1938 has a cash balance of $92,587, the accountants point up.

Part of the balance, it has been indicated, will be used for expenses incurred in the Golden Jubilee observaiton. In the event that any question arises concerning the use of the funds, the MPPDA has agreed to meet what small expenses may be incurred in putting out the campaign press book. Expenses of the New York working committee will not exceed $10,000, it is understood.

Production of accessories, including the Movie Quiz booklets, resulted in a net loss of $3,021. Total receipts for accessories were $198,425 and total costs were $201,447.

The receipts from independent exhibitors include Canadian exhibitor contributions of $13,000. Total collections in Canada were $15,424 and a cash balance of $381.67 remains in the custody of Colonel John A. Cooper, according to the report.

In their breakdown, the accountants for the "Movie Quiz" campaign committee, listed as debts still outstanding, a printers' bill of $6,923 by Pace Press for 25,000 press books for exhibitors. This item is in controversy, and settlement through the New York Board of Arbitration is being sought.

Another outstanding item pending settlement is $7,590 to Phillips and Nizer, New York film attorneys, for legal services rendered. No action has been taken to secure settlement. Some $335 is owed to Donahue and Coe, New York advertising agency, for production of a page advertisement furnished to the New York Evening Sun, and $3,930 to Paramount Pictures for labor, material and expenses in connection with the making of the industry campaign trailer "Movies Are Your Best Entertainment."

The committee bought $1,592 worth of excess paper for the "Movie Quiz" booklet, which was set down as a loss.

Starting off with a splurge, the committee bought $403,811 worth of space in daily newspapers in September, but cut down to a bare $62,188 in October, for a total cost of $465,999 for newspaper ads. Engravings, compositions, proofs, electros, mats and the like for the ads cost $11,757, and $1,374 was spent for art work.

Radio and Publication Contests, Inc., got $12,449 for opening and tabulating the 2,437,000 replies from the public, and Chemical Bank and Trust Company got $6,753 for services rendered as distributor of the $250,000 cash prizes among the 5,000-odd recipients.

The campaign short subject, "The World Is Our's" cost $24,957 to produce and distribute and the committee had to pay $706 in censorship fees to have the short film reviewed and passed.

FORT WORTH THEATRES JOIN IN PROMOTION

Fort Worth, Texas, theatres for the first time have joined with local business men and civic groups to promotion of the "Greater Summer Show Season" for Fort Worth, in the campaign to make the city the southwest's amusement center. The advertising campaign stresses important films playing there, name bands and the open-air cafe-theatre, which opens Friday.

The Interstate circuit is running daily trailers on the campaign in 40 theatres in surrounding territory. Newspaper, radio and billboard advertising is also being used. P. G. Levy, city manager for Interstate in Ft. Worth, is general chairman for the "Greater Summer Show Season" campaign.

Paramount Holds Trade Preview of "Geste"

Paramount's eastern campaign to give exhibitors a chance to preview "Beau Geste" opened in Albany Monday at the Madison theatre with a number of circuits, including Warners and Fabian, and independent operators in attendance. Al Wilkie, of the New York sales office, and Clayton G. Eastman, Albany branch manager, were hosts at a buffet luncheon served after the preview. Other screenings were held by Paramount in Boston, Tuesday; Philadelphia, Wednesday; Washington, Thursday and one is scheduled for Baltimore, Friday. The film had its world press preview at the Carthay Circle theatre in Los Angeles on Tuesday.

Maurice Schwartz, Yiddish actor, has closed a deal with the Mayman Film Company for production of a screen version of "Tevya," Yiddish stage play. He will play the lead and direct.

SUMMER CLOSINGS DROP TO 300, ADMISSIONS HOLDING

Reports from Field Indicate Desire on Part of Exhibitors to "Keep Going" during Months of July and August

Despite spotty general business conditions in many places, excessive heat in others and a marked increase in travelling to the World's Fair in New York and San Francisco; as well as increased general outdoor activities this summer by the American people, the usual summer closing of motion picture theatres this year has fallen considerably below that of other years—a good omen, it would seem.

So far a bare 300 theatres have been closed for July and August, compared to 400, 500 and even more in years past.

Many on Part Time

However, there are in addition many hundreds of theatres which, during the summer months, operate on a part time basis, typically over week-ends only, returning to seven day operation around Labor Day.

All of these closings, however, are offset somewhat by the opening of seasonal houses in and around summer resorts, in the neighborhood of the lake, mountain and beach vacation places.

With theatre and distribution heads characterizing the summer closings as "Normal, "slightly less than usual" in New York this week, reports from the field indicate a desire on the part of many exhibitors to "keep going" during the summer months. Also noted is a great increase in the number of subsequent run houses now air conditioned, especially in the southern and mid-western states; thus assuring year-round operations. However, houses in the south and south-west are still closing more, proportionately, than in the north and east, it is pointed out.

Admission prices, for the most part, remain stable; with exhibitors typically feeling that lowered prices were a mistake in those areas in which they were tried.

Grosses Holding Up In Boston Area

by JOHN RILEY

in Boston

Grosses in the Boston area are holding up better than during the same period last year, reports indicate. The 4th of July, usual closing time for theatres in the area, found few houses closed.

In addition, and to counteract these, there were the normal number of openings in the resort situations.

Closings Offset by Openings in Albany

by R. J. CONNERS

in Albany

Houses closed in the Albany territory for the summer season are just about offset by the vacation theatres which opened up to take the July and August business in the Adirondack and Catskill Mountain areas. Closed except for the week-end are Schine theatres in Watertown and Ogdensburg, while down entirely for the summer is the Lincoln, Schenectady, recently taken over by Sid Dwore, the Strand, Watervliet, for July, the Bradley, Fort Edward, Rivoli, Troy and Bright Spot, Rensselaer.

Among the summer openers are numbered the Lake, Lake George, Gaiety, Inlet, Star, Old Forge, Bensonville in Bensonville, Whipple at Fleischmans, the Cairo at Cairo, Tannersville in the town of that name and the Rex, Bolton Landing.

COMERFORD THEATRES COMPETE WITH BASEBALL

Competing against summer theatres in the nearby Pocono mountains, and night Eastern League baseball as well as baseball broadcasts, Comerford Theatres, Inc., has embarked on a series of "talent searches" to augment attendance at its theatres in the Scranton, Pennsylvania, area.

Night baseball and its broadcasts are being attempted in the Scranton area for the first time; and the games are attracting record crowds. The first 36 home games have attracted 156,495 cash customers.

Amateur productions are being put on every night in a different theatre by the circuit, with the finalists meeting on Saturday night at a large neighborhood house. The week's winner then gets a chance to appear for an audition before Major Bowes. The talent searches are proving to be good crowd getters, it is reported. Only amateurs over 16 are permitted to participate.

No houses have been closed, nor have any prices been altered for the summer by the circuit.

Fewer Closings In Cincinnati

by E. H. MAYER

in Cincinnati

Despite the fact that business on the average throughout the Cincinnati trade territory is considerably under that of last year, fewer houses have closed for the summer as compared with the corresponding months of 1938. However there are approximately 10 houses in various West Virginia situations that still are dark as a result of the recent coal mine strike, but it is believed that these will reopen in the fall.

Commenting on business conditions, one exchange manager estimated that it was at least 30 per cent under last year. A spokesman for the exhibitor group, although verifying reports elsewhere of the serious decline in attendance, said that in spite of prevailing conditions many exhibitors had decided to keep their houses open throughout the summer this year in the hope that there might be an improvement, although they did not know what would bring this about. "We're hoping against hope," he said, and hanging on by "the skin of our teeth."

"The product is definitely responsible for this condition," said an exhibitor who has closed his house. "Others agree with me on this," he continued. "Give us the right pictures and we can do the business." The situation is in the producer's lap, and I can see no improvement in sight insofar as attendance is concerned until we can play product that will draw patrons."

Prices Cut, but No Closings in San Francisco

by BOB HALL

in San Francisco

For the first time in several years no San Francisco theatres are definitely slated for summer closing. A "standing two week notice" has been given all employees of the United Artists Theatre, downtown first run house. But the management explains this as a precautionary measure, to permit immediate closedown if product runs short or business falls off too rapidly, due to competition from the fair.

Headed by four first-run houses operated by Fox West Coast Theatres, more than forty San Francisco theatres have announced summer prices, effective at once, representing reductions of more than 25 per cent. The move was partly due to increased competition from the exposition on Treasure Island.

Included in the list are the Fox, Warfield, Paramount, and St. Francis, the Fox West Coast houses, Golden State Theatre Circuit, San Francisco Theatres, Nasser Brothers Theatres, Baron & Nathon Theatres, the Lyceum, and other neighborhood houses.

Two Closings In Seattle

by W. A. PRAGER

in Seattle

With the exception of two foreign film theatres in this city, there have been no theatre closings for the summer season in the Washington territory. Because of the mild summers that prevail in the Pacific Northwest, there are usually very few theatres, if any, that take a "recess" during the summer months.

The two houses that are dark are Walter Roesener's Montlake theatre and John Danz's Uptown theatre. Both are scheduled to reopen late in August under their regular foreign film policies.

Theatre business in general in this city and throughout the territory is about the same as the same period last year. Night baseball and late afternoon horseraces in Seattle have cut into theatre grosses to a larger extent than in former summers, but the six-month period just ended shows little change in revenue from 1938 figures. This applies to both independent smaller houses as well as the larger chain operations.

Texas Closings Increase From 37 to 59 in Year

by HARRY McCORMICK

in Dallas

Approximately 60 Texas theatres have been closed or put on part time schedule due to the summer slump in business, a survey in Dallas headquarters revealed this week. Last year, 37 theatres were closed.

The Interstate Circuit, however, is in the throes of an extra profit month during July, an inter-organization scheme under direction of publicity director Frank Starz, which is aimed to produce extra business.

So far Interstate has closed none of its theatres. The plan, which will not be publicized, includes curtailment of expenses and extra exploitation and the use of every trick to keep July business on the upturn.

R. E. Griffith Theatres, operating in Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico, also have a creditable record and have closed but one small house, the Texas, at Plainview, Texas, and placed two others on part time schedules, Olney at Olney, Texas, and the Navajo, Gallup, N. M.

Interstate reported spotty business in varied sections, some over and under last year's summer depression. Griffith theatres reported business over the territory under that of last year and Interstate reported a similar condition when the entire circuit was considered.

Speaking for the independents, Col. H. A. Cole, national president of Allied, said that business of the spring months was about fifteen percent under that of last year.

"However, the spring slump is greater than that in summer throughout the Southwest," Col. Cole said. "Due to our superior cooling systems, July has always been better than April and May and business generally will be on the upturn now."

Alabama Reports No Closings

by GEORGE WATSON

in Birmingham

There will be no closing of theatres in Alabama this Summer. Business is 15 to 25 per cent ahead of last year, and there are rumors of a few new houses opening. That is the report from film exchanges and local exhibitors.

Of course vacations and also night baseball and softball games are affecting the box office, but the children are home from schools and that always boosts attendance. Exhibitors as a whole are well pleased with the Summer business outlook. The only exceptions are in a few small towns.

Scranton's Comerford Houses Stay Open

by JOSEPH POLLEY

in Scranton

All of Comerford's approximately 125 theatres will operate as usual this Summer. There have been no summer closings in Comerford's chain in four years. Prices also are unchanged.

While there are no dark houses in either the Warner Brothers or Fabian Albany territory, the former has just closed the Temple, Wellsville, Winter Garden, Jamestown and State, Olean.

Business has been bad in the Albany territory, more so than in other years, due to the uncertainty among state workers as to their retention in the face of reported lay-offs. Some 1,600 state employees have been temporarily furloughed and hundreds of temporary workers dismissed.

At Utica, the Stanley, Avon and Lincoln, all Warner Circuit houses, have been faced with new competition this year in the entrance of that city into the Canadian-American Baseball League. Installation of lights at the park has resulted in an average nightly attendance of 3,000, nearly all from potential picture goers.

Night baseball with attendant radio broadcasting, is a great competitive factor in both Albany and Troy. Exhibitors unanimously contend that not only the 3,500 to 5,000 fans who actually go to the ball park, but the thousands of people who remain home to tune in the games, are taken from their other season customers.

The one factor many exhibitors are taciturn in discussing is the amount of competition given them by motion picture stars who turn to the legitimate stage in the summer. Charles Coburn, for example, acts and directs the Schenectady Mohawk Drama Festival, while motion picture stars act in the neighborhood at Stockbridge, Saratoga, Woodstock, Malden Bridge and other playhouses.

Few Closings In Indianapolis

by WALTER MORSE

in Indianapolis

Summer closings in Indianapolis are few, despite opinions expressed by some of the trade that "business is rotten."

Closed for the summer are the Indiana, 3,200-seat downtown house of the Monarch group, which has closed thus for at least six years, and the Garrick, 250-seat neighborhood, which will open in the fall re-equipped and re-decorated and re-named the Garrick.

Closed for an indefinite period is the Lyric, on the decision of Owner Charles M. Olsen not to yield to stagehands' demand for raise in pay from $55.50 to $60.50. Mr. Olson's action ended a record-making run of more than five years for permanent stage-and-screen show policy.

Closed for good is the Fox, its equipment dismantled. It was opened about a year ago, taking the site of the old—and once prominent—Colonial theatre.

That's only four out of 50-odd theatres in the city and suburban towns. Don R. Rossiter, executive secretary of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, said a few houses out in the state had closed for short periods, most of them taking advantage of the dark period for redecoration and other improvements.

"Business definitely is worse here than last summer," Mr. Rossiter said. "However, the exhibitors in Indiana generally are staying open in hope of a change for the better."

Tampa Houses Remaining Open

by SCOTT LESLIE

in Tampa

All of the regular theatres of Tampa, Florida, expect to operate right through the summer on the usual schedule. Two houses in Tampa are now dark and will remain so all summer, but these have not been in operation on a regular schedule even through the winter season. The Victory, which is the second largest Tampa house, was opened only for special attractions and as an over-flow house on Fridays while bank night was in vogue here, but since the Supreme Court decided these drawings violated the state lottery laws, the house has remained dark. The other house is the Howard in West Tampa. This house was opened only for special film attractions during the Winter.

In St. Petersburg, which is a tourist city, at least three of the houses will be closed for the summer as usual, but all other towns and cities in the Tampa territory are operating as usual. Along the east coast, the greatest tourist section of the state, there will be many closings.

The "rainy season" arrived a little ahead of schedule this summer, and is now in full swing, but Florida expects that and it has little effect upon business except when a storm breaks loose just about the evening show time.

Fishman Houses Add To New Haven Closings

by GERTRUDE LANDER

in New Haven

Fishman Theatres closed three houses simultaneously June 17 for the first time in the history of the circuit. The Lyric and Winchester were darkened "indefinitely," while the Apollo is being tried on a three-a-week, one-change schedule. The Fishman brothers traced this radical departure from regular policy to the new lows in business this summer. Warner's closed the Tremont, Ansonia, as usual for the summer months, and continued to keep dark the Alhambra, Torrington.

Although there is some rumor of the Capitol, Danbury, closing at the expiration of the Warner lease August 1st, this has not yet been confirmed. Loew's, Inc., are continuing to keep the Palace, Hartford, open thus far, although up to last year the policy was to close for the summer. Last year the house was kept open on holdovers from the Poli. Michael Tomasino closed the Victory, New Haven, on June 14, in accordance with his usual procedure.

Finn's, Jewett City, has closed operation in its temporary quarters in the high school since the recent hurricane, and awaits completion of its new theatre building on Labor Day. The Paramount, Springfield, a Western Massachusetts Theatres house, will close next week for the summer, because of lack of product. In the main, the situation is changed from last year only by the Fishman closings.

Few Closings In Syracuse

by HAYDEN HICKOK

in Syracuse

Viewing summer closings as a 50-50 proposition ("it costs as much to maintain them closed as open"), neighborhood operators in Syracuse to date have not announced any summer layoffs.

The RKO-Schine pool operating the Strand closed that downtown house early in May. At the time of its closing it was running as a grind house for the lower half of the Schine product.

George Smith, head of the Smith Chain Theatres which operate six neighborhood houses here, said he expected to keep all theatres in operation during July and August if business continued strong. Last year, Smith closed the Harvard, neighborhood house in the University section, and operated the Avon on a part-time basis during July and August.

Unsettled weather, night baseball, the usual summer slump, and a recent smallpox "scare" hit Syracuse box-offices badly. Despite all this, there is a general feeling that conditions are improving, and are slightly better than in 1938.

Lack of good product, more than anything else, is the big problem of first-runs.

Fewer Houses Close In Philadelphia

by GIL BABBITT

in Philadelphia

In the local area, Summer closings are a little off from last season. Reason for this as expressed by most independent exhibitors is that many more independently owned neighborhood houses have installed first-class air-conditioning systems, with patrons finding going to the movies a pleasure.

Warner Bros. have closed the Keiths Theatre, in the midtown section. The first-run Aldine, operated by Warners for United Artists closed early in June as it does each year. House never installed air-conditioning and has become known for its yearly closing from June till September. Closing of this house also helps to throw box-office receipts to the Stanley and Boyd, both situated within a one-block radius of the Aldine.

The Comerford circuits' vaudeville-film house, the Fays out in the Western section of Philadelphia, has also closed. The house has followed this policy for the past few years. The Milgram-Affiliated Theatres, which numbers about twenty neighborhood houses are keeping all of them open, as is the Pizor-Segall circuit of neighborhood theatres.

Both neighborhood and first-run houses report lowered grosses. The big reason for this is close proximity of Atlantic City, which during Summer months is just considered a "suburb" of Philadelphia.

For July and August the Carman Theatre, independently owned vaudeville-film house in North Philadelphia closes on Sundays—keeps open all week.

Many Closings Expected In Chicago Area

by WILLIAM CROUCH

in Chicago

Due to a shortage of pictures the RKO-Palace theatre has closed Thursday until about Sept. 1. The house has been playing RKO and Universal pictures first run but of late there has not been enough product to warrant the heavy overhead.

This makes the second Loop theatre to close recently. The United Artists, a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer theatre, which is operated by Balaban and Katz, closed several weeks ago. Product shortage was the cause of this closing also.

Notices have been given to the personnel of three other Loop houses but officials state that they do not plan to shut down. The notices are merely protection they say. The theatres are the Roosevelt, Apollo and Oriental. B & K operate the Roosevelt and Apollo, Jones, Linick & Schaeffer the Oriental.

According to a report from the operators' union 22 theatres have closed in Chicago to date. This is the largest number to close in recent years. During the depression days about 80 theatres were closed during the summer in this area but the advent of Bank Night and better business conditions changed things considerably and in the past two years less than ten theatres were shuttered during the summer months.

From present indications other theatres in neighborhood districts will close for at least part of the week during the warm months. Allied Theatres of Illinois recently announced that from half to three-fourth of their members planned to shut down unless conditions were improved. This was mainly in regard to the seeking of lower film rentals.

Detroit Grosses Drop, But Few Closings

by MAURICE WALKER

in Detroit

The United Artists in Detroit has closed but is expected to open early in the fall. The Madison closed last year and was reported to be ready to open last fall but still remains closed without any signs of re-opening. Business has dropped off considerably as is to be expected. However, the neighborhood houses are doing fairly well.

The Drive-In Theatre, Detroit's only outdoor theatre, does a good business, people taking to the idea of seeing the movie from their car.

Grosses have dropped some in comparison to last year but strikes have hurt the box-office returns.

Salt Lake City Has Few Closings

by HELEN GARRITY

in Salt Lake City

Business generally is improved over last year. Fox West Coast and Fox-Intermountain operate all theatres in Montana, Wyoming and some towns in Utah and Idaho that are not operated by Intermountain Theatres Inc. In the Fox group there is only one house closed—the American in Caldwell, and this was due to the fact that it needed air-conditioning equipment and repairs.

That is also the reason for the closing of

CLOSING FACTORS VARIED AND LOCAL

Intermountain's Victory theatre in Salt Lake City—although this closing is offset by the re-opening of the Capitol theatre which has been dark since December 1, 1938. The Capitol takes over the Victory price policy and pictures—with added advantage of large cooling unit. The Paramount theatre in Salt Lake is also closed for the summer—due chiefly to a lack of "A" pictures. It also closed from June to August in 1938.

The Intermountain circuit reflects better business this year in the fact that the Pinney theatre, Boise, Idaho, sometimes closed for summer is operating. Also the Grand theatre in Logan, Utah, closed last year. The independent houses in and about Salt Lake City and throughout the territory never fluctuate. They are all open.

Fewer Closings In Kansas City

by KENNETH FORCE

in Kansas City

Summer closings in Kansas City and the area are under a year ago at the same time, a survey indicates, due largely to cool weather. Business is reported by exhibitors to be off from last year at the same time, but they are showing a strong disposition not to meet the hot weather months with the usual darkening. Actually a good many have met the situation by cutting down the number of changes; this is reflected in the decreased tonnage being handled by Film Delivery. Poundage is off about 10 per cent.

Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., are closing fewer this summer than they did a year ago, according to E. C. Rhoden. This has been due largely to weather. If it continues rainy and cool, the company expects to close only a very few more, Rhoden said. In some spots houses are being kept open because of competition, but, of course, this situation always applies.

Commonwealth Amusement Corporation and Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc., are not closing any houses for the summer. The latter circuit is spending a quarter of a million dollars on remodeling and re-equipping, the latter including in almost every case an air-conditioning plant.

In Kansas City, the Fox Tower, first run combination house, and the RKO Orpheum, first run, both are closed for the summer.

In the territory, most of the closings, like Warren Webber's at St. John, Kans., took place two months ago. There have been very few since. The Fox Princess at Kirksville, Mo., is scheduled to close July 1; at Barnes, Kans., W. A. Anderson has darkened the Fox.

Spokane Report Shows Closings Remain Same

by JOHN BIGELOW

in Spokane

In the Spokane territory, summer closings are running about on a par with last year. The Rex is closed five days a week operating only Saturday and Sunday. The Dishman has closed completely and it is uncertain whether it will reopen in the fall. Last summer one theatre was closed for the summer.

Exhibitors are agreed that business since the first of the year and continuing for the present has been from 10 to 35 per cent below last year.

All Remain Open In New Orleans

by PHILIP MUTH

in New Orleans

For the first time in the history of the motion picture theatre in New Orleans, not a house is known to have closed down for the summer season. Air-conditioning advancement is credited by leading exhibitors for this 100 per cent elimination of three-month closing down in the Crescent City area. Patronage for the warm weather is likewise improved and most of the larger operators report the best summer patronage thus far in the history of the industry.

Some of the exhibitors gave some of this credit to what they believe is an unusually good run of features this year. Better general business in the state stimulated greatly by a growing oil boom around New Orleans is also a factor. Open air theatres have not been operated in New Orleans since the pioneering days of the industry.

Nebraska Exhibitors Blame Too Much Product, Overseating

by BARNEY OLDFIELD

in Lincoln

Nebraska exhibitor comment stresses dull business and too many films as reasons making business "duller than at any time since just prior to the 'talkies.'"

Also blamed are price cutting and giveaways; while many feel that the state is some 25 per cent overseated.

Among independent exhibitors the claim remains that more recognition should be given to the fact that there is a certain fixed amount of money available for motion picture spending, and that costs should be regulated in accordance. According to local opinion, the industry makes a few "big" pictures and then tears down the theatre-going habit by surrounding them with poor quality films.

Milwaukee Closings Remain Constant

by WALTER MONFRIED

in Milwaukee

With the beginning of the summer vacation period, Milwaukee theatres are always hit hard because of the exodus of many residents to the nearby lakes. This season appears to be no worse than others.

Of the 75 or more picture houses operating here, two have been closed within the past few weeks. They are the Ogden and the Kosciuszko, medium sized neighborhood houses which are members of the Fox-Wisconsin organization. Two other neighborhood theatres of the same group, the Grace and the World, are operating only on week-ends.

Two downtown theatres which have been opened and closed intermittently for years are again on the closed list. They are the historic Alhambra and the Little theatre (formerly the Garden). The Empress theatre (formerly the Gayety), which divides its operations between burlesque and "sensational" films, also is closed at present, but may reopen at any time. Its status is always uncertain.

More Miami Theatres Open Than During Past Summer

by ROBERT QUINN

in Miami

Only three of Greater Miami's 33 theatres will be closed for the summer months this year, metropolitan area exhibitors reported this week, to set a new all time high for the number of houses to remain in operation throughout the "non-seasonal" months.

Wometco officials reported their Mayfair theatre will remain closed until October 1. Paramount's Sheridan, in the heart of Miami Beach's residential area, ceased operations on May 29 with the reopening date set for the first of October. One of the city's five independents, the Surf, closed June 5th. Reopening has tentatively been set for the first week in October.

With three houses closed, metropolitan area theatregoers will have a choice of 30 houses to select from during the summer months as against 27 for last summer.

Officials of the two major Miami chains said the larger number of houses remaining in operation is due to increased summer tourist business and the general tendency of the resort city and its environs to stabilize all classes of business on a year round basis.

No Closings In Louisville

by A. W. WILLIAMS

in Louisville

There is no summer closing problem in Louisville. Other than theatres that were already down, and which are unable to make a go of it, winter or summer, all the downtown theatres as well as suburbans are operating and expect to go right on through. All down town theatres and many of the suburbans here are air conditioned, and summer doesn't affect them much.

The old Walnut theatre and the National theatre are generally dark except when someone opens them up on prospects, and closes them down again. The National was open for a period during the winter or early spring. The Walnut hasn't been in operation in two or three years.

Irish Prefer American Films, Report Says

American films dominate the Irish market, according to a report, lately made public, from vice-consul E. J. King, in Dublin, to the United States Department of Commerce.

Of the 1,506 pictures imported into that country last year, American films amounted to 82 per cent; British, 17 per cent.

During 1938, five new houses were opened in Ireland. These have a seating capacity of 8,000. There are now 200 thetres in the country equipped for sound, with a seating capacity of 120,000, the report says. Seventy per cent of these houses are using American projectors; and about 85 per cent of the sound reproduction apparatus is American, the report estimates.

Renews Plaza Lease

Leo Brecher, who has operated the Plaza theatre on East 58th Street in New York and who founded the original Plaza on Madison Avenue, where he introduced films on New York's fashionable east side, has renewed the lease on his present site for 20 years.

Mae West Deal

Universal has completed a deal with Mae West whereby she will make three films for Universal. In her first film she will co-star with W. C. Fields, with Eddie Cline directing and Lester Cowan producing.

Open House for Summer

Julian B. Tuthill, film editor of the Hartford, Conn., Times, has opened the Conrose's Cinema City for summer showing of "class" and foreign films.

FILMS START FOREIGN BROADCASTS; FCC BOWS TO CRY OF "CENSORSHIP"

Short-Wave Broadcasts To Promote Goodwill for Hollywood Pictures, Contributed by Networks, Sent in Six Languages

The motion picture industry on Monday started to short-wave to most of the important countries of the world the message of Hollywood pictures and personalities, to offset some of the "picture propaganda" being pumped into foreign countries, into South America, particularly, by the totalitarian states. The program time and broadcasting talent and mechanical facilities are the contributions both of National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System, as goodwill gestures to the Hollywood which furnishes so much of radio's singing and acting talent.

Started Monday

The short waving got under way at 2:45 P. M. Monday over CBS, and will continue indefinitely, four times weekly, with NBC joining with its series in a few days.

Four quarter-hour periods weekly are being provided by each network, sending the program over one day in English, Spanish and Portuguese, following, in order, with French, German and Italian broadcasts separately on the three succeeding days.

CBS had reported previously that foreign listeners had expressed keen interest in all Hollywood film news, a spattering of which has been short waved sporadically on news or feature broadcasts of miscellaneous nature.

The material is gathered by the Hollywood studio and the New York home office publicity departments of the large producer-distributors, is routed by each company through their foreign publicity managers in New York, who, in turn, pass it on to Kenneth Clark, publicity and Advertising Advisory Council official of the Hays organization, who selects and prepares the continuity—probably a full week's material at one time.

Fan Material Used

Mr. Clark's committee of film company publicity men have in mind the selection of material particularly suited for fan consumption, rather than "heavy" institutional or controversial industry discourses. The items will deal with pictures and personalities from any and all of the Hollywood studios, mentioning titles and producers. They promise that the continuities will be entirely devoid of the gossip chatterings of the type the Hollywood film-news gossipers have been using to the chagrin of those whose private lives have been discussed freely for the edification of moviegoing listeners.

The committee, too, will attempt to present the "hard-working community fighting for economic necessities" side of Hollywood, pointing that up against the "fabulous studios, glamorous stars, romance, excitement, gayety" chatterings of so many air and fan magazine writers. The first program on Monday started out on this track, calling attention to "clean cut" and "home loving" living and sports of Hollywood personalities, mentioning Norma Shearer, Mary Pickford, Bebe Daniels, Norma Talmadge, Fairbanks, McCarey, Lloyd, Boles and Baxter.

Another half dozen stars are cited as serving actively in community affairs, as honorary mayors of towns and villages adjacent to Hollywood.

Outside business activities are mentioned, the real estate business of Taylor, Powell and Nagel, Reginald Denny's miniature airplane factory, Marjorie Rambeau's poultry and egg business, Judy Garland's flower shop, Richard Dix's tea company, Eddie Cantor's antique shops, et al.

"The happily married couples" are cited; the 40 years of the Grapewins, the 30 years of the Barbiers, the 20 years of the Joe E. Browns, the Cantors, the Gleasons, Herberts, Hersholts, Howards, Lockharts and Frank Morgans.

In the first broadcast, the "rigid rules of living" of the Twentieth Century-Fox's ice-skating star, Sonja Henie, are singled out for discussion, also the "courage and dogged determination" of Lionel Barrymore when he suffered a broken hip, three years ago.

"What the stars are doing" is mainly a look-see into pictures in work at Hollywood and the stars working therein.

Supplementary copy is made available for particular countries, such as the first broadcast's story, for British listeners, about Deanna Durbin being invited, on command, to sing before Queen Mary in London. News of British stars in Hollywood is related. Spanish, Portugese and other foreign language supplements likewise direct news of pictures and personalties of particular interest to those countries.

GE ANNOUNCES NEW SHORT WAVE TUBES

The General Electric Company has announced the development of two giant radio tubes to operate this country's first 100-kilowatt short-wave transmitter.

The new transmitter is expected to be ready for short wave station W2XAF by August 1st, after months of experimentation. The increased power will give the American station additional advantages in the highly competitive South American field which receives broadcasts from several European countries, attempts to offset which are being made through the medium of "goodwill" short wave programs, including those started this week for the motion picture industry by the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Use of the new tubes, coupled with other technical developments, "promise to make it possible for listeners throughout South America to obtain at will the programs being sent out from American stations," it is said. German and Italian short wave programs have devoted many hours toward selling the Fascist point of view to South America.

"Princess Aza" to Start

"Princess Aza," to be made in English, Russian, Spanish, and French, will start work in the East shortly, under the supervision of Michael J. Gann, president of Musart Productions.

FCC Suspends Rule Stipulating Short-Wave Programs Must Boost Goodwill; Radio Broadcasters Attack Commission

The Federal Communications Commission suspended last Friday, pending completion of hearings now being held in Washington, its controversial rule, proposed six weeks ago, requiring international broadcasting stations in the U. S. to transmit only programs "which will promote international goodwill, understanding and cooperation." Loud cries of "governmental censorship" were heard from within and outside the radio industry, and the FCC was practically forced to hold hearings on the issue, which opened Friday morning with the announcement from Commission Chairman Thad Brown that the ruling had been suspended pro tem.

Film Programs Concerned

Announcement came on the eve of the begining of short-wave broadcasts for and in behalf of motion pictures by NBC and CBS, which broadcasts, it is presumed, would have been subject to the scrutiny of the FCC under its "censorship" order. (See adjoining column.)

Mr. Brown, acting as chairman in the absence of Frank R. McNinch, said he was suspending the regulation, which went into effect May 23d, because the basic issues in the controversy should be "considered and discussed without possibility of confusion arising from any ambiguity in or misinterpretation of language or phraseology."

The rule, requiring that international broadcasts "reflect the culture of this country" and "promote international good will, understanding and cooperation," was intended to do two things, "To require international broadcast stations to direct their service to foreign countries rather than the United States, and to provide the public interest to be served through the licensing of these stations."

In addition, he said that "The Commission has no desire, purpose or intention of setting itself up as a board of censorship, and that it does not and will not exert any such jurisdiction."

Proposal Called Vague

Radio men, as represented, in part, by Frank Mason, vice-president in charge of the National Broadcasting Company's international division, and Frederick Willis, assistant to the president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, in charge of the company's short wave operations, called the rule "vague" and a form of censorship.

On Monday, the final session of the three day hearing, Swager Sherley of the National Association of Broadcasters said that he accepted the "sincerity" of the Commission, when it denied any intention of creating a censorship, but that the rescinded rule was censorship, nonetheless. The rule was defended by representatives of the World Wide Broadcasting Corporation.

At the earlier meetings, the feud between the FCC and the NAB suddenly broke out into the open, turning the hearings into an inquisition of Neville Miller, NAB president.

Avowedly irked by the attitude of the broadcasters' organization and the letter written by it to the commission challenging the latter to show a legal basis for its order, Frederic I. Thompson, newest appointee to the FCC, led the

FOREIGN, INDEPENDENT FILMS MOST CENSORED

American Civil Liberties Union's Annual Censorship Report Notes a Decline

Censorship of motion pictures, radio, the theatre and literature declined during the past year, the American Civil Liberties Union reports in its annual survey of civil liberties in the United States, just published in an 80-page pamphlet. "The Bill of Rights —150 Years After." The study, said by the union to be the only one of its kind compiled in this country, is based on reports from committees and correspondents in 36 states for the year ending June 1, 1939.

"By far the most numerous instances of censorship during the year concerned motion pictures," according to the Union. "The films censored by the state boards in seven states ,and by the police censorship in Chicago, Detroit and Madison, Wisconsin, and by unofficial police censors elsewhere, were either foreign films or those independently produced in the United States," it was said.

Virtually all of these are pictures not submitted for the approval of the industry's own Production Code Administration for regulating motion picture standards. The lone exception was "Blockade," independently produced by Walter Wanger and distributed by United Artists.

Mention Foreign Films

Among the films banned or cut during the year were "Professor Mamlock," an anti-Nazi picture which ran into difficulties in many cities but was usually released after protest; the pro-labor "Millions of Us," ordered deleted in Ohio; "Birth of a Baby," barred in New York and Virginia; "Blockade," banned in many cities and the Russian film "Baltic Deputy" banned in Pennsylvania but later released. The showing of the French films, "Remous" and "The Puritan" were also prevented in New York. In Denver, an exhibitor was fined $1,400 and sentenced to 120 days in jail for showing Griffith's old "Birth of a Nation."

In its report for 1937-38, issued last July, the Civil Liberties Union reported that "eternal vigilance" by its organization was lowering censorship attacks. Some of the pictures listed then as being involved that year in censorship controversies included "The Birth of a Baby," "Remous," several pro-Loyalist pictures, and the Soviet's "Baltic Sea," and the pro-labor film, "Millions of Us." The Spanish films included "Spanish Earth" and "Spain in Flames."

In radio, the Union notes that "self-regulation by the industry took on new vigor with the preparation of national standards which should meet the most exacting requirements of champions of civil liberty, and make unnecessary further federal legislation or government regulation to insure freedom from discrimination on the air." These were enacted last week by the National Association of Broadcasters, in convention at Atlantic City, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 15th, page 25.

"While numerous instances arose of unfair discrimination in radio by station program directors in the selection of speakers and topics, the main issue during the year concerned the growing tendency of the F. C. C. to take jurisdiction over program content in violation of the explicit provision in the law prohibiting censorship."

The Union charged that FCC Chairman McNinch's public statement virtually serving notice on the radio stations that programs stirring up religious and racial prejudices would not be tolerated, has resulted in making radio stations "much more cautious, for their licenses are subject to renewal every six months."

No progress was made in regard to bills in Congress for greater freedom of the air, the Union disclosed. Although the bills were introduced, the Union decided not to push them when it became apparent that most of the results could be accomplished by rules of the FCC and by the industry itself.

Bans on Periodicals Cited

In its study of censorship of literature, the Union lists the police ban in Detroit of Hemingway's "To Have or to Have Not" and the radical periodical, "Revolt," held up in the mails at Detroit because it quoted a sentence or two from the Communist Manfesto of 1848. Police censorship of publications sold on newsstands continues without let-up in Boston, and in Providence, R. I. one issue of the American Mercury was barred from the stands.

Officers of the American Civil Liberties Union include Harry F. Ward, chairman; Lloyd K. Garrison, Rt. Rev. Edward L. Parsons, Mary E. Woolley, vice-chairmen; B. W. Huebsch, Treasurer; Roger N. Baldwin, Director; Lucille B. Milner, Secretary; Arthur Garfield Hays, Morris L. Ernst, Counsel; and Theodore Irwin, Publicity Director.

"Ecstasy" Appeal Filed

"Ecstasy" appeal papers have been received by New York's Department of Education law division and will be screened and argued before the appellate division of the New York supreme court. Also to be heard by the court on appeal are "Human Wreckage" and "Animated Diagrams of the Human Body."

Ohio Censor Report

Ohio censors reviewed a total of 500 reels in June, from which 36 eliminations were ordered. Six reels were rejected for the week ending June 16th, and a similar number for the week ending June 23d. This compares with 641 reels reviewed, 35 eliminations ordered and seven reels rejected in May. In June, 1938, 519 reels were reviewed, with 25 eliminations.

Ban "Nazi Spy"

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy" has been banned by Danish and Norwegian censors. In New York the Warner Brothers office said they had received no official notice of the action but they would appeal the ban through the customary channels.

PROVIDENCE BAN UPHELD BY COURT

"A license to show motion pictures publicly for a price is necessarily a mere privilege and not in any sense a right of property," Francis B. Condon, Rhode Island supreme court justice, ruled this week in denying a writ of certiorari to the Theyer Amusement Company, operators of the Avon, against the Providence Bureau of Police and Fire, which banned "Professor Mamlock."

Justice Condon held that the supreme court had no power to review the police decision and that the court could not overrule the ban in the event it disagreed with the censorship. There being no provision for a hearing before the board, the censors could ban a film without a hearing, the opinion stated, but "it may be that there would be less danger of arbitrary action if a hearing were made a prerequisite; but that is a matter for legislative consideration and not for us."

The court held that the "due process" clause of the United States Constitution was not violated and that constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and press were not contravened.

sharp questioning of Mr. Miller, which covered practically every phase of his association's activities.

Criticising Mr. Miller for injecting the NAB, an organization of domestic broadcasters, into a situation involving only the international stations, and for making public the "challenge" letter before its receipt by the commission, Thompson undertook a one-man investigation of the NAB which was halted only when former Congressman Swager Sherley, representing the broadcasters' group, filed a sharp protest against the commission's procedure.

The hearings also were enlivened by the appearance of the Rt. Rev. Edward Lodge Curran of the International Catholic Truth Society, who delivered a long tirade against the NAB, the American Civil Liberties Union and the broadcasters generally, declaring the last were interested only in the "gold content" of radio. Charging that there is a "private" censorship over broadcast material, he upheld the commission's order and indicated it should be extended to all stations.

During the hearings, the commission heard the protests of the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System, representing the networks; Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, the Crosley Company, General Electric Company, Isle of Dreams Broadcasting Company, WCAU Broadcasting Company and World Wide Broadcasting Corporation, representing the international broadcasters, and the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Committee on Education, representing interested organizations.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Merry Go Round

Hollywood started nine pictures and completed eleven during the past week and half a dozen or so brass rings were tossed into the hopper as the production wheel sped at a dizzy clip. Inasmuch as a great deal of the detail concerning several of the new and finished pictures is carried elsewhere in this issue, only their highlights will be treated in this report.

RKO Radio dashed into its new season program by starting three films. The studio's recreation of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will feature Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara and Walter Hampden with a score or more well known screen personalities. John Wayne and Claire Trevor are the leads in "The First Rebel." "The Fighting Gringo" is a vehicle for George O'Brien, Lupita Tovar, Lucio Villegas, Glenn Strange and Mary Field.

Columbia started two productions. "Prison Surgeon" will present Walter Connolly, Onslow Stevens, Douglas Fowley, Iris Meredith and Paul Fix. The leads in "Konga" are Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Fiske and Robert Warwick.

One at Paramount

At Paramount "Untamed" went before the cameras. Ray Milland and Patricia Morison are starred with Akim Tamiroff, William Frawley, Eily Malyon, J. M. Kerrigan, Esther Dale and Jane Darwell.

"Outlawed Marshal" started at Universal. Johnny Mack Brown, Anne Gwynne, Horace Murphy, Bob Baker and Fuzzy Knight represent the name values.

With Frankie Darro, Dick Purcell, Sheila Darcy and Lillian Elliott as the leads Monogram began work on "Irish Luck." Meanwhile MGM started "Another Thin Man" in which William Powell and Myrna Loy will be costarred.

Although RKO Radio and Paramount each completed three pictures, the event of the week was the official announcement from David O. Selznick that "Gone With the Wind" had been completed. Anent this really colossal production attention is directed to the few words on page 13 concerning pictures to be released after September 1.

At Radio "Full Confession" in which Victor McLaglen, Sally Eilers, Joseph Calleia, Barry Fitzgerald, Elisabeth Risdon, Adele Pearce and Bud McTaggart will be seen was finished. So was "Conspiracy," a melodrama, which will feature Allen Lane, Linda Hayes, Robert Barrett, Charlie Foy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Lionel Royce and Solly Ward. Sol Lesser also finished his "Everything's on Ice" in which his child skating sensation Irene Dare, Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy, Mary Hart, Bobby Watson and Maxine Stewart will entertain audiences.

"Ruler of the Seas" Finished

The most important of Paramount's trio of pictures which have been marked "done" is Frank Lloyd's "Ruler of the Seas." Its companion pieces are "$1,000 A Touchdown" and "Death of a Champion." Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye head the troupe which made the first. Lynne Overman, Donald O'Connor, Robert Paige, Joseph Allen, Jr., Virginia Dale and Susan Paley are featured in the second.

MGM, which will distribute "Gone with the Wind," completed "Thunder Afloat" on its own hook. Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Philip Terry and Douglas Dumbrille are the most prominent screen names concerned.

"Mob Fury" came off the production line at Republic. Barry MacKay, Cliff Edwards, Rochelle Hudson, Ralph Morgan, George Barbier, Arthur Loft and John Wray head the cast.

While Universal completed "They Can't Hang Me," Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie, Bruce Lister and Walter Kingsford, Columbia matched the gruesome title with "The Man They Could Not Hang" which Boris Karloff, Roger Pryor, Lorna Gray, Robert Wilcox, Ann Doran, Don Beddoe, Byron Foulger and Charles Trowbridge the centers of attention in the melodrama.

"Frontier Marshal" was finished at 20th Century-Fox. It will present Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Binnie Barnes, John Carradine, Cesar Romero and Chris Pin Martin among others. At the same time Monogram was through with "Men of the Frontier" in which Tex Ritter is starred.

Last of the finished pictures is Warner's "Career Man." Joel McCrea, Jeffrey Lynn, Brenda Marshall, Frank McHugh, Nan Bryant, Howard Hickman, Selmer Jackson, Nella Walker and Granville Bates are among the screen personalities it will make available to showmen.

"SAT-EVE-POST" BEST SELLER

Always highly regarded as a source of likely fiction for film use, the staid old Saturday Evening Post has become the best selling magazine in Hollywood on the strength of three articles about film personalities published in the past few months. J. P. McEvoy wrote two of them, the first about Joseph I. Breen and the second about Darryl F. Zanuck, and with these set the stage, so to speak, for Thomas Wood, who last week told the Post's readers things most of them hadn't known until then about Louella Parsons. Hollywood readers knew them, of course, but seeing them in the impeccable Post's pure printers' ink was an experience to start 'phone bells jangling and the citizenry dashing to the newsstands.

'Phone bells began jangling again, later in the week, when word got around, as word will in Hollywood, that Author Wood's articles wasn't written for the Post at all, but for the professedly livelier New Yorker, the editors of which starchy magazine gave the Post and Hollywood a break by rejecting the piece as "too flattering to the subject."

Tell 'Em No

The compiler of this page is asked by a number of the gentlemen whose business it is to think up soft answers for unbidden visitors to studio gates if he will not inform the nation's showmen of the congested condition prevailing hereabouts at this time. He will, of course, and he adds that he thinks it is a good thing for his readers to pass on to their applicants the regrettable but urgent news.

This is, as is well known, the season of greatest pressure for studio passes, but it is not so well known that the pressure this year establishes a new high. The World's Fair at San Francisco is chiefly responsible. Uncounted thousands of persons who have always wanted to see Hollywood anyway have linked the Fair to the studio colony in a tourist's dream of a tandem holiday. Daily, hourly, they come armed with letters from home-town exhibitors, from hometown mayors, from clubs, organizations, associations for this and that cause, from pressure groups and from press and pulpit.

Hollywood hospitality is a more elastic thing than generally supposed. The studios have stretched their rules to the utmost. But production costs have been rising steadily and a halt has been called. The reason is wholly commercial and wholly real. Showmen appealed to by customers for letters of introduction to studio people will do the customers and all hands a favor by saying, gently, no.

Award for Democracy

As selected by a convention of delegates from guilds, unions and industry associates, an award will be presented at the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition to the feature film of the year making the outstanding contribution to the ideal of Democracy. Attorney General Frank Murphy will present the award for the Motion Picture Democratic Committee. The sponsors include Bryan Foy, Milton Sperling, John Cromwell, William K. Howard, Melvyn Douglas, John Garfield, Elliott Nugent, Phillip Dunne, John Ford, Frances Goodrich, Raymond Griffith, Albert Hackett, Miriam Hopkins, Nunnally Johnson, Garson Kanin, Major Phillip Kieffer, Alfred Newman, J. Walter Ruben, Gail Sondergaard, Franchot Tone, Harry Tugend and Gloria Stuart.

Paramount officials, impressed by the audience reaction of "What a Life," announced this week that the Aldrich family is to be perpetuated on the screen. Two additional films have been placed on the production schedule and Clifford Goldsmith, author of the original stage play, has been signed by Paramount to write the first of the two new screen stories.

A 30 per cent increase in the advertising-exploitation budget for six pictures to be released this summer was announced in Hollywood this week by Jack Warner. The films are "Each Dawn I Die," "The Old Maid," "Indianapolis Speedway," "A Child Is Born," "Dust Be My Destiny" and "Daughters Courageous."

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Beau Geste

(Paramount)

Foreign Legion Melodrama

Producer-director William A. Wellman has given this memorable box office success of 1926 the full benefit of all that he and the art-industry have learned about making motion pictures in the past 13 years, but has changed none of the essentials that made it a great picture then. This time Gary Cooper plays the title role Ronald Colman played then and is flanked by such sturdy marquee personalities as Ray Milland and the Robert Preston who stood out in "Union Pacific." If picture tastes haven't changed more than most people think they have since 1926 it would seem that this lineup of circumstances supplies showmen with as much exploitation ammunition as ought to be demanded of one production. It is proper to mention right at this point also that after people have seen him make his characterization stand out by his fine portrayal of as odious a character as has been seen this year, Brian Donlevy's name in the lights will be another to conjure with.

From the skyhung seat in the smoke fogged balcony assigned your unworthy representative Mr. Wellman's production, scanned from a 20-degree angle and heard via booming echo, looked very good. Members of the foreign press, the local puff sheets, visiting press agents, invited guests and miscellaneous other persons granted a fair eye and ear shot at the creation assured him, on inquiry, that it is an altogether distinguished piece of work. He is inclined to believe this and passes it on to you cash consumers of the studio's merchandise for whatever this collective opinion may be worth. If they open the picture in Los Angeles before it's been played all over the country he will go and see it from a paid seat in range of the screen and file a supplementary report.

No doubt most of you remember the story. It's the one about the three boys who appear to have stolen yet not to have stolen a gem from their benefactress but join the Foreign Legion nevertheless. It's the unforgettable one about the Arab attack on the desert fortress during which the hardboiled sergeant in charge props the dead soldiers up against the wall and thrusts muskets into their hands to make the Arabs think the fort is well manned. Fans who were old enough to go to the movies in 1926 still talk of the tremendously effective sequence in which the relief troops discover the stronghold manned by corpses. It still is tremendously effective.

Viewed from any angle, including the oblique above mentioned, "Beau Geste" is a solid piece of theatre merchandise, full of selling points and handsomely put together. Robert Carson, who wrote the present screen play, made it a straightaway chronicle, save for one switchback more or less indispensable to dramatic purposes, and the settings, outdoors and in, are among the finest ever served up. Heather Thatcher and Susan Hayward are delightfully fitted for the two slight feminine performances in what is, of course, fundamentally a masculine picture, which does not mean exclusively masculine in appeal.

Previewed ceremoniously and with radio hookup at the swanky Carthay Circle theatre in Los Angeles to a capacity guest audience which gave every visible and audible indication of having enjoyed it thoroughly.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

"Each Dawn I Die"

(Warner-FN)

Prison Melodrama

Resembling no other prison picture in whole, but combining the grimmer elements of all of them with a fresh and compactly wound story, "Each Dawn I Die" is a powerful melodrama well stocked with money names. High atop the list of these are the strategically paired James Cagney and George Raft, as neat a pair of box office aces in the present casting as ever an exhibitor held to draw to. Possibly the hottest single tip a showman can give his customers is to say that in this film Mr. Raft goes back to playing a gangster and makes good at it all over again.

There is nothing half-way about the gangster the new recruit to the Warner machine gun battalion plays in this highly explosive return to the underworld. By way of giving him leg room, Mr. Cagney has been cast as a newspaper reporter and permitted to emerge from the carnage a hero, although this casting does not keep him from spending all but a few minutes of the picture behind bars as a convict and becoming, during that while, the hardest citizen on the premises. Between them, these skilled portrayers of hardboiled characters leave nothing whatever for the hero of the next prison picture to work with.

Director William Keighley sent his big cast of excellent players through the fiery screen play by Norman Reilly Raine and Warren Duff based on Jerome Odlum's novel at breakneck speed and with no time out for subtleties. Associate producer David Lewis was equally forthright in his presentation of the unrelieved tension which sets in when an honest reporter is framed into the penitentiary and relaxes only when a grateful gangster he has helped to escape returns to jail voluntarily and mid shot and shell climaxing a frustrated prison break, wrings a confession from the criminal who framed the reporter.

Mr. Cagney's and the picture's best moment comes when he faces a parole board after weeks in solitary, denounces the members and then breaks down. This is a new high even for Cagney. Mr. Raft is at his best in a sequence shared with Jane Bryan and several felonious associates which is the pivot of a most ingenious plot. It is here that the point of the picture is made, which is to the effect that a gutter kid who grows up to combat injustice from the right side of the law, in this case as a reporter, can get more done about it than another gutter kid who tackles the problem from the wrong side. The point is not labored, but comes through.

The framing of the reporter, who, by the way, is no stereotyped movie reporter and, in fact, does very little reporting, and the escape of the gangster from a courtroom full of policemen are brilliant examples of picture production and technical accomplishments executive producer Hal Wallis may be pardoned for viewing with pride. George Bancroft gives his portrayal of the single admirable prison official with enough strength to keep audience sympathy where it belongs. The film, while starkly graphic in its depiction of brutality and suffering within the unnamed prison, is morally okay and contains no material which could conceivably incite the young to choose a career of crime. There is, however, no preaching, no propaganda.

extraordinary melodrama pointed primarily for adult appreciation. The scene is a South American republic and the story takes up at a time, which could be now, when an assassin's bomb has laid low the president whose signature is essential to consummation of a loan from the United States. A Chicago gangster active in the republic as the power behind the presidency compels an actor, wanted for murder in Paris, to impersonate the chief executive for the purpose of completing the transaction, whereupon the actor, knowing his lease on life is only so long as he can defer signing the key document, takes command of the situation. Much that is melodramatic, some that is comic and some more that is exotic goes on before the actor ends his masquerade and, of course, the picture.

Akim Tamiroff has opportunity in the top assignment to demonstrate his wizardry at makeup and characterization. Lloyd Nolan is forceful as the American gangster and Patricia Morison is slumbrously exotic as the American girl whose passionate allure he resists for a while, this portion of the proceedings becoming quite gusty. Steffi Duna is more forthrightly equatorial as a dancing girl likewise addicted to the Nolan charm.

In the cooler register, Mary Boland, Ralph Forbes, George Zucco and Robert Warwick handle supporting chores becomingly. The screen play by Gilbert Gabriel and Walter Ferris is developed along unique lines and achieves some highly effective moments. Robert Florey's direction is free in the interests of fidelity to the tropical tradition. The film is lively and well made. Probably it is as well not to urge it upon the juvenile trade.

In Old Caliente

(Republic)

Western Melodrama

For the Roy Rogers fans Republic has prepared for release another in the tuneful and swiftly paced westerns featuring Roy and "Gabby." This time the setting is laid in Mexico with the haciendas, rolling plains and surf washed beaches for background. Mary Hart continues as the feminine lead with Jack La Rue as the crooked ranch foreman and Katherine DeMille portraying the Mexican senorita. George "Gabby" Hayes handles the comedy angle while Roy has ample opportunity to render his songs and, as usual, presents them well.

Roy Rogers and his men, returning to "Don Jose," wealthy Mexican land owner with the receipts of a large cattle sale, are held up and robbed by a band of desperados. Back at the hacienda "Delgado" leads "Don Jose" to believe that the robbery was incited by a wagon train of pioneers who are headed westward to settle in the new country and Roy is accused of being in league with the robbers. Teaming up with "Gabby," who is the leader of the wagon train, Roy sets out to prove their innocence. "Delgado" is discovered to be the real head of the thieves but before Roy and "Gabby" can prove it "Delgado" has them framed and locked in a wine vault in the hacienda. "Jean" hearing of their plight pleads with "Don Jose" to hear their story. Roy explains the situation but "Delgado" fearing the outcome kills "Don Jose." Roy and "Gabby" escape from the vault, lay a trap and capture "Delgado" and his gang.

The plot is cleverly interlaced and the events follow in orderly continuity. Under the direction of Joseph Kane, who is also associate producer, and with good photography the picture has more than enough to hold the attention of the audience.

Mr. Wong in Chinatown

(Monogram)

Melodrama

Few and far between are murder mysteries so well plotted and suspensefully produced as this third in the Wong series offering the competent Boris Karloff as the keen Oriental detective and the capable Grant Withers as the cooperative captain of police. To both of these actors a nation of mystery fans owe a special debt, to Mr. Karloff for portraying a Chinese sleuth in becoming understatement and to Mr. Withers for playing a police officer without making him fantastically stupid. Out of their combined temperateness in the handling of these commonly mutilated characterizations emerges a seemingness of reality which multiplies the melodramatic impact of the picture.

The screen play directed by the veteran William Nigh in his customary commonsense fashion is an original by Scott Darling, a likewise veteran writer expert in the composition of screenworthy plots and dialogue. This is as neat a piece of point planting and punch placement as the most devout devourer of detective fiction meets up with in a season of cinema attendance.

A definite timeliness is achieved for the film by representing the first murder victim as a Chinese princess secretly in America to buy planes for her brother's army. The second victim is her traveling companion and the third is a dwarf, their several deaths being accomplished by means of poison darts from a Chinese sleeve gun. Suspicion points to several members of the cast before the cunningly concealed truth comes out.

Marjorie Reynolds plays the inevitable girl reporter with appropriate bounce and Huntly Gordon looks every inch the banker he's supposed to be. William Royle and Peter Lynn carry the burden of suspicion admirably.

Blondie Takes a Vacation

(Columbia)

Series Comedy

Producer Robert Sparks pitched this third of the "Blondie" series at a slightly slower tempo than the second, perhaps to keep the laughs from stumbling over each other, and gave it a bit more weight in the story department. Consequently, if a Hollywood preview audience may be depended upon as indicative, he offers a picture capable of collecting more laughs, but quieter ones, more hold on adult interest, perhaps less on juvenile attention. Considered by and large, the step is probably in the right direction, a means of grooving the series for the all-age popularity series pictures thrive upon or languish without.

Master Larry Simms, as the precocious "Baby Dumpling," divides with Daisy, the dog, the best laughs of the picture. Some of these come from dialogue, some from situation, several from unabashed use of camera deception. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake display firming command of the principal characterizations, both having high moments in this stanza. Donald Meek, Donald McBride and young Danny Murmert are the others responsible for merriment.

Richard Flournoy's screen play, from a story by himself, Karen DeWolf and Robert Chapin, is at its best when viewed as a series of well spaced gags, not so hilarious when boiled down to such plot ingredients as a frustrated pyromaniac and a hotel fire touched off by the landlord, the explosion point of the plot and treated seriously by director Frank R. Strayer. It's some moments before the audience remembers the picture's all in fun.

The vacation mentioned in the title takes the family to a summer resort where two hotels are in death-grip competition. "Blondie" and "Dagwood" enlist on the side of the losing hotel, but it is "Baby Dumpling's" handiwork with a litter of skunks introduced into the prosperous hostelry's air conditioning system that makes things come out right.

Waterfront

(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

For all its virile implications and promises of lusty action and melodramatic background, this seaside selection of men who go down to the waterfront gives the appearance of being rather staid. More concerned with personal problems rather than with anything approaching martime transactions, the plot troubles itself with a consideration of a feud betwen a pair of dock roustabouts. To a set of action fans, seated behind this reviewer, the picture was disappointingly actionless.

Marquee material is peopled with personalities from the stock player roster. The initial appearance of Dennis Morgan in his first feature length role may be productive of effecting additional clientele consumption for that female sector of the audience who like their screen heroes tall, dark and handsome. to his present commitment, Mr. Morgan, nee Stanley Morner, was identified as a singing protegee of the glamorous Mary Garden and served an interneship for future picture work by appearing in some short subjects. The actor is not called upon to evidence vocal ability but merely manifests a monochromatic portrait of a rugged and rather pigheaded wharf worker. Supporting players number Gloria Dickson, who gives to her stereotyped role more talent and conviction than it deserves, Marie Wilson, as a comedy foil next door neighbor, Ward Bond, as the maritime menace, and Sheila Bromley as his faithful "moll." Terry Morse directed from the collaborated screen play of Lee Katz and Arthur Ripley.

"Ann," a credulous creature, believes that marriage is a sure cure for the bellicose disposition of "Jim." But, when "Hendler," a local tough, kills "Jim's" brother, the newly made benedict forgets his honeyed promises and goes gunning for the murderer. "Ann" has him arrested on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon but with the aid of an accomplice he breaks jail. "Ann" goes to the hunted man's hideout to see that the murderer's departure from the country comes off as scheduled. "Jim" follows; "Ann" is slugged by the thug who suspects a plot and is dumped in a closet. "Hendler" hangs out of a window when "Jim" fights his way into the room but discloses his presence when "Jim" is about to shoot into the closet.

Way Down South

(Principal-RKO)

Pre-Civil War Story

Life on a Louisiana plantation of pre-Civil War times is the essence of "Way Down South," seventh Bobby Breen vehicle produced by Sol Lesser's Principal Productions for RKO release. The youngster is supported by a capable cast of known players who include Alan Mowbray, Ralph Morgan, Clarence Muse, Steffi Duna, Sally Blane, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Middleton, Lillian Yarbo and Stymie Beard. Contributing no little to the general effectiveness of the music and background is the Hall Johnson choir, noted group of colored singers.

By its simplicity and with its music "Way Down South" is a pleasant addition to any bill of entertainment and affords exploitation possibilities mostly by virtue of its old southern songs. Muse in addition to having an important role in the film, wrote the original story and screenplay with Langston Hughes, and again with Hughes wrote two new songs, "Louisiana" and "Good Ground." Included among old favorites in picture are "Oh Dem Golden Slippers" "Nobody Knows de Trouble I See," "Peter Go Ring Dem Bells," and "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child." Bernard Vorhaus directed tersely, telling the story in a few words and giving the music full sway. Hall Johnson did the vocal arrangements.

"Tim," orphaned by an accident to his father, finds to his dismay that "Martin Dill," executor of the estate, has ordered a slave beaten and also has plans to sell most of the plantation's slaves. He goes to "Bouton," New Orleans cafe proprietor, to enlist his aid and "Dill" is exposed as a thief. Although the plot is thin, it is enacted convincingly enough.—V. K.

Winter Carnival

(Wanger-UA)

Romance at Hanover

Walter Wanger, an alumnus of Dartmouth, this winter revisited the college and while the 1939 winter carnival, traditional high spot of the Dartmouth year, was in progress supervised the filming of the skiing and of the snow covered Green Mountains of New Hampshire which serve as background here for an original story by another alumnus of Dartmouth, Budd Schulberg, son of B. P. Schulberg. Authenticity, then, is the keynote of producer Wanger's latest United Artist release.

The story is a light concoction of several component parts, all of which have romance as the basic theme. The principal one concerns the meeting of two former sweethearts, the boy has become a professor at the college, and the girl, an American heiress, is just back from a trip to Reno and divorce from a duke. Ann Sheridan plays the glamour girl and Richard Carlson, the professor. Another of the threads is the romance between Helen Parrish and James Allen, which is more on the undergraduate side.

In support are Robert Armstrong as a newspaper reporter on the WPA; Alan Baldwin, who plays the reporter's son and is editor of the college newspaper: Joan Brodel, Virginia Gilmore, Robert Allen, Marsha Hunt and Morton Lowry. Direction is by Charles F. Riesner.

"Jill," returning to New York from Reno after divorcing "Duke Alexi," boards the train which is bound for Hanover and the winter carnival to avoid reporters. On the train she joins her younger sister "Ann." "Jill" plans to change trains at Hanover and continue on to Montreal, there boarding a boat for Europe, but at the Hanover station she meets "John," an old flame, and decides to postpone her trip to midnight.

"John" and "Jill" are invited to dinner by "Rockey" and "Lucy Morgan," friends since college days. Later while the "Morgan's" are out watching the ski contests, "John" and "Jill" are unable to come to a understanding and "Jill" prepares to leave for Montreal. Meanwhile, "Ann," who has been chosen queen of the carnival, is infatuated with "Count von Lundborg," "Jill" hears about it and to protect her sister plays up to the "Count." "John" admires her for the good deed and as "Jill" is about to leave Hanover he joins her.

La Inmaculada

(UA - Atalaya Films)

Tragedy with Music

A beautifully told, though lengthy love story which ends tragically, "La Inmaculada" ushers in the new production company of Atalaya Films which will produce a series of Spanish pictures for United Artists release. Starring Fortunio Bonanova and Andrea Palma, both of whom are widely known in the language market at which this is aimed, the picture concerns the unhappy domestic career of a woman whose life is ruined by a wastrel husband and whose chance at happiness comes too late.

Supporting Bonanova, who with Maurice M. Cohen produced the picture, and Miss Palma, are Milissa Sierra, Tana, Luis Diaz Flores, Daniel F. Rea, Julia Montoya, Felipe Turich, Raquel Turich, and Carlos Villarias. Louis Gasnier directed from a screenplay by Paul Perez and adaptation by Gabriel Novarro, based on the novel by Catalina d'Erzell.

Bonanova sings six songs in the film, all of which have exploitation possibilities.

"Consuelo," a country girl, comes to Mexico City to find employment and marries "Rene," a millionaire playboy. Shortly after the honeymoon, "Rene" wastes his fortune and becomes ill, taking to drink. Cast out by his inamorata, and his wife no longer in love with him, "Rene" commits suicide, but in the meantime, the man with whom "Consuelo" has fallen in love, becomes married to another.

Indianapolis Speedway

(Warner Brothers)

Romance and Action

Keeping faith with the promise of action pictures Warner Brothers here chalk up another credit towards that goal. "Indianapolis Speedway" is crammed full of action with most of it occurring on the dirt track circuit frequented by auto racing enthusiasts and climaxed in the annual Memorial Day 500 mile Indianapolis race. There is a story that serves to tie the loose ends together but the crux of the film is the action, the thrills and heartbreaks of the track.

Pat O'Brien and Ann Sheridan play the leads with John Payne, Gale Page and Frank McHugh in principal support. Others in the cast include Grace Stafford, Granville Bates, John Ridgeley and Regis Toomey. Lloyd Bacon directed the screen play by Sig Herzig and Wally Klein which they adapted from a story by Howard Hawks.

Probably the most exciting of the moments of the film are those in which "Joe Greer" (Pat O'Brien), a famous driver, causes his best friend's car to catch fire. The car somersaults several times leaving oil and gasoline blazing clear across the track, a wall of fire for the other drivers to speed through.

"Joe," who has accumulated money and fame as a driver of racing cars, is anxious to send his brother "Eddie" to college. But "Eddie" is eager to become a famous driver himself so "Joe" decides to take him in hand and teach him to race. They travel over the dirt track circuit and "Eddie" proves himself a good pupil. "Eddie" meanwhile has fallen in love with "Frankie" who rooms with "Lee," "Joe's" fiancee. "Joe" despises her and forbids "Eddie" to see her.

Without "Joe" being aware of it the two continue to meet. At a night club in Los Angeles "Joe," finding them together, creates a scene and the brothers split up. When they meet again in a race "Joe" attempts to pocket "Eddie" but "Spud," fearing an accident, tries to keep "Joe" away from the brother. "Spud's" car catches fire and he is killed. "Joe" travels the downward path while "Eddie" continues on to fame.

When the Indianapolis classic comes around again "Eddie " is favored to win but near the end of the race, is injured, "Joe" offers to drive, the brothers are reunited, and they go on to win.

I Stole A Million

(Universal)

Character Melodrama

"I Stole A Million," in theme, is the case history of a criminal. Yet it is entertainment. Documentary in its melodramatic phases, its love story is natural and human. Paradoxically, the show, while being grim and bitter, is warmly appealing.

The basis of the picture, and original story written by Lester Cole which Nathanael West adapted is a logical tracing of events and incidents that might happen in any man's life. What happens seems all the more logical when the character of the central figure in the photoplay is understood. And with George Raft, Claire Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory, Joe Sawyer and Irving Bacon contributing convincing performances, director Frank Tuttle was smart enough to let the story tell itself and make no effort to embellish the fundamental melodrama with artificial or mechanical theatrics.

Early episodes in the film let audiences know that "Joe Lourik" is an aggressive independent-minded fellow. The queer quirks that dominate his mentality become evident when sharp business tactics defraud him of his savings. A circumstantial enemy of the law, he turns criminal only to be made the fall guy for shrewder criminals.

Then there comes a pause in his dangerous desperate career when he finds love with "Laura" whom he marries and after which he turns honest and respectable for a while. But relentless law continues to trail him while gangster vengeance menaces him. Loving "Laura" and their baby deeply "Joe," like a frightened wild animal, thinks only of their happiness and safety, and when that is imperiled to the point where "Laura" is jailed for complicity in shielding a criminal, he really becomes a scourge of law and order. One sensational crime follows another until he climaxes his outlaw career by stealing $1,000,000. But the loot is worthless and as law enforcement draws its iron ring tighter around him, "Joe," knowing that "Laura's" future with him would only be a life of dodging policemen and bullets, runs into a storm of bullets.

"I Stole A Million" is a meaty story and as such is told in honest straight-from-the-shoulder fashion. No punches are pulled; no attempt is made to soften things up and yet it is not unpleasant for it simply is the fictional detailing of factual circumstances which strew the records of every law enforcement agency. In substance, it is an exposition of the creed "Crime Does Not Pay," yet while being thought-provoking entertainment, it is not a preachment.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Passing Parade

The distressing and world wide refugee problem of today occupies a great deal of newspaper space, lecture and fund raising activity and legislative enterprise. In this presentation from the Passing Parade group, previous fugitives from persecution, although victims of past acts of man's inhumanity to man, serve to highlight and center attention on the current exodus of human flotsam and jetsam. The subject's title is applied to that commendable humanitarian, Fridtjof Nansen, the explorer, who laid aside all personal endeavor in order to offer succor and a haven of safety to the victims of persecution and war, particularly the Russian refugees and the innocent folk implicated in the war between Greece and Turkey. The material offered in this inspiring vignette should make any gathering the better for having witnessed it.

Betty Boop-Swing Ambassadress

Miss Betty Boop continues to be ambassadress of swing in her latest installment of musical evangelicism. Previously, Betty had sounded the blessing of jitterbug jazz among the backward and uncivilized hillbilly districts. Now she moves on to spread further manifestation of white man culture to the redskins. Noting the text of her musical gospel message, anti swing addicts may breathe a sigh of sympathy for the downtrodden braves, such as "Lo, the poor Indians." On the other hand, the natural way that the aborigines take to swinging it may prove that there is a terpsichorean kinship between the shag and the war dance. All in all, paleface Betty and her Indian pals have a right, ripe jam session. The sequences showing the braves' introduction to the various musical instruments and the adaptations to which the redskins put them carry some amusing moments of cartoon business for any audience, no matter on what side of the fence they may sit on the question of swing music.—Running time, seven minutes.

Boo!

That formidable proponent of muscle over mind, Popeye, having met in mortal combat almost every obstacle devised by man or nature, now matches his prowess with the supernatural or at least other world heckling as devised by his arch rival, Bluto. During a scary reading session of ghost stories, the sailor man protests his disbelief in disembodied creatures as Bluto lures Popeye and the girl friend, Olive, into a deserted hotel and thereupon proceeds to give the pair the spooky works. But, when the butts of the joke find out the identity of the human element behind all the mysterious happenings, they turn the tables on the practical joker without the aid of any spiritualistic assistance. More amazing than the creepy horseplay and the commendable resistance offered by the peerless Popeye is an until now undreamed of possibility for the sailor's special elixir of spinach. During one section, Popeye has made himself invisible through the courtesy of a can of "invisible paint" and it is at this moment that the audience witnesses a can of the dynamite greens being used to succor the non-material eater.—Running time, seven minutes.

Goldilocks and the Three Bears

(MGM)

Cartoon

The child fable about the visiting little girl with the blonde tresses, who visited the cozy family setup of the three bears is related sprightly, colorfully and entertainingly in this cartoon translation. There is no need to relate the tale's spinning for the pattern is known to both young and old alike. The drawings follow the main theme of Goldilock's fictional visit to the bruins' abode, the eating of the porridge and the use of the bears' bedroom. In addition to all this, there is added a welcome bit of jazzed up horseplay as depicted in the family scenes of papa, mama and baby bear. The color and the musical background add to the charm of the portrait. The children should be enthralled with the fable side of the business, while the elders of the audience, too grown up now for fairy stories, should get some amusement from the rough and tumble antics of Mr. and Mrs. Bear and offspring.—Running time, 11 minutes.

"They Shall Have Music" Lets Violin Tones Talk for Heifetz

Music Expert Finds Drama in Famous Fiddle

by JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN

Not since Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights" has the dominant character in a sound film spoken less and expressed more than does Jascha Heifetz in "They Shall Have Music," the Samuel Goldwyn Production released through United Artists.

While Charlie said it with gestures and mimicry, Heifetz says it with his violin; and how eloquently the Stradivarius speaks under the magic bow of the Master.

Impersonating himself in the picture, the great Russian violinist is as convincing proof of the old adage that silence is golden as that music speaks a universal language, for throughout the entire production the Maestro articulates but a few laconic sentences, while his violin speaks—volubly—with the tongue of angels, more moving and convincing than any words.

Goldwyn Discovered Something

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn seems to have discovered something, and having discovered it, proceeded to carry out the idea. He persuaded the greatest living exponent of the art of Paganini to act as the Interpreter of the Idea. He then surrounded the Master Interpreter with a story involving a variety of human beings from various strata of life, among them some kids of the Dead End species and another group of youngsters of the underprivileged class who were finding just as much excitement, under the benign mentorship of a musical idealist, in playing on fiddles and blowing into trombones and other instruments, as they might in shooting craps or cops.

Into this symphony of "dirty faces and hungry hearts" is woven the principal theme of the Great Master and his priceless Stradivarius; a sinister counter theme when the Dead End neophytes unwittingly kidnap the Strad; and a dominant motif which is voiced in the newly-awakened musical consciousness of the young would-be Dead End leader and in his efforts to save the music school from the clutches of a hard-boiled creditor.

Music, the Common Denominator

What Mr. Goldwyn really discovered was not that Jascha Heifetz was one of the greatest of all violinists and that on the screen he would be a terrific box office draw. That was self-evident. But the "discovery" of Mr. Goldwyn was the principle that music, of all the arts, is the great common denominator of human emotions and aspirations—the most revealing medium of the inner life—and that it breaks down all barriers. That under its spell the heart of the plutocrat and the pauper, the realist and the Utopian, the take-it-all and the share-it-all beat in unison; that the unreal takes on the aspect of the real—and even such an Algeresque story as "They Shall Have Music" seems credible when interpreted in terms of music.

This accounts for the phenomenon that in the Carnegie Hall scene when Heifetz plays the Saint-Saens "Rondo Capriccioso," the motion picture auditor inevitably identifies himself with the same audience as does Frankie, the potential Dead End leader who has wandered into the Hall and is under the spell of the great virtuoso. And the phenomenon recurs in the scenes at the Lower East Side music school when Heifetz plays the enchanting "Melodie" of Tschakowsky, the last movement of the Mendelssohn Concerto, the "Hora Staccato" by Dinicu-Heifetz, and the "Estrellita" by Ponce-Heifetz, to enthralled audiences of the underprivileged. The re-creation of the great works by the Master Interpreter makes the whole world kin.

Closeups Reveal Technique

An evaluation of Mr. Heifetz's art is not the point of this commentary. He is the recognized perfect violinist—flawless in technic, lucid and illuminating in his enunciation of the music and its meaning. It is what the screen does for Mr. Heifetz and what his art in turn contributes to the musical screen, that concerns us.

Apart from the purely inspirational aspects of his role in "They Shall Have Music," the exposition of his amazing technic as revealed by the camera close-ups, is a rhapsody of fleeting fingers and rhythmic mic bowing that is as fascinating to the eye as the tones they evoke are to the ear. To the teacher and the student of the violin, these intimate shots are a vivid exposition of perfected technical art as practised by the greatest violin executant since Paganini, at the peak of his powers. If shown in slow motion, these close-ups should prove priceless to violin virtuosi aspirants. In preserving tonally and visually this impeccable art, the sound screen can be credited with a notable contribution to musical literature and pedagogy.

But Heifetz, the incomparable artist, the star, the moving spirit of "They Shall Have Music" is not the only musical feature of this screen symphony. The story revolves around the tribulations of a musical school for the poor, with Walter Brennan playing the role of director of a children's orchestra with which Heifetz appears as soloist in the climax of the picture.

Orchestra of Children

The children who compose this orchestra are members of the famous California Junior Symphony Association, most of them from poor homes. They range in age from 9 to 14, and each is accounted a musical prodigy. Recruited and trained in Hollywood by an altruistic Russian musician, Peter Meremblum, these youngsters give an amazing display of their talents in accompanying Heifetz in the Mendelssohn Concerto. They are also heard in the "Italian Symphony" of Mendelssohn and in Rossini's "Barber of Seville" overture in earlier sequences in the music school.

Whimsical Touch

A whimsical touch—a naive and appealing interlude in the stress of conflicting motifs—is a scene where Frankie corrals some of the children of the orchestra, takes them up to Carnegie Hall and stages a sidewalk concert for the benefit of the music school. The youngsters are playing Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nacht" as Heifetz, coming out of the Hall with his manager after the concert, is attracted by the talent and enterprise of the juvenile group and promises to send to their school a motion picture reel of his playing. This reel is the recording of "Hora Staccato" and "Estrellita," subsequently shown in a school sequence.

A special word of commendation is due to those responsible for the sound recording. It is magnificent throughout.

NBC CITES FIGURES ON SERIOUS MUSIC

The National Broadcasting Company this week cited figures to point up the contention that Samuel Goldwyn's production "They Shall Have Music" will bring out millions of new box-office patrons and prove a stimulus to theatre business through the drawing power of Jascha Heifetz and his violin. The figures:

In 1938, NBC devoted 2,000 hours —or 111 broadcasting days to serious music. 23 per cent of radio music last year was light—20 per cent was dance music—57 per cent consisted of operatic, classical and semi-classical compositions.

"Music" Preview Tuesday

A private preview performance of Samuel Goldwyn's "They Shall Have Music" will be held at the Rivoli theatre, New York, next Tuesday for the benefit of the Greenwich House music school and the High School of Music and Art. Mr. Goldwyn will arrive in New York Monday and will attend the preview performance, which is sponsored by a committee consisting of Mayor LaGuardia, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Mary Simkhovich, Mrs. H. R. Stern and Commissioner of Licenses Paul Moss.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Blackmail (Tentative)

(MGM)

Melodrama

If spectacular production effects, action, excitement and genuine suspense-packed thrill, are entertainment elements interesting to people, exhibitors can look forward to the release of this picture with a more than ordinary confidence. The thematic occasion for what will happen on the screen, while not entirely new, nevertheless, is a type of human interest material that has often proved its commercial and entertainment worth. In substance this psychological melodrama will present the picture of an innocent convict who escapes jail to enter upon a respectable life.

Incidents that will emphasize the melodramatic aspects of the plot, locale of which is in an oil-well field will be the dynamiting of an oil-derrick fire, sensational escapes from jail, the firing of an oil field and the grim manner in which the hero entices his enemy into an inferno of heat where he extracts a confession from him and his courageous rescue of his wife from a pit of boiling mud. Yet all this thrill stuff should prove a secondary value to that which shows the final extinguishing of the raging fire.

Edward G. Robinson playing his second role for MGM ("The Last Gangster" was the first) will be seen in the leading role. The support enumerates Ruth Hussey, last in "Maisie" and "The Women," Guinn Williams, Gene Lockhart, young Bobs Watson, Art Hohl, John Wray, Esther Dale and Mitchell Lewis.

H. C. Potter, who has made such films as "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "Shopworn Angel," "The Cowboy and the Lady" and "The Story of Irene and Vernon Castle" during the past couple of years with John Considine, whose high mark picture is "Boys Town" is producing.

Release date: Not determined.

The Day the Bookies Wept

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

Farce comedy will be the showmanship substance of Joe Penner's first picture for RKO-Radio in almost a year. The story basis of the production is a yarn by Daniel Fuchs, "Crazy Over Pigeons," which appeared recently in Colliers. Bert Granet did the screen play and Leslie Goodwins, who handled Penner's last film "Mr. Doodle Kicks Off," will again direct.

For additional names, the picture will offer Betty Grable, Tom Kennedy, Richard Lane, Thurston Hall, Jack Arnold, Earl Hodgins, Max Wagner and Billy Newell.

In theme the yarn concerns a group of Brooklyn taxi drivers who buy a race horse and make a killing at the expense of bookmakers. The subsidiary theme concerns the adventures of the driver who has to train the horse and who must neglect his hobby of pigeon fancying as well as interest in his forthcoming marriage. Major locales used are Brooklyn and environs, a Kentucky horse auction and the Belmont race track.

Release date: Not determined.

$1,000 A Touchdown

(Paramount)

Topical Sport Comedy

It undoubtedly will occur that showmen, upon assaying "$1,000 A Touchdown" for its exploitation values, will concentrate all their efforts on the name value in the fact that Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye are bracketed as the co-stars. During all his career on the screen, Brown has represented certain wholesome entertainment, as a result of which he built up a large following. In almost every picture in which she has appeared, Miss Raye has been presented as a comic zaney. Both won fame and made money for themselves and those who played their productions by simply being funny. They will be typically funny in this forthcoming production.

The farce is about football. It will have to do with the misadventures, experiences and exploits of a frustrated Shakespearian actor who, although he has never seen a football game, has read a book—"How To Train A Football Team"—and thereupon organized the world's greatest eleven merely for the purpose of saving his girl friend's college. Such adjectives as "hilarious," will automatically be applied in advertising copy.

Such performers as Eric Blore, Susan Hayward, one of Paramount's most promising young feminine players, John Hartley, Matt McHugh, Syd Sailor, Joyce Matthews and Joseph Swickard will be among the Brown-Raye supporting troupe. James Hogan is the director and William C. Thomas, the producer.

Release date: Sept. 22. (Tentative).

Full Confession

(RKO Radio)

Personal Melodrama

Victor McLaglen's record is studded with pictures in which he has been called upon to play unsympathetic roles, yet he won the Academy acting award a few years ago for his portrayal of a coward in "The Informer." In "Full Confession" he will delineate a weak-minded murderer who recants a confession made to a priest to whom he owed his life. He maintains his denial despite all reason and prayer, even though it jeopardizes the life of another, until the priest, in a last minute application of psychology, following a melodramatic chain of circumstances, succeeds in awakening the murderer's conscience.

Nobody can promise that in "Full Confession," McLaglen will again be as he was in "The Informer," but the chances are in favor of a repetition and should that circumstance occur, exhibitors undoubtedly will have a valuable picture property.

For support McLaglen will have the services of Joseph Calleia, usually seen as a pretty bad man himself, yet an actor who is endowed with all the talents to play the role of a wholesouled priest, Sally Eilers, Barry Fitzgerald, Bud McTaggart, and Elizabeth Risdon.

The picture is based on a story written by Leo Birinski and Jerry Cady did the screen play. Direction is in the hands of John Farrow whose latest credits are "Five Came Back," "Sorority House" and "The Saint Strikes Back."

Release date: Not determined.

Quick Millions

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

The complete title for this production, the fourteenth in the series is "The Jones Family in Quick Millions." It will again present the regular members of the family, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan with the fixture in the series, Marvin Stephens and also feature Eddie Collins, Robert Shaw, Helen Ericson, Paul Hurst, John T. Murray, Peter George Lynn and Horace MacMahon. Malcolm St. Clair who has directed several recent "Jones Family" films as well as one of two Jane Withers' productions is again in charge with John Stone serving as associate producer.

Enjoying the benefit of an exploitable title the picture will also make many other items of showmanship consequence in addition to name values and entertainment prestige available to exhibitors. The Grand Canyon of Arizona forms the principal background for this new domestic comedy adventure. The showmanship importance of the production continues into the story based on an original by Joseph Hoffman and Buster Keaton which Hoffman and Stanley Rauh adapted.

Just back from their Hollywood escapade, the family is led to believe that it has been bequeathed a rich mining property in the famous National Park. There, the whole pack becomes involved with romantic rangers, quaint western characters and big city gangsters who are using the mine as a hide-out. All will become involved in situations promising to provide laughter and slam bang excitement.

Career Man

(Warner)

Spy Ring Expose

"Career Man" is being plotted to engage the attention of exhibitors and their patrons who appreciate an appealing love story interlaced with situations which are melodramatic and topical. With Morocco at the time of the outbreak of the Spanish Revolution, Washington and various European capitals as the locales, this picture will trace incidents and experiences in the lives of a young man who has been forced to resign from the U. S. diplomatic service, and his wife, who are successful in breaking up an international spy ring

Based on the novel, "Glitter," by Katherine Brush, the story was prepared for the screen by a quartette of Warner's ablest photoplay writers and it is being directed by Lloyd Bacon, under whose guidance some of the studio's most successful timely pictures such as "Give Me A Child," "Wings of the Navy," and "Submarine D-1" were made.

Joel McCrea, now in "They Shall Have Music," Jeffry Lynn, who was featured in "Four Daughters" and "Daughters Courageous," and a newcomer from the stage, Brenda Marshal, are the name players. Their support will include Frank McHugh, Martin Kosleck, Stanley Ridges, Howard Hickman, Nancy Bryant and Henry Victor.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Arabian Nights

Two units are now shooting on what is probably the most ambitious film production in Britain at the moment, Alexander Korda's "The Thief of Baghdad."

On location at the Denham Studio lot, known as "City Square," Michael Powell is directing the secondary unit on a set which represents the harbor of Baghad. Meanwhile, Ludwig Berger, assistant producer and director of the film, is shooting scenes in the Palace of Basra under the immediate supervision of Alexander Korda.

The whole of City Square is being used for the Baghdad harbor set, and hundreds of carpenters, plasterers, painters and others have been working for a month in erecting Giafar's ship and the 16 other craft which ride in the harbor. The harbor set is surrounded by white fronted shops, where the treasures of the East will allegedly be on sale.

For color purposes extra lighting is employed on the interior sets of the Palace. Lighting used is claimed to be the most powerful yet used in the history of the industry. It is also claimed that no set as large as the Basra Palace set has yet been filmed in color.

Leading the cast are Conrad Veidt as Giafar, Sabu as the Thief, John Justin the Prince and June Duprez as the Princess. Miles Malleson has the role of the Sultan, collector of mechanical toys and automatons, to whom Giafar brings a flying horse to trade for his daughter the Princess. The horse, made up in six parts, each carried by an attendant guard, is full of clockwork and winds with a key. When the Sultan mounts it takes him for a flight into the sky and returns whence it started.

In the Mines

After considerable location work at the British mining town of Workington in Cumberland, whither a unit went to film pit head scenes and sequences around the colliery, as well as football matches between local teams of miners, production has now started at Twickenham on the Grafton Film version of A. J. Cronin's "The Stars Look Down."

Carol Reed is directing the picture, and the leading roles are being played by Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood, who has recently returned from Hollywood to play in the film.

Studio sequences are being filmed at the Twickenham Studios, but exteriors will be filmed on the open air lot of Sound City a few miles away. There, a complete replica of the pit head at Workington, complete with pit gear, railway sidings, shunting engines, tub ramp, slurry tanks, etc., have been set up over a coverage of three hundred square yards, and occupying the whole available Sound City lot. Before this set is completed it will have taken a month to build.

In the studio at Twickenham underground scenes representing work at the coal face are being shot. Elsewhere in the studio sets have gone up representing the interiors of miners' cottages and so forth.

Apart from the leading roles of David and Jenny, by Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood, Emlyn Williams, leading English actor, has the part of Joe and the remainder of the cast include George Carney, Edward Rigby, Nancy Price, Desmond Tester, Allan Jeayes and Ivor Barnard.

Mr. I. Goldsmith, managing director of Grafton Films, has appointed Fred Zelnik to supervise production. The film will be distributed in this country by Grand National.

Casting

Leueen MacGrath has been placed under contract by RKO Radio to play the feminine lead opposite John Loder in "Archer Plus Twenty," an adaptation of Hugh Clevely's novel which is being directed by John Paddy Carstairs.

"Archer Plus Twenty" is the story of a lone adventurer engaged in a desperate fight against a notorious spy ring, and is being produced by William Sistrom.

Sistrom and Carstairs were asociated in their respective capacities on the production of "The Saint in London," recently completed by RKO in this country.

MGM Sets Three

Robert Montgomery will star in the new MGM British production "Busman's Honeymoon," adapted from Dorothy Sayer's novel, which will go into production in London this month. Richard Thorpe, director of "Night Must Fall" and "Huckleberry Finn," will direct, and he will also direct the second Montgomery subject in England "Earl of Chicago," from the story by Brock Wiliams.

These will be followed by "Yank at Eton," in which Mickey Rooney will play under the production of Norman Taurog, and "Ruined City" and "Beau Brummel" two Robert Donat subjects to be produced by Victor Saville. Also on schedule but not yet cast is "National Velvet."

Production Team

Reunited at the Ealing Studios during the last few days, the team responsible for the successful "The Ware Case" has joined hands on "Goodness! How Sad" screen version of Robert Morley's comedy. The team is composed of Michael Balcon, producer, Robert Stevenson, director, and Clive Brook, star.

The cast includes Anna Lee, in her third film this year at Ealing, Garry Marsh, Dame May Whitty, Arthur Margetson, Hartley Power, David Tree, Milton Rosmer, Olga Lindo, Frank Pettingell, O. B. Clarence, Molly Rankin and Eliot Makeham. The title will not be retained for the screen version.

Oriental

In an Oriental setting, with thirty Malayans and Chinese to provide atmosphere, George King, independent producer, has begun production at Beaconsfield on "The Chinese Bungalow."

This popular Matheson Lang play was one of the first half dozen talkies made in Britain.

King has got together a cast headed by Paul Lukas, Jane Baxter, Robert Douglas and Kay Walsh.

The producer has had built into the studio part of a palatial bungalow, standing in a garden filled with luxuriant flowers and plants, rockeries and archways, with a pool containing lilies and golden carp. A fanciful touch is added by half a dozen fantails flitting about the garden. The whole setting is enclosed by a wall into which massive gates are set.

Cooperating with Mr. King as technical adviser on the Oriental settings is Charles H. Hoare, who has lived in China 15 years and spent 18 months in the Hainan Island among semi-aboriginal tribes.

COAST UNION CHARTER IS RESTORED; NEW YORK UNION CHARTER REVOKED

Hollywood Studio Local Regains Disputed Identity, and Five New IATSE Locals Set to Supplant It Ordered Dissolved

Studio technicians' Local 37, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, this week regained its former identity, by a court order which dissolved five newly created IATSE locals which had been intended, by international officers, to absorb the membership of Local 37.

The strong court decision held that the revocation of the Local 37 charter was illegal; it belonged to its members, the court said. However, Superior Court Judge Henry M. Willis also held that the international officership was within its rights in revoking the autonomy of the local union, which it had done prior to revoking the charter, and in suspending the local's officers.

Battle for Control Starts

Meanwhile, Hollywood production crafts were witnessing the start of what may turn out to be a battle between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, for jurisdiction over film workers. While the IATSE has been battling the insurgent members of Local 37, and the issue has been taken to several courts, and to the newspapers, and while studios have held up agreements over working conditions until the battle is settled, a new organization, claiming jurisdiction over all film workers in a "vertical union," the United Studio Technician's Guild, has sprung up, backed by CIO money.

Judge Willis' oral decision was one of the longest ever handed down in a Los Angeles court. It came after nine weeks of acrimonious testimony in the suit by Local 37 members against the international officers of the IATSE and their union, for a return of their autonomy and charter.

The decision returned the studio unit to its status, as of March 21. Under the ruling, officers of the local union remain suspended.

In deciding that the charter of Local 37 belongs to its members, Judge Willis pointed out that revocation of the same had been effected without "due process of law"; and that, therefore, the action of international representatives John Gatelee, and Frank Stickling, in summary intervention, was contrary to state and federal constitution.

Hailed as IATSE Victory

Nevertheless hailing Judge Willis' decision as a "great victory for the IATSE," Mr. Gatelee declared the IATSE will immediately seek a new working agreement with the producers, for its crafts. Parenthetically, he minimized the entrance of the new CIO Technicans' Guild, as a threat to IATSE ranks.

In Judge Willis' three-hour decree, it was emphasized that, while the intervention of Mr. Gatelee and Mr. Stickling in the affairs of the local union was in accordance with the constitution and by-laws of the IATSE, the remedy sought by local officers lies in the hands of members, and that the constitution and by-laws can be changed at the next convention.

"IATSE president George Browne was given dictatorial powers in the 1936 convention," the judge observed, adding, "If union membership wants to switch from democratic automony to single individual autocracy, under the by-laws, Browne is authorized to take over all of his locals if he chooses."

Judge Willis' decision leaves the status of Joseph W. Carpenter, president, and other officers of the Local 37 who were suspended when international officers took over, unchanged. Mr. Gatelee has declared himself undecided whether to cite them before a union trial board on charges which, if upheld, might bring about their ouster from the IATSE.

The IATSE will maintain supervision over Local 37, until its general executive board decrees that the state of emergency under which autonomy was suspended, is ended.

The state of emergency was declared several months ago, after Local 37 officers had asked for an accounting of their dues, had charged mishandling of such, and had further charged that the IATSE was a "company union" and its officers were "racketeers." The international officers, immediately converging on Hollywood, and attempting to enlist the aid of Attorney General Frank Murphy and Congressman Martin Dies, of the Congressional un-Americanism committee, charged that Local 37 rebels were inspired by "Communism."

CIO Influence Seen

At the time, it was felt that the CIO might be making its hand felt. It has been charged that the new CIO vertical unit has among its members the insurgent Local 37 members; but a membership list, either of officers or rank and file, has not been made public yet.

The new CIO guild, challenging the domination of the Hollywood studio crafts by the IATSE, claims an approximate 3,000 members possessing IATSE cards.

IATSE members were circularized over the weekend with postcards bearing the printed signatures of business representatives of IATSE's 10 locals, subjointed to a printed test, which declares that the purpose of the new Technician's Guild is "to destroy real unionism in studios for the selfish gain of a few.

"While it is doomed to certain failure," the text reads, "it will cause serious delays in negotiations now proceeding with the employers—if you permit it to use the NLRB for its nefarious schemes."

Membership Meeting Sunday

The Guild last week filed a plea with the National Labor Relations Board for certification as the bargaining agent for Hollywood studio craftsmen, who are now members of the IATSE. This week, the new unit's spokesman

NO STATE THEATRE CHAIN TAXES YET

Of 23 states where chain store tax laws were still in effect at the close of the late legislative season, none had such legislation affecting theatre operations, a survey discloses. The Pennsylvania chain store tax, affecting theatres, passed in 1937, was declared unconstitutional by that state's Supreme Court on June 19, this year.

The Montana, New York, and Iowa legislatures this year defeated or eliminated Theatre Chain Tax measures.

In Wisconsin, this week, a chain theatres tax was pending.

"Four A's" Cancels Charter of Federation of Actors; New American Guild of Variety Artists To Take Its Place

A brand new actors' union—the American Guild of Variety Artists—has emerged from the trials and tribulations of the Ralph Whitehead-Sophie Tucker leadership of the American Federation of Actors, the charter of which was revoked last week by its parent, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, after that body had heard biting testimony of AFA mismanagement, during trial of the AFA leadership on charges of mismanagement preferred by an AAAA investigating board.

Headed by Cantor

The new organization is captained by Eddie Cantor, a past president of the AFA, and since resigned, in protest, from the AFA Council. It is also headed by Belle Baker, and Edgar (Charlie McCarthy) Bergen. It represents the rebellious Federation element, which, after the investigating board had named Mr. Whitehead and Miss Tucker in mismanagement charges, demanded a greater voice in union control, and petitioned the AAAA for redress. It also represents those actors of stage, screen, and radio who are also members of the Association "dominants" the Screen Actors' Guild, the American Federation of Radio Artists, and the Actors' Equity.

On Monday, the governing boards of the first two organizations ordered those of their membership engaged in variety entertainment, to resign from the AFA, and to join the new actors' organization.

On Tuesday, Actors' Equity ordered its members working in night clubs, vaudeville, and all other entertainment classed as "variety," to join the guild. But it deferred, until next week, a vote on appropriation of money towards organization of the new unit. The delay in this latter vote, also causes the SAG to hold up its appropriation, contingent upon Equity action.

On Friday, the AAAA granted a charter to the new unit.

Meanwhile, Miss Sophie Tucker, president of the AFA, Ralph Whitehead, its executive secretary, and its other officers moved in court to enjoin the parent actors' body from the charter revocation; and the new actors' guild from enrollment of dissident Federation members.

Injunction Asked

On Wednesday, in New York Supreme Court, Abraham Halprin, attorney for the AFA, sought an injunction against Associated Actors and the new guild. The complaint which is part of the injunction petition includes lengthy allegations concerning Eddie Cantor, temporary president of the new unit; and demands that Associated Actors and the new organization be enjoined from soliciting or "threatening" Federation members, from "threatening" employers of Federation members, from seizing the records of the union.

The Federaiton also asks for judgment to set aside its charter revocation which resulted after a short trial last week by the special trial board. The petition asking for the judgment is based upon allegations that the trial board was biased, that the parent Association is without authority, under its constitution, to pass such judgment upon a member union; and that the Association is dominated by the Actors' Equity, and that the Actors' Equity seeks, by the charter revocation, to gain control of the Federation membership.

In the "AFA Reporter," Mr. Whitehead this week warned employers of AFA members that contracts held with the Federation were inviolable; and that any employees discharged must be replaced with Federation members.

On Tuesday, the AFA withdrew from the Theatre Authority, which was to meet on Thursday to "hear complaints and charges of mismanagement against the AFA." The Theatre Authority is in charge of actors' benefits. Chief among charges against the Federation officership were those alleging misuse of monies derived from benefits. In withdrawing his union from the Theatre Authority, Mr. Whitehead charged it was dominated by a "hostile" Associated Actors clique.

Twenty-five minutes after the special union trial began, in the Bar Building, New York City, last Monday, Miss Tucker, Mr. Whitehead, and other Federation officers walked out. They immediately petitioned William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for a counter-investigation of the Association.

Nevertheless, the trial proceeded last week, terminating on Wednesday. Testimony was taken from Kenneth Thomson, president of the Screen Actors; Mrs. Florence Marston, its eastern representative, accountants, officials, and others.

Previously the squabble was marked by almost daily issuance of blasts and counter blasts, starting several months ago, when Mr. Whitehead, of the Federation, asked the parent body to investigate his management of the Federation, in order to clear up ugly rumors.

The investigating board returned an indictment against Mr. Whitehead's and Miss Tucker's management, and ordered the Federation officers to stand trial on July 10, last Monday. They also asked a written reply to the charges.

Rally Effort Brings Riot

Miss Tucker and Mr. Whitehead, in one of their initial moves to rally support of their membership against the charges, held a membership meeting a month ago at the Hotel Edison, New York. The meeting was to result in a vote of confidence in the Tucker-Whitehead administration. Instead, it resulted in a near riot, when rebellious rank-and-file members claimed the Federation leaders had never offered them support against inequitable working conditions, and had unfairly used union monies. The affair also resulted in newspaper headlines, and crystallized the opposition within the Federation ranks, to the Tucker-Whitehead leadership. The following week, a rump meeting of the Federation, called by a dissident organization known as "The Ferrets," was held. This meeting resolved that the Federation officers abide by the decision of the parent body; that they give the rank-and-filers additional voice in the management, and other things.

The new organization—the American Guild of Variety Artists—is the outgrowth of this rebellious sentiment. Mr. Cantor, who heads the new unit, was outspoken since the start of the dispute, in criticism of the Tucker-Whitehead administration. After his resignation from the Federation Council, there was a vigorous—and suitably public—interchange of letters between him and Miss Tucker.

The new group gathered strength and organization fast this week. Its executive committee met on Monday. Alex McKee was named treasurer. Locals were chartered for New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Chicago. A Los Angeles membership meeting was held on Tuesday, and one in San Francisco, on Friday. The Four A's will give the new union financial assistance.

Temporary governing board of the Guild is as follows: Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild; Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors; Bert Lytell, first vice-president of Actors' Equity; Paul Dulzell, executive secretary of Actors' Equity; Ruth Richmond, of Chorus Equity; Jean Greenfield and Reuben Coskin, president and business manager, respectively, of the Hebrew Actors' Union; Mr. Cantor (temporary president), and Emily Holt, president and excutive secretary, respectively, of the American Federation of Radio Artists; Lawrence Tibbett and Leo Fischer, president and executive secretary, respectively, of the American Guild of Musical Artists.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, attempted conciliation two weeks ago, before the trial of the Federation leaders. Meeting at the Hotel Edison, New York, with the leaders of both factions, he offered mediation by the parent labor body, in an attempt to stave off a trial. The AAAA refused the offer, on the grounds that it could not be legally binding, and was not necessary.

Studio Technicians Back in IATSE

stated their activities would be held in abeyance, pending the outcome of the IATSE trial; but they qualified this with a statement that a mass meeting of all studio workers would be held on Sunday, at which time a membership drive would be launched, formally.

The new guild seeks jurisdiction over lamp operators and gaffers, grips, property men and swing gangs, prop makers, miniature men, special effects workers, Class B grips, nurserymen, projectionists, upholders, drapers, laboratory technicians, sound technicians, assistant cameramen, wardrobe workers, makeup artists, hairdressers, and studio utility employees.

The IATSE inter-union bickering, and the new threat if the CIO have the effect of holding up the negotiations between the producers and the studio crafts unions. The IATSE withdrew several months ago from the basic studio labor agreement with the studios, in which the teamsters, electrical workers, and carpenters unions also shared.

ASCAP Files Bill

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has filed in the current Florida action a supplementary bill and motion under the new state statute as a preliminary to the expected hearings before a statutory court which will set in October for determination of ASCAP's future status in Florida.

Leases Studio Space

United States Film Service, which made "The River" and "The Plough That Broke the Plains," has leased space at the General Service Studio in Hollywood to complete the narration and sound recording for the documentary film "Fight for Life," which deals with maternal welfare and emphasizes improved obstretical care. According to Pare Lorentz, Film Service does not intend to make Hollywood its headquarters.

Alliance Sets New Program

Alliance Films Corporation will release not less than 12 pictures this season, Budd Rogers, vice-president and general manager, said this week in New York. Mr. Rogers is setting up an exchange at the New York Film Center, 630 Ninth Avenue, under the direction of Arthur Greenblatt. Home offices of the company are already established in the RKO Building, same city.

Mr. Rogers is now negotiating with established independent distributors for territorial rights, on a franchise basis, for the rest of the country.

The 12 subjects will be action-melodrama, Mr. Rogers said, adding that they were selected by him as especially suitable for the market.

The first Alliance release will be "The Warning." This recently played the Loew circuit. It will be sold independently of the other 12.

The others are "Black Limelight," starring Raymond Massey; "Dead Men Tell No Tales," with Emlyn Williams and Hugh Williams; "Housemaster," with Otto Kruger; "The Terror"; "Mystery of Room 13"; "The Hidden Menace," with Otto Kruger; "Black Eyes," with Otto Kruger; "Spies of the Air"; "Just Like a Woman"; "One Night in Paris"; "Little Miss Molly"; "Luck of the Navy."

Mr. Rogers also announces that in addition to "The Warning" and the 12 specials, Alliance will release special shorts and featurettes, including "Bonnie Scotland Calls You," "Come Back to Erin," "March of the Movies," "Trail Waggers," and "Pathetone Pictorials."

Cardenas Helps Picture

President Lazaro Cardenas, of Mexico, has promised his government's full cooperation to Miguel Torres, producer, for the production of "Cortex and Montezuma," to be made in English and Spanish.

The National Bank of Mexico will finance the Spanish version; and a Hollywood major studio may back the English version. President Cardenas will allow Hollywood equipment and technicians to enter Mexico for work, and also will allow the Army, Mexican Youth Association, and the National Museum to participate in the production.

Ross Federal Transfers

Ross Federal Research Corporation has transferred R. L. Biggs, former supervisor and research salesman at Portland, Ore., to the Seattle branch as research salesman. Rico D. Tully, former national supervisor, has been named branch manager and director of research at Portland, replacing F. B. Gamble, forced to resign because of poor health.

Sets Two Features

Franklyn Warner, head of Fine Arts Pictures, will start production on two new features shortly, he said last week prior to his departure from New York for the coast. Mr. Warner was in New York for conferences with E. W. Hammons, Educational-Grand National executive.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

DISCLOSURE BY Mr. Darryl Francis Zanuck's Twentieth Century-Fox Studio at Movietone City that the Life of Stephen Foster is on the production list, under the title "Swanee River," reminds of the piece we read some time ago, by Merle Crowell, of the great emotional appeal springing from the story of the derelict who died 75 years ago last January in the charity ward of New York's charity hospital called Bellevue, leaving behind him, as an imperishable national heritage: "Old Black Joe," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Swanee River," "Oh, Susanna!" "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," et al.

A few days before Stephen Foster's death, the police of New York found him almost naked and unconscious in the hallway of a Bowery lodging-house, his head bleeding from an unexplained wound—a wound still unexplained. He was not yet 40, but already was adrift and done for—done for mostly because of loneliness and despair.

His folks came on from Pittsburgh in time to prevent his burial in Potter's Field, and the hospital authorities turned over to them all he had left in the world: a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes, an overcoat, a hat, a purse. In the purse was his entire fortune—38 cents. . . .

Thirty-eight cents he left—and something else. When the late Justice Holmes died a few years ago, there was found in his desk a will written in his own hand—a will in which he bequeathed the bulk of his fortune to the United States of America. So, too, the hapless Foster left to his fellow countrymen, something which only in our time has been fully recognized as a legacy beyond price . . . an incalculable part of the national wealth. . . .

Foster had poured out most of his great torrent of songs before he was 30. For them all he wasn't paid much. But in that purse he left behind him was, in addition to the 38 cents, something else. A slip of paper. On it were penciled five words in Foster's handwriting. Read those words now and you will know what they must have been. The title—or perhaps just the refrain—of a song he didn't live to write. The name of the tune that was singing itself to him when his story came to an end. The five words were: "Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts." There can't be any doubt, can there? "Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts." A Foster song as ever was. But a Foster song you and I won't hear this side of heaven.

WHEN Lawrence Copley Thaw, Wall Street broker, goes a-filming in the wilds beyond the seas, he does it in a style befitting the luxuries of a king, as witness the equipment now en route with him to Europe, the Near East and the Khyber Pass and India.

One piece of equipment is a $100,000 "land yacht," a streamlined creation with an overall length of 40 feet, containing a dozen modern marvels that are still lacking in many a modern castle.

Among the fittings and equipment on the covered wagon of 1939 are these items:

A salon finished in primavera wood and upholstered in royal blue mohair with pigskin welt, the latter matching the pigskin backs of modernistic chromium chairs, which in turn match a dining table that folds out from a recess.

Bathtub and shower of stainless steel.

A self-contained lighting and power plant which runs an air-conditioning system, electric fans, reading lamps and automatic cigarette lighters.

A telephone in the rear section.

Two-way radio for talking by voice.

A kitchen equipped with an electric refrigerator, running ice water, electric outlets and a hot-water heater.

A canopy, 10 feet by 20, which may be erected outside one door to provide a fitting marquee for visiting notables.

An electrically-lighted step outside each door, which appears at the press of a button.

A dining table is equipped with "a glow bar that imparts to all glassware a beautiful Neon-tube glow, that should do much to enhance a dinner in India."

There are two sleeping compartments in the car. A sofa in the front makes up into two beds for the driver and the camera man. The bedroom in the rear has a bed on each side, each fitted with a special table that raises at an angle to provide the proper surface for reading in bed.

Departing with Mr. and Mrs. Thaw were Earl Fahrney, who was with the automobile manufacturing company until Mr. Thaw hired him for driver and mechanic, and John W. Boyle, motion picture camera man. At Le Havre, France, the party was joined by six Indian servants who bring up the rear of the expedition in two supply trucks and a passenger car with a small trailer attached. From Paris the expedition will pass through Budapest, Istanbul, Damascus, Baghdad, Teheran, Herat, Mazar-I-Sherif, the Khyber Pass, Delhi, Assan, Calcutta, Hyderabad, Madras, Colombo, Mysore, Bombay, then Broadway.

RIGHTS OF DISPUTANTS ANALYZED IN FIFTH DE-CODING THE CODE SERIES

Nizer Discusses Special Boards, Types of Disputes Subject to Arbitration, Manner of Choosing Boards, Arbitrators' Oaths

by LOUIS NIZER

Clause IV—Special Arbitration Boards

(1) Appointment of Panels. In addition to the Permanent Arbitration Boards, there shall be Special Arbitration Boards. They, unlike the Permanent Arbitration Boards, shall be appointed by the individual litigants. In each Exchange territory, the distributors and affiliated exhibitors shall appoint a panel of ten arbitrators. Each organized exhibitor group shall appoint a panel of ten arbitrators. The exhibitor or distributor may appoint his arbitrator from these panels but he need not do so. His appointed arbitrator need not be a member of any panel.

(2) Two Party Disputes. Where the dispute is between two parties, the Special Arbitration Board shall consist of three arbitrators selected as follows:

(a) Two arbitrators designated one each by the litigants. They may be members of the panels but they need not be.

(b) The two arbitrators so designated shall choose a third arbitrator who may be a member of the panel of neutral arbitrators but need not be. If the two arbitrators are unable to agree upon a third arbitrator, he shall be chosen by them by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators.

Chairman. The third arbitrator shall be Chairman of the Special Arbitration Board.

(3) Disputes Relating to Clearance. If the dispute refers to clearance, the Special Arbitration Board shall be constituted of five members as follows:

(a) The complaining exhibitor shall designate one arbitrator.

(b) The exhibitor complained against shall designate a second arbitrator.

(c) The distributors, who are the third party to the dispute, shall, by unanimous action, designate a third arbitrator.

(d) The three arbitrators so designated shall, by unanimous action, select two arbitrators who may but need not be members of the panel of neutral arbitrators. If they are unable to agree upon either or both of the two arbitrators, one or both shall be chosen by them by lot from the panel of neutral arbitrators.

Chairman of the Board. The Chairman of such Special Arbitration Board relating to clearance, shall be one of the two additional arbitrators so selected.

(4) Right to Eliminate Arbitrator. Where a neutral arbitrator is chosen by lot, each arbitrator of the Special Arbitration Board selected by a party has the right to reject one neutral arbitrator so chosen. In such case, another neutral arbitrator shall be chosen by lot from among neutral arbitrators not so rejected.

Clause V—Parties to Disputes

There are three categories of disputes: those between distributor and exhibitor; those relating to overbuying; and those relating to clearance.

(1) Disputes Between A Distributor And An Exhibitor. All disputes which are subject to arbitration under the Code shall be between a distributor and an exhibitor and shall be considered a two party dispute, except those disputes relating to overbuying and clearance.

(2) Overbuying Disputes. Overbuying disputes shall be between a complaining exhibitor and an exhibitor complained against and shall be considered a two party dispute.

Distributor. However, each distributor who has signed the Code and at the time has a contract with the exhibitor complained against, shall be entitled to notice of all hearings and shall have all rights of a party except to designate an arbitrator.

Decision Binding On Distributor. Such distributors shall be bound by the award as if they were parties to the dispute.

(3) Clearance Disputes. These disputes shall involve three parties:

(a) The complaining exhibitor.

(b) The Exhibitor complained against.

(c) Distributors as a group who have contracts with complaining exhibitors and grant clearance to the exhibitor complained against.

Notice to Distributors. Each such distributor shall receive notice of hearings and shall have all the rights of a party except the right individually to designate an arbitrator.

Other Exhibitors Affected. If an exhibitor who is not a party to the clearance dispute may be prejudiced by any award made in favor of the complaining exhibitor, any party may file such a written claim with the Arbitration Board.

No Power To Proceed. In such a case, the Arbitration Board shall have no power to proceed unless within the time fixed by it, there have been filed written consents by such exhibitors of their willingness to be bound by any award which may be made in such dispute.

Rights Of Other Exhibitors. Exhibitors who have filed such written consents, are entitled to notice of all hearings and have a right to be represented at the hearings and to examine or cross-examine all witnesses.

Award Binding. The award of the Arbitration Board shall be binding upon such exhibitors to the same extent as if they had been parties to the dispute.

Clause VI—Jurisdiction of Parties, Choice of Permanent or Special Boards

No arbitration Board (either Permanent or Special) shall hear a dispute unless each of the parties has done three things:

(a) Signed the Trade Practice Code.

(b) Complied with the "Agreement to Arbitrate" provision of the Code (see Article XV).

(c) Signed the agreement of arbitration annexed to these rules.

List of Signatories. The Secretary of each Arbitration Board shall keep a list of the names and addresses of distributors and exhibitors in the Exchange territory who have agreed to arbitrate.

List Available. This list shall be available for inspection during ordinary business hours by any interested party.

Choice of Special Arbitration Board. Every dispute under the Code shall be submitted to the Permanent Arbitration Board unless one or more of the parties request a Special Arbitration Board. It is the intention that any party shall feel free to have a dispute submitted to a Special Arbitration Board.

Arbitration In The Interim. Until a Permanent Arbitration Board is established in an Exchange territory, all disputes shall be submitted to Special Arbitration Boards.

Powers Of Board. An Arbitration Board shall have only the powers conferred by the Trade Practice Code and the Rules of Arbitration and every award shall conform with these documents.

Clause VII—Oaths of Arbitrators

Each person appointed an arbitrator or a member of a panel, shall sign the form of oath required by law in his jurisdiction. If no form of oath is provided by law, he shall sign the following form:

> "I, ..., having been duly appointed (an arbitrator) (a member of the ..... panel of arbitrators) for the ..... exchange territory, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully and fairly hear and examine the disputes brought before me and will determine each such dispute in accordance with the spirit and intent of the provisions of the Trade Practice Code of the motion picture industry and the Rules of Arbitration annexed thereto, and will make a just award to the best of my understanding."

Additional Oaths. Each arbitrator shall sign any additional oaths which may be required by law in connection with the hearing of any dispute.

Signing Awards. Each arbitrator shall sign all papers necessary or convenient to make their awards binding.

Filing Oaths. Each oath shall be filed in the

DE-CODING THE CODE

"De-coding the Code"—the majors' new trade practice program for self-regulating distribution-exhibition—as analyzed by Louis Nizer, motion picture lawyer in New York, continues with a study of additional clauses of the arbitration agreement which is an integral part of the code.

The first installment of this series, appearing on page 31, June 24th, interpreted Clauses I and II, covering exclusion privileges, cancellation and trade announcement.

The second of the series, on page 30, July 1st, covered the six clauses from public demand for exceptional feature to score charges.

Six more clauses were covered on page 30, July 8th, including allocation, contract form, selective contracts, order of release, coercing contracts and other subjects of arbitration.

The three final clauses of the code proper were covered on page 32, July 15th, and the first three articles of the rules of arbitration were analyzed.

In the fifth installment, appearing herewith, five more clauses of the arbitration agreement and rules of arbitration are analyzed, as follows:

IV—Special Arbitration Boards
V—Parties to Disputes
VI—Jurisdiction of Parties, Choice of Permanent or Special Boards
VII—Oaths of Arbitrators
VIII—Terms of Office, Removals, Vacancies
IX—Arbitration Proceedings

office of the Permanent Arbitration Board and in such other places as required by law in any jurisdiction.

Clause VIII—Terms of Office of Arbitrators, Removals and Vacancies

(1) Term of Office. The members of each panel of arbitrators shall serve for six months.

(2) Removals. An arbitrator in the panel appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors may be removed at any time by a majority of them who are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment or abritrators to such panel.

An arbitrator in a panel appointed by an organized exhibitor group or groups may be removed at any time by the action of them who are at the time entitled to participate in the appointment of arbitrators to such panel. A majority is necessary to remove an arbitrator appointed by distributors and affiliated exhibitors. No reference is made to a majority in the case of an arbitrator removed by exhibitor group or groups.

(3) Vacancies. A vacancy in any panel of arbitrators may occur by reason of:

(a) Death.
(b) Resignation.
(c) Removal.
(d) Disqualification.

Filling Vacancy. Such vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made. The arbitrator appointed shall serve for the balance of the term of his predecessor.

Clause IX—Arbitration Proceedings

(1) Statement of Claim. To begin an arbitration, the complaining party must deliver or mail to the Secretary of the Permanent Arbitration Board a statment of the claim and a copy of it.

Contents Of Statement. The claim must set forth in non-technical language:

(a) Name and address of the complaining party.

(b) Name of theatre involved in dispute and name of the party against whom the claim is made.

(c) If the dispute involves overbuying, the name of the distributors entitled to notice.

(d) A brief statement of the claim and the relief sought. If a contract is involved, the date of the contract and the names of the parties to it.

(e) A demand for arbitration and, if the Permanent Arbitration Board is not desired, a request that the dispute be submitted to a Special Arbitration Board.

(f) The designation of an arbitrator to serve if the complaining party requests a Special Arbitration Board, or if the party complained against should make such a request. If the case relates to clearance and there are, therefore, three parties involved, the third being the distributors as a group (see Article V (3)), then the distributors may also request a Special Arbitration Board.

Filing Fee. Every statment of a claim must be accompanied by a filing fee of $5.

(2) Notice of Claim. The Secretary shall promptly deliver or send by registered mail a copy of the claim to the party complained against. If the dispute involves clearance, such notice must also be sent to the distributors as a group (see Article V (3)).

Acknowledging Claim. Within seven days after the delivery or mailing of such claim, the party who receives it shall deliver or send by registered mail to the Secretary, a written acknowledgement of its receipt.

Designating Arbitrator. If the complaining party requests a Special Arbitration Board, or if any party complained against requests a Special Arbitration Board, then the written notice of acknowledgement shall also contain a designation of the arbitrator.

World Pictures Corporation will release "Hatred," starring Harry Bauer, in September.

COURT BACKS BONDY ON HIS RKO PLAN APPROVAL

Election of Board, Officers for New Company Set; Minority Holders to Appeal

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York Tuesday unanimously affirmed the action of Federal Judge William Bondy in approving the amended plan for the reorganization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation which was submitted by Atlas Corporation in 1938.

The amended plan does not interfere with first lien claims amounting to only $50,000, but offers debenture holders with $12,500,000 in securities preferred cumulative dividend stock for their principal, with the choice of preferred or common stock with interest to the date of reorganization.

It also offers general creditors, with claims amounting to $12,000,000, and common stockholders, common stock in the reorganized corporation for their claims.

Federal Judge William Bondy was scheduled on Thursday to hear a petition by the Irving Trust Company, as trustee of RKO, for permission to call a meeting of the remaining directors of the present company in order to elect the new members of the board already approved by the court.

Management Continuity Sought

The petition states that immediate election of the new board would give its members an opportunity to familiarize themselves with company operations pending completion of the reorganization, and would provide a continuity of management between dissolution of the old and formation of the new company.

Of the 19 directors elected at the last stockholders' election on March 23rd, 1932, only two, James G. Harbord and Lunsford P. Yandell, both representatives of the Radio Corporation, will be members of the new board.

The proponents of the reorganization plan will proceed with its consummation despite any appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court which might be taken following the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision upholding the order confirming the plan, according to Hamilton C. Rickaby of counsel for the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the reorganization plan.

However, Mr. Rickaby also pointed out that an appeal to the Supreme Court might delay submission of the $1,500,000 underwriting agreement, now in preparation, to the Federal Court for its approval. This would have the effect of delaying the company's final discharge from court supervision despite consummation of the reorganization plan.

In the matter of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision rendered Tuesday, appeals had been taken by minority debenture holders, stockholders and creditors on conflicting claims that the stockholders received too much recognition, that the debenture holders' claims should be cut down at least 45 per cent and that various minor items should be adjusted otherwise than was done in the amended plan.

The Appellate Court in its opinion, written by Judge Robert P. Patterson and concurred in by Judges Learned Hand and Harrie B. Chase, stated:

"The District Court was not called on to say that the plan was the best or fairest that could be drafted. The problems confronting the parties were not easy of solution.

"The corporate structure was intricate. The demands of the secured creditors, unsecured creditors, and stockholders were conflicting. The demands were satisfied in a way that met with the approval of the requisite majorities of each group. The plan did not break the priority of the debentures over unsecured creditors and stockholders. In the circumstances, we cannot say that the right of the debenture holders were sacrificed in favor of junior parties."

The court noted in its opinion that the plan was not weighted in favor of old stockholders.

Concerning the demand that the debentures be cut to the extent of 45 per cent, which was backed by claims that heavy discount was paid at a time when RKO needed money, Judge Patterson wrote:

"The debentures, it is true, were issued at a heavy discount, but we are referred to no provision of law forbidding the issuance of bonds by a corporation at a discount, and the general rule is that corporations may borrow at a discount."

Judge Patterson noted that the debentures had been offered at a discount to the debtor's stockholders and concluded:

"We see no reason to doubt the validity of the debentures for full face value."

United Artists Signs Three Large Circuits

United Artists has completed three circuit deals for 1939-40 product, with Fox Metropolitan, the Durkee circuit, and the Rome circuit.

The first deal was negotiated with John Denas and William White, of the Fox Metropolitan. Charles Stern and Clarence Eisman represented UA. The territory is New York.

The second deal, involving the Baltimore territory, was negotiated with Frank Durkee, of the circuit bearing his name. Charles Stern and Fred Rohrs represented UA.

The third deal was negotiated with Lou Rome, of the Rome circuit. Mr. Stern and Mr. Rohrs represented UA.

Williams-Griffith Partners

In the purchase of four Nebraska theatres, H. J. Griffith has as his partner H. F. Williams of Minneapolis, and the purchases were affected in the Williams-Griffith name. However, the four theatres, two at Auburn and two at Nebraska City, will be operated out of the Griffith-Dickinson office in Kansas City.

Goetz Reelected

Joe Goetz, assistant division manager of RKO in charge of personnel, was unanimously reelected president of the Cincinnati Bookers Club for his fourth successive term. Mrs. E. L. Shakespeare, a Cincinnati exhibitor, and E. H. Mayer, Motion Picture Herald correspondent in that city, were elected honorary members.

Freshman Leaves ASCAP Post

Earl Freshman, head of up-state activities for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has resigned and will be succeeded temporarily by Richard Power. Mr. Power will work at the Rochester office, through which office all ASCAP business will clear.

GN HAS NEW PRODUCT AND FINANCING PLANS

RFC Loan and Participation by Brokerage Firm Set; Thirty-six Features on Program

With new financing in the amount of $1,000,000 virtually arranged, Grand National-Educational moves forward this week with plans for 36 features, 18 or less westerns, a series of color cartoons, reorganization and implementation of its sales staff, payment of its many debts, and hope that it will again be among the great company names of the motion picture industry.

Stockholders Meet

All of the above seems assured as the result of the meetings in New York, on last Friday, of the stockholders of the two companies. The Educational stockholders authorized officers of the company to accept a loan of $400,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Stockholders of both companies then approved the proposed deal whereby Felt & Company, representing a group of private investors, will advance up to $950,000 in new financing. This latter sum may be reduced when the RFC deal goes through, which is expected in about two weeks.

With the new money, Educational is expected to pay $260,000 to Electrical Research Products, which holds a mortgage on the West Coast Educational studio,; and then to advance the mortgage and other collateral, as security for the RFC loan. Felt & Company would have second liens on all the assets pledged with the RFC.

Irving M. Felt, of the brokerage firm bearing his name, declared this week that his company would have "substantial" representation on the boards of both companies, and in their operating staffs. However, the brokerage firm had an "open mind" about management of the refinanced companies, he emphasized.

While the RFC loan was expected shortly to be consummated, the Felt deal this week was faced with some obstacles, it was indicated by general comment.

The two former producing companies will not re-enter production, Earl W. Hammons, president of the two companies, said at the stockholders' meetings, over which he presided. They will finance independent producers, to avoid heavy commitments, and assure immediate product, he explained.

Thirty-six features, 12 to 18 westerns, and a color cartoon series are expected for release by the newly financed company. Among the independent producers' names mentioned as likely for the Grand National-Educational banner was that of Jack Skirball, who resigned from the company last week as vice-president in charge of production.

Mr. Hammons this week was expected to name, shortly, a sales head to replace Edward Alperson, resigned; and a permanent treasurer to replace T. R. Williams resigned. Harold Saxe has been holding the latter post. There will be a reorganization, and additions to the sales staffs.

Pocket Books

Motion picture titles are prominent in the list of books lately placed on sale in the New York City area. The books are pocket sized, cardboard covered, priced at 25 cents each, called "Pocket Books," and published by Robert F. DeGraff. The motion picture titles are "Lost Horizon," "Wuthering Heights," "Topper," 'The Bridge of San Luis Rev."

MONOGRAM SALES ARE UP OVER LAST YEAR

Monogram Pictures' sales this year are 40 per cent ahead of last years', George Weeks, vice-president in charge of sales, said this week in Hollywood, where he stopped while on a nation-wide exchange tour.

Mr. Weeks said the new season would be "without doubt" the biggest in the history of the company.

"Our budgets are higher; we will have more pictures; and, consequently, we are able to make better deals," he said.

Fox West Coast and Republic Heads Meet

Booking by the Fox West Coast circuit, of Republic's 1939-40 product was the subject of conferences this week in New York between Republic executives and Fox West Coast circuit chieftains, Charles Skouras, president; Andy Krappman, his assistant; and Arch Bowles, northern California division manager.

In New York also this week were Moe Siegel and Sol Siegel, Republic production heads, for conferences with Herbert Yates, before his departure for England.

Elect Council Officers

Mrs. J. D. Woodward has been installed as the new president of Cincinnati Better Motion Picture Council. Other officers elected are Mrs. Neal Ahern, first vice-president; Miss Hattie Ochs, second vice-president; Mrs. Nicholas Lodwick, third vice-president; Mrs. Frank L. Bluestein, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Harold Dine, treasurer.

Shift Salesmen

James Handle, United Artists salesman, has been transferred to Columbus, Ohio, from Toledo. He replaces George Jefferies, who has gone with Universal at Albany N. Y.

Signs RCA Service

Six theatres of the Morris Wax group and a similar number in the A. Sabloski circuit were among several deals closed in and around Philadelphia in June for RCA sound service, according to Edward C. Cahill, Photophone division manager.

Religious Films Company

Bible Picture Management Corporation has been incorporated at Albany, New York; its purpose, to distribute motion pictures of religious subjects. Authorized capital stock is $5,000. Bertram Reshkin, Bronx; Orville C. Sanborn, and A. Wallace, New York, are directors.

Griffis Marries Whitney Bourne

Miss Whitney Bourne, daughter of Mrs. Harvey D. Gibson and George G. Bourne, was married Wednesday morning to Stanton Griffis at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Gibson in Locust Valley, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Griffis sailed that afternoon on the SS Queen Mary for a honeymoon in Europe.

The bride's stepfather, Harvey D. Gibson, is president of the Manufacturers Trust Company and chairman of the finance committee of the New York World's Fair.

Miss Bourne, born in New York, studied with various teachers of the stage at New York, and in Paris studied at L'Atelier Charles Dulan, later appearing in repertory for a year. In New York her first Broadway engagement was as understudy to Rose Hobart in "Eight Bells," followed by a role in Gilbert Miller's "Firebird" and the lead with George Abbott in "John Brown." The young actress then devoted two years to stock. Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur persuaded her to enter films.

Miss Bourne played the lead in two Hecht-MacArthur productions, "Crime Without Passion" and "Once in a Blue Moon." After this she went to London for the Gaumont-British "Head Over Heels." She next signed with RKO and made her debut in Hollywood in the lead in "Flight from Glory," followed by "Love in a Basement," "Double Danger" and "The Mad Miss Manton."

Mr. Griffis is chairman of the executive committee of Paramount Pictures, chairman of the board of directors of Madison Square Garden Corporation and chairman of the finance committee of Cornell University. He also is a special partner in Hemphill, Noyes and Company and is a director in various other corporations.

Says American Pictures Dominate South America

Native Spanish language film production can never hope to replace American films on that continent, in the opinion of Clemente Lococo, a leading exhibitor and producer in Buenos Aires, who is in New York on a visit. He plans to go to Hollywood for a visit of several weeks, looking at production and visiting the studios.

Mr. Lococo said native production is improving and, all told, they produce in the Argentine about 15 pictures annually, at an average of about 150,000 pesos, or approximately $40,000. He said there are certain theatres in that country which cater to a particular type of clientele which demands native production. However, in general drawing power, he says, the native pictures are not up to the standard of American productions.

Warner Puerto Rico Deal

Teodulo Llamas, head of the Empresa Teatros Modernos Circuit in Puerto Rico, has signed for the entire Warner Brothers-First National product for the 1938-'40 season. The Warner product will play the circuit's 12 theatres in San Juan, Santurce and Rio Piedres.

NIGHT BALL, CONCERTS DRAWING FILM CROWDS

Chicago Theatremen Worried by New White Sox Schedule; Other Attractions Popular

by WILLIAM CROUCH
in Chicago

The advent of night baseball here is being looked upon by Chicago theatremen as an added headache among the many that now beset the motion picture exhibitor, not the least of which are the new civic night concerts, which attract up to 500,000 an evening.

At a cost of $200,000, the White Sox ball park is being outfitted with lights for night baseball games. This will give American league fans a chance to see their favorites in action during the evening hours.

Capacity Crowds Expected

Approximately 50,000 people can be accommodated in Comiskey Park the home of the White Sox. It is expected that the night games will play to near capacity, an assumption based upon records of night games played in other cities. Most feared by exhibitors, however, is the possibility that in addition to the 50,000 potential customers several hundred thousand fans will stay at home to hear the games over the radio. Already the radio stations are clearing time to put the broadcasts on throughout the evening hours and when the games start next month radio stations will be ready for the event.

Theatremen who are alert to this emergency are already planning to set up apparatus whereby the theatre patron can keep in touch with the baseball results while attending the theatre. Scoreboards that give a play-by-play account of the games will be installed in the lobby of some theatres while in others the radio broadcasts will be available to those who wish to divide their time between the film and the game. Another plan that may be worked out is the flashing of scores on the screen from time to time.

Some exhibitors feel that to give out any baseball information is only to arouse more interest in the sport and for that reason they expect to offer no added inducements to the ball fans.

Soft Ball Growing

A check-up with the National Softball Association headquarters here shows that this game continues to grow at an impressive rate. Most development in the sport of late is shown in the increasing number of girls teams. The ratio of girls teams to the men's is now about one to five. Needless to say it is the increasing number of the girls teams that bring out the fans. The scantily clad young ladies who play softball in rather expert fashion draw hundreds to their games at the neighborhood sand lots, here as well as in other cities. Each year one finds the softball parks increasing in size and number and many of them have bleachers for the fans who pay no admission charge to see the games. Their only concession being to listen to advertising pleas made by the sponsors of the teams over a public address system.

Next in line to attract the attention of the seekers of free amusements are the music concerts given in the various city parks. The largest of these are the Grant Park concerts. Crowds from 10,000 to 50,000 gather here nightly along the lake front to sit under the stars and hear fine music. Many big name musicians and their groups appear here during the summer months.

Chicago's newspapers in their promotion activities stage a number of free or low admission events during the year, which attracts millions of persons. Last Sunday the Chicago Tribune sponsored a Police and Fire department show that drew 70,000 to Soldier's Field. Boxing contests like the Golden Gloves and the CYO International matches also bring out huge throngs. The All-Star Football game each year is played to standing room only. Loop theatre business suffers greatly on the night of the game but gains a great deal if the game is postponed a day and many thousands of visitors are forced to stay over for a day. This has happened—and Loop exhibitors hope to see it happen again.

Other Sports Draw

A dance carnival in Soldier's Field every year attracts from 150,000 to 250,000 persons. This is sponsored by the Chicago Times and is free to the public.

Auto races, ski meets and baseball championship contests are other events that make the need for showmanship among the theatremen something keener than it has been. The newspapermen have been expert at getting out huge crowds.

Horse racing is also to be found during six months of the year in around Chicago. This year night horse racing on one of the tracks was planned but at the last minute the innovation was dropped and another threat to theatre business went by the boards.

Reports published this year show that yachting and boating activities of various kinds have increased ten fold during the past eight years. Some $50,000,000 is spent here annually for new boats of all kinds and repairs to those already in operation. The many yacht harbors that lie along the lake front are fast becoming inadequate to handle the rapidly increasing number of boats. Government funds are being sought to augment the city's appropriations for more harbor space.

Archery ranges by the hundreds and outdoor bowling games are the latest fads to spring up around here and while not so prevalent as the miniature golf courses of some years ago they draw sizeable crowds that are looking for divertissement.

NIGHT BASEBALL IN UPSTATE NEW YORK

Night baseball is proving a serious competitive factor in Albany, Troy and Utica, N. Y. In the last named city the Candian-American Baseball League is now playing regularly, and with the installation of lights for night games, the park is drawing approximately 3,000 fans each night.

In Troy and Albany, exhibitors complain that their business is affected seriously by the nightly baseball attendance of 3,000 to 5,000 as well as the regular broadcasts of the night ball games.

Pekras to Build

John Pekras, owner of three theatres in Elyria, Ohio, has announced plans to build a 1,500 seater, to be called the Elyria.

Colonel Jenkins Discovers Oil In Casper, Wyo.

Casper, Wyoming

Dear Herald:

If your readers have never visited the wide open spaces we would advise that they come to this country and get a view of what an important part of the United States looks like.

This town of Casper is located in the midst of these wide open spaces and out here one man is just as good as any other man so long as he behaves himself, regardless of the size of his bank account.

In her heyday Casper had something like twenty-five thousand folks, mostly Americans, but today twenty thousand would come near being correct and stock and oil are the chief source of her revenue. Besides being the division point of the Burlington and Northwestern railroads it is here that the oil is refined from the Lance creek, Salt creek and Big Muddy fields. Formerly there were five refineries in operation but today three refineries seem to be all that is in operation.

Casper is where the office of a branch of the Gibraltar Theatre Co. is located, which branch includes three theatres here in Casper, one in Wheatland, one in Douglas, one in Gillette, one in Graybull, one in Powell, one in Basin and one in Midwest, all in Wyoming, and this chain is being operated by Mr. Russell Schulty. There is also a part of this chain in western Nebraska which is being managed by our old friend, Billy Ostenburg, of Scotts Bluff, Nebraska, and we are told that there are approximately 37 theatres in the Gibraltar chain, which chain is managed by Mr. C. R. Gilmour of Denver, Colorado, who is the president of the chain. Billy Ostenburg, you may remember, is the Mohegan who skinned the hide off of us playing golf once, and we have had it in for him ever since.

A man told us yesterday that he drove across twelve miles of prairie and he saw from one to three grasshoppers on every blade of grass. Our guess is that the grass was very thin or that was a lot of hoppers. We are pretty strong on this hopper stuff ourself.

F. Wesley Huss, Jr., president of Associated Theatres, Inc., has been elected president of the Greater Cincinnati Independent Theatres Association, succeeding Harold Bernstein, who was elected secretary. A. J. Holt was named vice-president and Herman Bley, treasurer.

Visit Universal Exchanges

James Jordan, contract department manager for Universal, and Tom Murray, branch operations assistant to William Scully, general sales manager, are visiting the various branch offices of the company to effect a closer cooperation between the home office and exchanges. They are expected to end their visits by September.

Industry in Ohio Acts on Tax Suits; New Levy Viewed

Further action in the two suits of John V. Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the Ohio Tax Commission, at Columbus, challenging authority in exempting film rentals from state sales tax, and urging collection of an estimated $1,250,000 due for taxes since inception of the law, will be demanded by the industry instead of the Commission through a strategic move arranged by consent of plaintiff's counsel.

Universal exchanges, Frank J. Ferguson, operating the Avondale, a Columbus neighborhood house, and group known as Cleveland Theatres, have been named to represent the industry in the defense action.

Answers Due August 1st

Concurrently with the change, the Franklin county court of appeals granted until August 1st for filing answers to the suits, thus making the fourth continuance since the action was instituted. Meanwhile, the new defendant is preparing briefs pending decision by the court as to acceptability of the change in the defense setup.

The defendant is represented by Aubrey Wendt, assistant attorney general of Ohio, while the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has retained Bricker, Power and Barton to protect interests of distributors. Mr. Bricker, elected governor of Ohio last November, is an inactive member of the law company.

See New Tax Bill

There is a strong likelihood that a new revenue measure, including a tax on theatres, will be introduced in the Wisconsin Assembly, in the opinion of observers there.

The Assembly has rejected the Alfonsi-Grobschmidt amendment to the administration's tax measure, which provided for an occupational and gross income tax on theatres. It is pointed out that a new measure probably will be introduced to compensate for an $8,241,569 revenue shortage not provided for in the present bill. The measure has passed the Assembly and will go to the Senate for action.

Some confusion attended the introduction last week of the new "bracket system" of collecting the Kansas two per cent sales tax. As was the case when the levy first went into effect, some customers refused to pay the tax; others figured out ways of avoiding it, by making purchases in small amounts, if they could get under 15 cents, or by buying in groups, theatre tickets, for example.

The bracket system provides no tax from one to 14 cents; one cent from 15 to 65 cents; two cents from 66 cents to $1.24; three cents from $1.25 to $1.74; four cents from $1.75 to $2.24; five cents from $2.25 to $2.74, etc.

Governor Lloyd C. Stark has signed the bill extending Missouri's two per cent sales levy in its present form for another two years, to December 31, 1941.

Retail sales tax collections in Ohio for the first six months of this year totaled $21,205,184, an increase of $2,890,801 over the corresponding period of 1938, according to figures just released by Don H. Ebright, state treasurer. Ohio theatres pay the three per cent impost on grosses, which, in the majority of cases, is added to the admissions.

Berke Is Autry Producer

William Berke has been named producer of Republic's Gene Autry westerns for 1939-40, with George Sherman directing.

MGM GETS LION AND PUBLICITY

Fifteen lion cubs were to match points of beauty and brawn Thursday at the annual convention of Lions International at Duquesne Gardens, Pittsburgh, with an "animal jury" selecting a mascot for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's short subjects. The winning cub will be known as Leo Jr., to act as an audible trademark. His duties will thus parallel those of Leo Sr., whose roar introduces all of M-G-M's feature productions.

The "animal jury" to sit in judgment on the leonine contestants included J. J. Lyons, borough president of the Bronx, "Bugs" Baer, Carl Crow, author of "Four Hundred Million Customers"; Lyn Swann, New York stage actress, Dr. George Bull, Lions' Club delegate from Durham, N. C., and Jacquelin Tyger, fashion model.

The cub selected as possessing "most pulchritude and personality" will go on from Pittsburgh to New York, and will be officially crowned on Saturday, which has been designated as Lions' Day, at the World's Fair. After the ceremonies there, Leo Jr. will embark by plane for the Coast, ready to become the immediate impresario of M-G-M short subjects.

William R. Rodgers, general sales manager for Metro, was to discuss matter of shorts on the theatre program.

Southwest Area Changes

Ted Jones, district manager for R. E. Griffith Theatres in the southwest, has relinquished management of the Roswell, New Mexico, theatres of the circuit and will devote his entire time to superintending theatres in the New Mexico district. Wayne Patterson, formerly manager of the Reel and Rig theatres at Hobbs, N. M., becomes manager of the Yucca and Pecos at Roswell. J. A. Sanders, formerly manager in Gallup, N. M., assumes managership of the Reel and Rig at Bobbs, Marlin Butler, formerly manager at Portales, N. M., will assume charge of the Chief and Navajo at Gallup, and Jack Baldock, formerly in Roswell, will manage the Yam and Kiva theatres at Portales.

MGM Branch Revisions

As a result of David A. Levy's resignation from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as New Jersey branch manager to head Universal's New York branch, several staff changes have been made. Herman L. Ripps, former Albany salesman, has taken over the sales post in New Jersey with headquarters in New York. He succeeds Ben Abner who was promoted to New Jersey branch manager. William Williams has been advanced from office manager in Albany to salesman. Sidney Stockton, former cashier at the New York branch, has been promoted to Albany office manager.

The Griffith Amusement Company has purchased the Whiteway and the Klock, at Fredonia, Kansas.

Exhibition As a Career Analyzed By Researchers

The Institute for Research, in Chicago, an organization devoted to vocational research, has completed a monograph on "Motion Picture Theatre Operation as a Career," which it started last winter.

Starting with a brief history of the business, the monograph discusses types of theatres, staffs, duties of manager and assistants, program preparation, operation details, requirements and training, requirements of capital, costs, policy and earnings, and gives some highlight estimates of exhibition.

Payroll: $260,000,000

Average weekly payroll for all theatres is placed at $5,000,000—$260,000,000 a year, the Institute says, adding: A theatre receives approximately one and one-half per cent of every dollar of the community's money circulated among retail merchants; 400 theatre circuits operate 6,000, or about one-third of the total theatres; operating staff sizes run from five employes for the average 300-seat theatre, 15 for a 1,500-seater, up to more than 100 for the big de luxe houses.

Salaries of theatre managers are said to run from $25 to $45 per week at theatres seating 500 and under, $50 for the average seating 750, $60 for one with 900 seats and $70 for a 1,000-seat house, running upward at larger places.

"An accepted objective in the division of every dollar" of box office income is set at: Rent, 12 per cent; program cost, 30 per cent; salaries, 17; advertising, 6; other operating expense, 15, and gross profit, 20.

Capital requirements for owner-operation are estimated at $6 per seat for a 250-seat theatre, plus an additional $1,500 for equipment. Operation expenses are said to run between $350 to $450 a week for a house seating from 300 to 500 persons, representing all expense items.

It is said that the prospective owner of a small house should not start in business with less than $7,500 capital, and preferably with $10,000, and should carry a $50,000 liability insurance protection minimum.

The cost of feature pictures are estimated to average between 15 to 40 per cent of a theatre's gross receipts—and over a year's time, rental of all film, features, shorts and newsreels combined, are said to cost about 35 per cent of the gross.

Usually, it is said, competent theatre owners earn from $4,000 to $10,000 a year, and small circuit owners may have incomes running as high as $35,000 a year.

DeVilbliss Joins Circuit

Temple DeVilbliss has joined the Griffith-Dickinson Theatres, Inc., Kansas City, as construction engineer in charge of the circuit's $300,000 modernization program, already well under way. Mr. DeVilbliss for several years has occupied the same position with the Griffith Amusement Company in Oklahoma and with R. E. Griffith in Texas and the southwest.

Trust Fund Taxes Will Be Argued In U. S. Courts

A controversy involving $53,338 between Bobby Jones, former golf champion, and the Bureau of Internal Revenue will have its repercussions upon both the Federal revenues and numerous individuals in the motion picture and other fields who have set up trust funds for themselves or others, it is disclosed this week in Washington.

Ruling in October

The importance of the case became apparent when Mr. Jones, appealing from an adverse lower-court ruling, sought to have the Supreme Court review the issue. His petition for certiorari will be passed upon when that court resumes sittings next October.

The suit involves an assessment by the Internal Revenue Bureau of $53,338 as taxes on $156,200 which Warner Brothers paid Mr. Jones' father under a contract for the making of 18 shorts on golf. The golfer claims he gave his father an "exclusive right" to his film income for a period of six years, from which he himself drew only a nominal income of $1,000 a year. The money turned over to the senior Jones was put into trust for the younger Jones' three children.

The importance of the matter lies in the fact that a number of film personalities, film company officers and individuals in other fields have set up more or less similar trust funds, both as a means of providing financial protection and as a way to reduce their tax liabilities. The recent investigation by the Department of Justice of the tax status of Darryl F. Zanuck, Joseph M. Schenck, William Goetz and three other persons is said to have been based on a similar trust-fund set-up to which was transferred profits from certain film transactions involved in the Twentieth Century-Fox merger.

Laughton Case Precedent

In a number of instances, screen actors have formed corporations of which they became employees, their film earnings being collected by the corporations, which in turn paid them salaries. These corporations are, in effect, trust-fund method, but the Board of Tax Appeals has ruled in one case at least, that of Charles Laughton, that the set-up involved no tax evasion.

The Internal Revenue Bureau, however, has not abandoned the fight to have such arrangements held to be tax evasions. In the aggregate, it is said, the additional revenue which would be derived as a result of a final decision favorable to the Government would run into millions of dollars.

Sacks Forms Company

S. D. Sacks, for the past 14 years associated with Robert Teller, lithographers, has formed his own organization, the Saxon Offset Litho Corporation with headquarters at East 45th Street in New York. The Saxon company has taken over the Acme and Reid offset plant and has enlarged their quarters. The company will specialize in motion picture accessories.

Sign Monogram Deal

T. R. Williams, who recently resigned as treasurer and a director of Educational-Grand National, has signed a deal with Monogram to produce four pictures. Mr. Williams was associated with E. W. Hammons for a number of years.

FOUR MILLION SEE DISNEY ORIGINALS

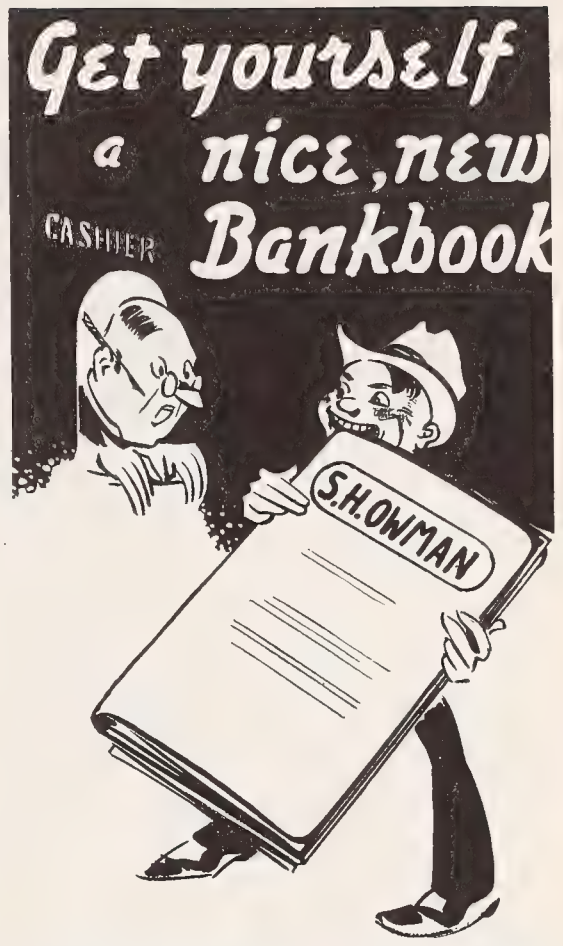
Four million people in June viewed exhibitions of Walt Disney's original sketches and celluloids in galleries from coast to coast, according to a report from the Courvoisier Art Gallery. The pictures were exhibited in 53 art galleries, 27 museums and 11 universities.

The pictures shown, and in many instances purchased by art collectors, were originals from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "The Ugly Duckling," "Ferdinand the Bull" and several other Disney cartoons released by RKO Radio this year.

Ad Films Found Cut from Features

A new copyright violation—snipping sequences from feature motion pictures, to make commercial advertising reels—has been stamped out by the Copyright Protection Bureau, of New York, according to Jack Levin, of the Bureau.

The cases occurred in towns of the south, east, and west, but the Bureau is withholding names. However, the typical example occurred in a southern town, where the projectionist, over a period of a year, had cut enough footage from features, to offer the combination as a commercial short, to local merchant advertisers. He used additional film for titles. In some cases, the feature sound track was backed by added narration including the commercial plugging. The separate clips were sponsored by separate advertisers, in the combination short.



Warners' Best Year in London Says Milder

Warner Brothers had its best year in London in the past season, Max Milder, managing director for Warners and First National in England, said on his arrival in New York this week on the Queen Mary. Mr. Milder is here on a vacation trip. He estimated that "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," now in its fifth week at the Warner, London, would gross $1,500,000 in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Milder denied any knowledge of possible changes in Warners foreign personnel, and said that trade reports concerning changes were without foundation as far as he knows. Mrs. Milder accompanied her husband. They plan to be in New York for several weeks.

Miss De Havilland To Be Citizen

Olivia de Havilland has filed papers in federal court in Los Angeles seeking citizenship. Miss de Havilland, who with her mother came to the United States when she was two years old, was educated in California. A British subject, she was born in Tokio, of English parents, on July 1, 1916.

HOLLYWOOD BOUGHT 319 STORIES IN SIX MONTHS, 89 MORE THAN 1938

43 Purchased Last Month by Majors Bring Total Above 1938 Period; MGM, Warners Lead in Number Acquired

With the selling season well under way for 1939-40, Hollywood last month bought 43 more stories and plays, keeping up the high percentage of properties acquired since the first of the year. Last June 59 purchases were made.

Originals Steady

In the six month period from January through June, 1939, 319 properties were bought, while in the corresponding period last year, 230 purchases were made, nearly 100 less. In both years, originals accounted for approximately the same amount of the total: coming to 205, or 64 per cent of all properties purchased in the first six months of 1939; and to 138, or 60 per cent, in the same period last year.

Last month, originals accounted for 51 per cent of the total.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with 11 properties, led the list of buyers in June; the 11 including eight originals, two novels and a magazine story. Next came Warner Brothers, with nine properties, including four originals, three novels, a play and a radio script.

Included in the Warner purchases were "Lost Beauty," the John Van Druten novel, and "Man of the Hour," the George Broadhurst play which had its debut in 1905.

Other notable properties acquired were "The Man on Half Moon Street," an English play now running in London, by Barre Lyndon, who wrote "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse." The play was bought by Paramount; while RKO purchased "Enchanted Cottage," Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's play which was produced as a silent film in 1924, with Richard Barthelmess and May McAvoy. Also purchased by RKO for Ginger Rogers was "Primrose Path," based on the dramatization of Victoria Hill's novel, "February Hill."

The month's purchases, with all available production credits, follow:

ASSIGNED TO ADVENTURE, autobiography by Irene Kuhn, purchased by Paramount. The book's locale is in China. Anthony Veiller will produce.

BONANZA, original by Fred Zimmerman and Henner Rodakiewicz, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

BURTON OF ARABIA, original by Lord Castelross, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

CARVING A TURKEY, original by Thornton Sargent, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CASE OF THE DANGEROUS DOWAGER, THE, novel by Erle Stanley Gardner, purchased by Warner Brothers.

CHILDREN OF GOD, novel by Vardis Fisher, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, original, purchased by Edward Small (United Artists).

CITY OF IRON MEN, original by Ted Reeves, purchased by Warner Brothers for James Cagney.

DAYS BEFORE LENT, THE, novel by Hamilton Basso, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE, stage play by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, also made as a silent film in 1924, purchased by RKO for Ginger Rogers.

FIGHTING RENEGADE, THE, original by William Lively, purchased by Victory for Tim McCoy.

GENTLEMAN OF SOME IMPORTANCE, A, magazine story by William C. White, purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Films

Of seven pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week two were approved, four were found unobjectionable for adults and one was condemned. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1. Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Million Dollar Legs," "Unexpected Father." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Man in the Iron Mask," "Spell Binder," "They All Come Out," "Waterfront." Class C, Condemned: "Mad Youth."

Heads Quebec Censors

Herve Roch, K.C., retired Montreal lawyer, has been appointed temporary head of the Quebec Motion Picture Censor Board, replacing Arthur Laramee, K.C., who was recently appointed as juvenile court judge.

Max Golden, who produced eight pictures in the last year at Universal, has completed his contract and will take a vacation before announcing a new affiliation.

Loew, Universal Profits; Columbia Declares Dividend

Official announcement from Loew's, Inc., and Wall Street reports on Universal disclose considerable profits from operations. Loew's reports its earnings for the 40 weeks ended June eighth, after deduction of preferred dividends of subsidiaries, as $14,271,675, as against $14,027,877 for the comparable period in 1938.

Net Profits $8,173,060

After depreciation and taxes, and the setting up of a reserve of $1,620,000 for contingencies, the company's share of net profits for the period was $8,173,060, as compared with $8,352,675 for the same period last year, when the contingency reserve was $500,000 lower at $1,120,000.

This was equivalent to $4.62 per share of the common stock, compared to $4.80 in the same period in 1938.

Representing the longest sustained period of profitable operation for Universal in more than 10 years, the company will complete 12 months in the black on July 31st, with a net profit of approximately $1,000,000 expected to be shown for that period, according to Wall Street reports on the company's current business.

Universal's fiscal year does not end until October 31st, but the company went into the black for the first time in several years during the final quarter of its last fiscal year, reporting a net profit of $161,929 for the period from August 1st to November 1st, 1938. Profit for the first quarter of the current fiscal year was $157,990, and for the second quarter, ended last April 30th, a net of $581,587 was reported.

Thus the profit for the last three quarters amounted to $901,506, and it is expected that the current quarter, ending July 31st, will boost the 12 month earning record over the $1,000,000 mark.

Columbia Pictures, at a board of directors meeting held Monday, declared a quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents per share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock of the company, payable August 15th to stockholders of record August 1st.

Winik Gets Fair Contract

Official Motion Picture Producers, Inc., headed by Leslie Winik, has been signed as the official New York World's Fair photographer, and will handle exclusively all non-theatrical films of the Fair. Edward Ruby is the producer of the series, assisted by Harold Godsoe.

Miles in Old Post

John Peere Miles, who resigned two months ago as publicity director for Samuel Goldwyn Productions, but retained a job in the department on special assignments, has become head of the department again. He resumed the post following the resignation of Gregory Dickson two weeks ago.

Monogram Biographical

Monogram will make "the Life of Benjamin Franklin," according to W. Ray Johnston, company president.

Cashiers Form Club

Theatre cashiers of Charlotte have organized a club called the "Cassier," which will meet twice weekly.

WISCONSIN EXHIBITORS AND STORES IN TIEUPS

Exhibitors in a number of Wisconsin cities are tieing up with merchants to present free shows for children and adults. At Marinette, a local service station is giving a free Saturday morning ticket to the Fox with the purchase of $1 or more of merchandise or service.

At Manitowoc, the circuit's Strand admits children free to Saturday matinees upon presentation of a top from an ice cream cup. Through a tie-up with a local department store, the Bay in Green Bay admitted children on tickets obtained free from the store to a Saturday morning show.

In the La Crosse, the La Crosse Theatres Company has tied up with the Nash Coffee Company, Minneapolis, whereby purchasers of Nash coffee are given tickets admitting them free to the circuit's Wisconsin, Bijou, Riviera and Strand in La Crosse. The offer is available at more than 100 La Crosse grocery stores.

Product Shortage in Italy Is Windfall for Independents

Independent producers and distributors are gathering a windfall in the Italian market as the shortage of American films available for exhibition there grows more acute. foreign managers recently returned from inspection trips abroad said this week. Independents customarily forwarded prints to Italy for acceptance on approval. This led to the storing of many of their films in Italian customs warehouses for submission from time to time as product was needed in that market.

With the withdrawal of major distributors from Italy, these stores came into their own as the sole supply of American product on hand. They are being drawn on steadily by Italian authorities, according to reports. Income from this source since the withdrawal of the major companies is estimated to have netted independents around $100,000 to date, and is continuing. Republic is mentioned as one of the leading beneficiaries of the development.

New Cagney Contract

James Cagney has signed a new long term contract, replacing his present one which expires next October, it was announced this week by Jack L. Warner, vice-pjresident of Warners. The actor began work Monday on "The Roaring Twenties" by Mark Hellinger.

Altec Gets Renewals

Altec has received renewals for seven theatres and contracts for two additional theatres from the Westland Theatres, Inc., of Colorado Springs.

Independent Groups Set Meeting Dates

The Independent Theatre Owners of West Virginia and Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania this week announced meeting dates. The Pennsylvania group is holding a series of six meetings, three of which were held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Harrisburg, Shamokin and Allentown respectively. The remaining three are scheduled for Hazelton, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Meet in September

The meeting of the West Virginia organization, a recent affiliation of national Allied, will be held at Clarksburg in September, with the exact date yet to be set. R. J. Hiehle, president, has appointed Danny Davis general chairman for the convention. The committee includes Mrs. C. P. Church, Mannington; Richard D. Marks, Clarksburg; George W. Sallows, Morgantown and Garland West, Buckhannon.

The organization has passed a resolution which makes any theatre manager eligible for membership, whereby they have full rights at all meetings and may suggest methods and plans, but prohibiting their right to vote as only the theatre owner members are permitted to do so.

Exhibitors joining Allied of New York after September 1st will be required to pay an initiation fee of $50. For that reason a concerted membership drive is to be launched between now and the September date in order to save prospective members the initiation fee. New York Allied will resume meetings in mid-August when sessions will be held alternately in Syracuse and Binghamton.

Danz Signs with Warners

Warner Brothers has closed a deal with John Danz's Sterling Theatres, Seattle, to play the Warner 1939-'40 first run, beginning September 1st.

Brokers Fight Plan To Drop Ticket Tax

Fourteen members of the Associated Theatre Ticket Agencies this week found as "unacceptable" a qualified proposal temporarily to suspend a levy of 3½ cents a ticket, originally presented by the League of New York Theatres and later approved by Actors Equity. The brokers pointed out that the tax had been in effect by unwritten agreement for a three month period ending last December 10th, and that assessments since that time were unauthorized.

The theatre league previously had offered to suspend the tax, which is used to defray the costs of administering the ticket code, for all accredited ticket brokers who were not in arrears as of March 31st.

Vitaphone Winners

Hal Walsh, St. Louis branch manager for Warner Brothers, finished first in the western division of the Vitaphone Decathlon drive which ended April 15th, Norman Moray, Vitaphone sales head, announced this week. Robert Smeltzer, central district manager; Harry Seed, Pittsburgh branch manager, and Bill Mansell, Philadelphia branch manager, competing in the eastern division, were tied for first. Engraved watches will be awarded to the winners.

Burris Leaves B & K

Charles Burris, manager of the Nortown in Chicago and for 16 years with Balaban and Katz, has resigned to enter the publishing business.

Ohio State Taxes Up

Sales tax collections for the year to date in Ohio showed a gain of $2,550,918.11 over last year, according to report released this week by Don H. Ebright, state treasurer, at Columbus.

Breakdown in figures show collections of $18,461,706 this year, compared with $15,910,788 for 1938.

Ohio theatres pay the retail sales tax of three per cent based on gross receipts.

Recommends Use Of Film Encores

The use of screen encores for special musical films was recommended this week to American producers by J. J. O'Connor, RKO Theatres head, in a discussion of the special encore performance of Universal's "The Mikado," held at the Palace theatre in New York last Wednesday.

Mr. O'Connor said that the performance, in which favorite song numbers were repeated in response to applause, was enjoyed by the audience. An increase in business was also noticed despite the fact that no advertising except one lobby display board was taken for the show.

"Any innovation which appeals to the public as this one did to our Palace theatre audience, should be followed by the industry," he said, adding "properly advertised, instead of being put forth on a stunt basis, the encore showing has great sales power when used for the right picture. It can make a good grosser out of an otherwise average picture—especially a musical which has several outstanding good numbers but is just ordinary entertainment for the balance of its footage."

Mr. O'Connor said the Palace demonstration served to prove the mechanical feasibility of providing such encores during a picture without interfering with the continuity of the film.

"The encore footage is simply threaded into a different machine and by use of well-timed change-over is projected when demanded by applause. The balance of the film may then follow on the encore reel or by another change-over the continuity is picked up by the original machine," he said.

Fleischer's Absence Delays Drama Pact

With Sidney Fleischer, Dramatist Guild attorney, having left New York for a two week vacation, further consideration of the pact which would return Hollywood backing to Broadway stage plays will be postponed until his return at the end of the month.

The film companies have not as yet submitted their demands regarding the new pact drawn up recently; and the Guild still has to call a special membership meeting to ratify the action of the Guild Council in accepting the pact as now drafted.

Albany Incorporations

Following are new motion picture industry incorporations and authorizations, at Albany, New York: Official Motion Picture Producers, Inc., 1450 Broadway, New York; Beach Movie Corporation, 270 Madison Avenue, New York; Tilco-Fin, Inc., air conditioning devices; En Route Personal Service, Inc., general broadcasting business, New York. Howard E. Reinheimer of 11 East 44th Street, filed a change of name from Wuthering Heights, Inc., to W. H. Productions, Inc.

Heads NBC Press

William Kostka of the National Broadcasting Company's publicity department has been appointed manager of the press division. He succeeds Wayne Randall, resigned. Edward Curtin continues as news editor.

Judell Company Sets Production Plans

Producers Pictures Corporation, headed by Ben N. Judell, starts production next week on "Texas Renegades," the first of a series of eight westerns starring Jim McCoy. Next on the production schedule for the company will be "The Man from Oklahoma," featuring George Houston. It will be the first of a series of eight "Tales of Billy the Kid," all to star Houston.

Other films set to go into production shortly by Producers are "Wanted for Murder," "The Island of Fear," based on Jack London's "A Thousand Deaths" and "Hitler—The Beast of Berlin," a story of persecution under the Nazi regime which will be a special.

Republic Sets Deals

Republic has closed a deal for its 1939-40 product with the Interstate Theatres Circuit of Boston, Mass., operating 32 theatres in the New England territory. The company also has closed a deal with the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Circuit, Boston, operating 21 houses in the New England territory.

Universal Has Darrieux

Universal Pictures this week replied to rumors concerning its star, Dannielle Darrieux, by declaring that its contract with her gave it the exclusive rights for her services in all English speaking films, and options on her French speaking films. The statement followed arguments in Paris over Miss Darrieux's contractual status.

Wood Signs Goldwyn Contract

Sam Wood, director, has been signed to a long term contract by Samuel Goldwyn. His first assignment will be "Raffles," with David Niven and Olivia De Havilland. Mr. Wood, who directed "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," has been employed in Hollywood 24 years, 10 of which were with Paramount and 14 with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

500 To Attend Dinner To Clyde Eckhardt

A report on the advance sales of tickets indicates that the testimonial dinner to be given for Clyde W. Eckhardt on Monday night in observance of his Silver Jubilee in films will be attended by 500. It will be held in the Casino of the Congress Hotel.

The dinner is attracting a large number of 20th Century-Fox officials from New York, who will pay tribute to Mr. Eckhardt, branch manager of the Chicago exchange and an executive with the company for the past 25 years. Mr. Eckhardt is the oldest executive in point of service on Chicago's Film Row. He helped start the first Chicago Film Board of Trade and was an executive member during the many years of its duration. He has also been a leader in most of the drives for charity funds.

The date of the banquet also marks the opening of the new 20th-Fox Exchange Building on the corner of Wabash Avenue and 13th Street.

Comerford Changes Made

Matt J. O'Keefe, manager of the West Side theatre in Scranton, a Comerford house, has been transferred to manager of the Capitol, one of the largest houses in the circuit. Other Comerford changes include the transferring of John Mahon from the Globe to the West Side; William Kays, West Side assistant to the Globe; Edward Pash, from the Riviera to the State; Carl Herman, from the State to the Riviera; Al Farrell, from the Irving, Carbondale, to the Granada in Olyphant, and Bud Irwin, from the Granada to the Comerford in Carlisle. Joseph Cawley, an usher, was made assistant manager at the West Side.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLIND ALLEY: Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Dvorak, Joan Perry, Rose Stradner—Played this one day with a stage show. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 26.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntington, Penna. General patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess—Wow! What an action drama this turned out to be. Tops of its kind with plenty of suspense and thrills. Good enough for any program. This man Mitchell whom you will see in "Gone With the Wind" is absolutely tops. Watch him. A swell picture. Running time, 120 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess—Business good. Cary Grant and Jean Arthur did very good. No one should be afraid of this one as it will do business. Patrons enjoyed seeing Barthelmess.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntington, Pa. General patronage.

RIO GRANDE: Charles Starrett, Ann Doren—A little better than the average western to a slight increase in business. Played July 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SMASHING THE SPY RING: Ralph Bellamy, Fay Wray—Satisfied a small audience. Played June 24.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

CODE OF THE SECRET SERVICE: Ronald Reagan, Rosella Towne—Good program picture and I don't know yet whether they were kidding the Secret Service or not but it got a lot of laughs and some action. When business is bad that is the time that the exhibitor needs quality pcitures. When I look at what I have been able to book in the next forty days I think I might as well close the house and go fishing.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CODE OF THE SECRET SERVICE: Ronald Reagan, Rosella Towne—Just a small action picture which failed to draw. Designed for the duals. Played July 3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWEEPSTAKES WINNER: Marie Wilson, Johnnie Davis, Allen Jenkins—Not much to it but it got the laughs so why complain and it drew average business here on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 59 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Good. Was well liked and was a good draw for small town. It had quite a lot of talk about it which helped put it over.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Did somewhat better than average on this although the picture is just program stuff. Played June 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HARDYS RIDE HIGH, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford—Here's just what the doctor ordered for small towns. This one sure brought in the business. Although the story, in my opinion, was not as good as "The Hardys Out West." Played June 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut—By now everyone who reads "What the Picture Did for Me" knows all about this delightful (?) offering but I can't resist putting in my nickel's worth. The first half of the title describes the picture perfectly. We didn't make film rental. The airplane sequenes were clumsily done and it was evident even to the most unobserving that it was all done with miniatures. Norma Shearer talked so continuously that it was very tiring. Clark Gable was O. K. except in the dance numbers, where he showed up as an excellent comedian. The best part of the whole thing was the blond dance chorus and they weren't so very good. Played June 13.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: James Stewart, Claudette Colbert—Good picture; fair business. Should have done better. No kicks. Played July 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KID FROM TEXAS, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice—Excellent fast moving comedy program feature that pleased and did average business. Played June 27.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—Business average. All who saw it spoke highly. Comments good. Eddy sings a number of excellent songs. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 22-24.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—One of the best. Did not draw but it pleased all.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO (reissue): Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy—Comment great from all who are seing it again. Biz low, however, due to four day holiday for "Fourth." They'll thank you for returning it. Running time, 115 minutes. Played July 1-3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Very good picture of the rough and tumble type. Beery very good in these parts and would like to see more of him in these kind of roles. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 4-5.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

TELL NO TALES: Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt—More good comment on this mystery drama than we have had in a long time during a season wherein Hollywood seems to have gone mad on dramas. A good picture that did better than average mid-week. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TELL NO TALES: Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt—Good picture; poor business. This picture is well made, well acted, had good action and plenty of suspense but lacks star power. Pleased all. Played July 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

EBB TIDE (reissue): Ray Milland, Frances Farmer—Carried through O. K. by "Heritage of the Desert." With such a supporting feature as "Heritage" don't see how anything could miss. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Evelyn Venable, Donald Woods, Sidney Toler—Sneaks up on your house record. It broke our all time July 4th figure. Deserves first consideration from first class showmen. Worthy of everything you do for it. A masterpiece of author, producer and cast. Running time, 67 minutes. Played July 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Robert Cummings—For week-end a natural. Play it if you do well on western pictures. Everybody liked it. Business below par due to heat.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER DOCTOR: Lloyd Nolan, J. Carroll Naish, Heather Angel—Another little gangster picture from Paramount which failed to draw. Wonder if Paramount will ever run out of gangster stories. Played July 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman—Played this on a week-end date to applause from every patron and good news at the box office. Paramount pictures are undoubtedly on an upgrade. Good performance by Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck. Be sure and play this. Business above average. Running time, 125 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Town and rural patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Gene Autry just the same actor as when he started but still does business. Smiley Burnette says "whoopee" and all the audience yells.—C. L. Niles, Niles Thetare, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Good picture; good business. I played two MGM's, a Paramount and a Warner picture this week and this is the first one which did me any business. Too much Fourth of July, I guess.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

LOVE AFFAIR: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—We ran up against bad weather both nights and business was discouraging. Excellent satisfaction. Played June 28-29—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—Very good picture but failed at box office due to excessive heat and old man depression.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

JONES FAMILY "IN HOLLYWOOD": Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—One of the best of this series. A laugh riot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—An altogether satisfactory production in which Walter Brennan walked away with the show. Our patrons complained because the ending was tragic when it easily could have been made a happy one. Played June 21-23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MEET THE GIRLS: June Lang, Lynn Bari, Robert Allen—One of the worst ever made. Did not please the roughnecks. Better pay for this and not play it.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field—These Chinaman pictures are not so hot. Poor business to a very poor picture.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

RETURN OF THE CISCO KID, THE: Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Hull—Am I glad that the Cisco Kid returned. The picture was very short footage but with business the way it is there was a definite pickup on this picture. And it was right down the alley for a strike with our small town clientele.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—

Picture is O. K., but no business. Played June 9.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WINNER TAKE ALL: Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Slim Summerville, Henry Armetta—Played with "The Lady's from Kentucky." Very little enjoyment my patrons seem to have received from either of these nor myself either.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Marjorie Weaver, Alice Brady, Arleen Whelan, Richard Cromwell, Eddie Quillan—Business better than usual. Fonda did an excellent job as Lincoln. Here's hoping we see him starred more. Cromwell and Quillan also turn in good performances. Why is it that we don't see more of Quillan? Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 12-14.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

United Artists

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello—An excellent picture that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PRISON WITHOUT BARS: Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best—Not worth a plugged nickel at the box office. In common with most European produced pictures it moves along too slow. Played June 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, Andy Devine, John Wayne, George Bancroft, Thomas Mitchell, Louise Platt—Was a big western and nothing more. Good for a Friday and Saturday.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—Fair picture. Was very well received by the few who came.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Roland Young, Constance Bennett, Billie Burke—This picture got a lot of laughs but the disappearing stuff didn't click as it was impossible. The picture was good entertainment nevertheless. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 23-25.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—This was a very good picture and was well taken. The advance trailer on this was poor and did not depict the picture the way it really was. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 30-July 2.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

MY MAN GODFREY (reissue): William Powell, Carole Lombard—Still packs the audience wallop of old. However, failed to create added excitement at B. O. Played July 8-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—This picture brought a lot of laughs but there was not much to it. In my opinion "Letter of Introduction" was far the better show of the two. Running time, 79 minutes. Played July 7-9.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—An excellent production that did fine business. Played June 30.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Bruce Cabot, Ann Sheridan, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Here's a picture for all you thrill seeking theatre goers, and should please any average audience. Some very good photography and color in this one. A new role for Errol Flynn but he handles it with ease and gives us a splendid performance. A good many laughs throughout as well as a spicy touch of heartbreaking drama and romance. Above average business at the box office. Running time, 104 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Jean L. George, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada. Town and rural patronage.

NEW AND PRODIGAL CONTRIBUTORS WRITE

A new reporter joins the ranks of the What the Picture Did for Me contributors this week. He is:

JEAN L. GEORGE, Jubilee Theatre, Deloraine, Manitoba, Canada.

Returning to the ranks after an absence of some time is:

R. W. HORNICK, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

Read the reports from these and other exhibitors in these columns.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—One of the best. Pleased all and they all came. You can pay off the mortgage with this kind of picture.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, "Crime School Kids," Claude Rains—Good. Was well done.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CANINE CAPERS: Scrappy Cartoons — Scrappy only fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHUMP TAKES A BUMP, THE: Charley Chase—Very good Chase comedy as it got plenty of laughs. Very good. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 4—Play this one. You'll enjoy the songs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT, THE: Color Rhapsodies—With such a title a good cartoon could have been made and this was very disappointing. Not so hot. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 8—Very good. Always interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE MISSING LINKS: Broadway Comedies—Very good. Played on week-end to enthusiastic audience.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WE WANT OUR MUMMY: Broadway Comedies—A good Stooge slapstick comedy. Played in the right place there are no better comedies.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CLOWN PRINCESS: Our Gang—The best Gang this year. More people, more action, better comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GRID RULES: Pete Smith Specialties—Just a filler; will interest only football fans.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR: MGM Miniatures—Another excellent historical reel. Very entertaining and educational. Our audiences like these Metro miniatures.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RADIO HAMS: Pete Smith Specialties—Excellent short on amateur radio operators that was very interesting. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BARNYARD BRAT: Color Classics—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FISHERMAN'S PLUCK: Paragraphics—A fine Zane Grey fishing reel. Beautiful scenery and pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GHOSTS IS THE BUNK: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ROMANCING ALONG: Headliners—A very good Phil Harris two reel band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MOVIETONE NEWS: Shots on the King excellent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 61—All on Rio de Janeiro and too much on one subject. Not so good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: No. 63—A very clever reel about the stars but over the head of the average movie patron.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CHICKEN JITTERS: Looney Tunes—This Porky comedy is about as funny as possible and rolled 'em in the aisles. What more can we ask for.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DOG GONE MODERN: Merrie Melodies—A very clever colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY'S TIRE TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—This series has gone from bad to worse. Skip it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRESTO CHANGO: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROLLIN' IN RHYTHM: Broadway Brevities—A very good Brevity on roller skating that had several clever acts. Better than average. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Fair Film Showings

The Hays organization reported Tuesday that "because of popular interest," the motion picture industry's film, "Land of Liberty," will be shown three instead of two times daily in the theatre of the Federal Building at the New York World's Fair.

"Land of Liberty" is a pictorial history of the United States, containing approximately 1,000 sequences from 125 released pictures of the eight majors.

The new starting times will be 2 p. m., 4:15 p. m., and 6:30 p. m.

Waldo Shows Foreign Films

The Waldo Theatre, in Waldoboro, Maine, shows foreign language pictures, and has played "Grand Illusion," "Mayerling," "Moonlight Sonata," "Storm in a Teacup," "Life and Loves of Beethoven," among others.

Producers Pictures Move

The executive and producing staff of Producers Pictures Corporation, recently organized by Ben N. Judell, have moved to 1436 North Beachwood Drive, Hollywood. "Negotiations for stories and stars for the 1939-'40 program are being concluded," said an announcement Monday.

Set Cobian Option

Twentieth Century-Fox has taken an option on three more Spanish language pictures to be made by Cobian Productions. The deal was signed last week between Ramos Cobian and 20th-Fox. Mr. Cobian, who also is a large circuit operator in Puerto Rico, recently completed his first Spanish picture for 20th-Fox under the title of "Los Hijos Mandan." He also made one pictur for Paramount release.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

IT'S CONVENTION TIME

National exhibitor conventions have come and gone, but as concerns the theatreman directly, convention time has just arrived. On July 24, at Niagara Falls, Ontario, Can., Famous Players-Canadian will convene to celebrate the first coast-to-coast gathering of all the circuit's managers. On August first, Schine Theatres manpower assembles for an extended program at headquarters in Gloversville, New York. National Theatres begins the annual manager pow-wows in Kansas City, August 8; in Los Angeles, on August 14. Other circuits are also scheduled for similar gatherings throughout the summer, including Fox Midwest, at Excelsior Springs, Mo., August 15 and 16.

According to the reaction noted by your Chairman in attendance at such meetings, the annual get-together is properly regarded by managers as a highlight of the year. It is a time for celebration when even hard-pressed executives throw off the cares of office and join in the fun. The long-separated meet again; new friendships are made, profitable hours are filled with meaty discussions on every phase of operation.

No more commendable procedure has yet been devised to strengthen circuit prestige; to give the manager an added respect for the company he represents. The enthusiasm generated by convention procedure and atmosphere serves long into the future in stimulating the well-intentioned theatreman to greater effort on his own behalf and to more productive campaigns at the boxoffice.

EDITORIAL THAT WRITES ITSELF

When the Findlay, Ohio, high school was being remodelled, it seemed that certain important courses were about to be discontinued for lack of space. That is, until Glenn Nelson saved the day by turning over the auditorium of the Harris Theatre for morning classes. It involved a lot of extra work on the part of the entire staff, and was it worthwhile? Listen to Nelson:

"Of greatest benefit, was the decision of the school board to change their plans for projection equipment in the new addition from the previously agreed upon 32 mm. to 16 mm. This eliminated any possibility of local groups or outside sources using the new auditorium to present 32 mm. shows in competition with the Harris."

Out in Sycamore, Ill., Stuart Tomber is always standing by to offer his services and the facilities of the Fargo for the benefit of community, fraternal, or other activity of merit. His good will and institutional endeavors are always to the fore, and are they appreciated? Listen to Tomber:

"As an indication of the fine spirit of cooperation built up through these various activities, the park board recently vetoed a measure to place lighting equipment on the softball diamonds because 'it would enter into a competitive field, i.e., the Fargo Theatre'. This was done without a bit of pressure being exercised from this source."

AIMING AT CUSTOMERS' LIKES

Comparable theatres in comparable but widely separated spots play the same picture day-and-date. One newspaper campaign is entirely different from the other in treatment of stars or type of story. But both are effective. There are important "reasons why" for the difference in advertising approach.

A revealing cross-section of customer-acceptance and an invaluable manual of advertising might be had if the newspaper campaigns on the same picture from every key city were brought together. The series by individual ad men inaugurated by Pat Patchen and continued by Dinny Dinerman in this issue is intended to point somewhat in that direction.

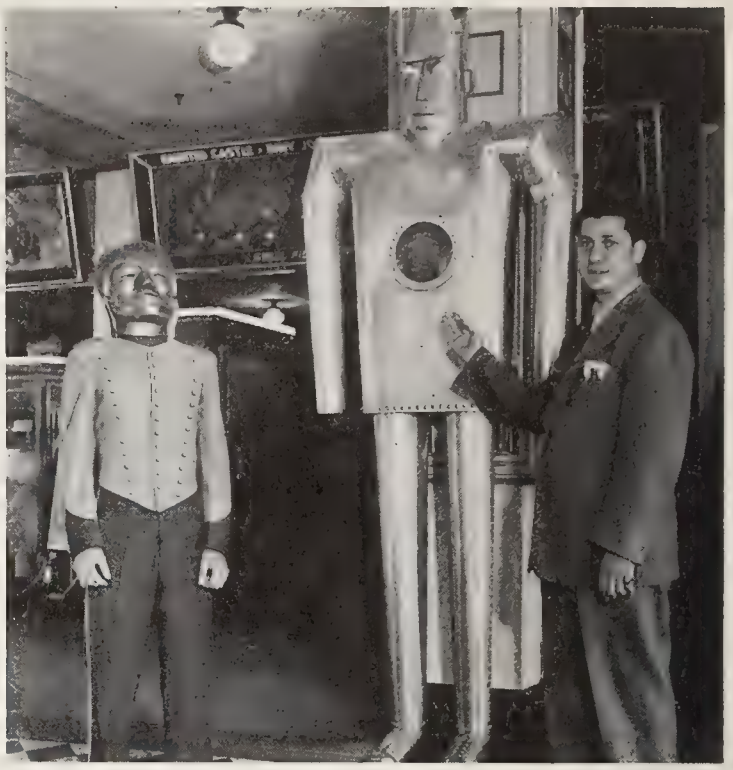
KIND OF A SHORT STORY



The Round Tabler who tells the story had been touring. Stopping off for a theatre visit, he noted a number of Heralds, still in their wrappers. Asking if he could look through them to catch up with industry affairs, the manager replied they were not current issues. The manager said he expected to get to them just as soon as his work allowed, the main work at the moment proving to be the construction of a small wooden box upon which the localite confessed he had lavished many hours.

The visitor asked for what particular advertising purpose the receptacle was intended. The manager answered it was to be used to store nails and other odds and ends.

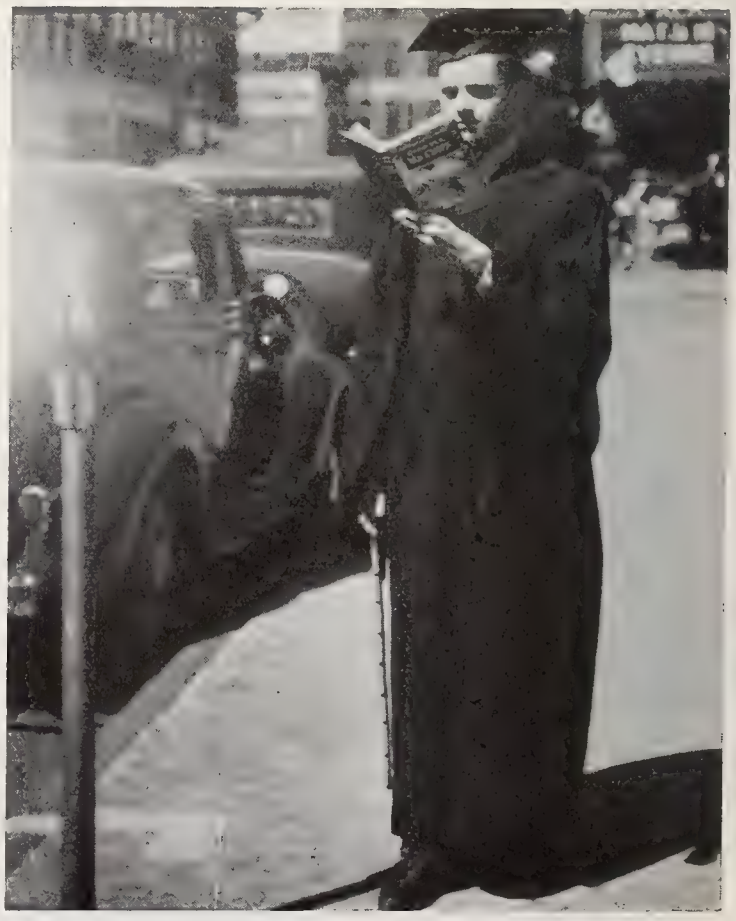
Round Table in Pictures



Above left is reproduced a photo of Bessie Bovine, who toured the city of Waterbury, Conn., as an advance for the opening of Ed Fitzpatrick's "Maisie" engagement at the Poli. Gag copy to the effect that since everyone was looking for Maisie, she, too, might as well join in the hunt was plastered on either side of the truck. . . . Talking automaton in the lobby of the Apollo Theatre, in Atlantic City, was crowd-stopper promoted by publicity director Nate Cohen to help build opening of "The Man in the Iron Mask." That's Cohen pointing to the iron man.

Boy dressed in student's cap and gown paraded downtown shopping center daily three days ahead of opening reading a copy of "Mr. Chips" as street bally arranged by Manager Wally Caldwell at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo. For lobby display giant book with scene still, cuts of stars, cast and playdates was used. In addition, leading bookstore came through with leading window display of books with appropriate tiein copy.

Situated directly across the river from Juarez, El Paso was a natural spot for publicizing the opening of "Juarez" at the Interstate Plaza Theatre. One of the numerous stunts arranged for that date by Manager Carlton Glenn was the giant arrow covering entire street in front of theatre which pointed to title letters. Also arranged for by City Manager John Paxton was special screening several weeks ahead in Juarez for President Cardenas, which brought advance newspaper publicity.

To sell the kids on "Dodge City," Bob Fulton at the Paramount, in Waterloo, Iowa, promoted a covered wagon, which properly bannered was drawn by two ponies and driven by a six-year-old lad dressed in cowboy costume. Inasmuch as the ponies were performing ones, the showman arranged for the boy to make personal appearances on the grounds of various schools about town, where the colts were released to do their act. Bob reports the stunt created plenty of interest in the picture.

The new miniature Crosley has become overnightly popular for unique advertising and especially among theatremen. Most currently reported is the use made of the model on behalf of the Western premiere of Alexander Korda's "Four Feathers" at Grauman's Chinese, Los Angeles. Working with the Fox West Coast ad department Russell Birdwell had costumed messengers distributing invitations to the opening.

In order to build up local interest in his "Flying G-Men" serial, Round Tabler Harry Sweet, at the Genessee Theatre, in Buffalo, promoted truck reproduced above. Bannered on both sides with 24 sheets carrying complete cast and playdates, ballyhoo covered city and surrounding area ahead and during run.

"FORTNIGHTS" BREAK ALL RECORDS AS SECOND AWARDS QUARTER ENDS

Appointments in Final Period Total 39; Judges' Selections for Quarter-Master Honors To Be Announced Next Week

by A-MIKE VOGEL

WHIPPING into the final Fortnight period of the Second Quarter with a promotional frenzy to top all previous returns in the Quigley Awards, 39 theatremen hit the line well bunched to win preliminary Appointments. The number, set down on this page, reaches a new all-time high for the 1939 Competitions.

As is usual, the highlights of the various entries are set down on this page and next. Results of the judges' decisions for the Second Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations will be carried in the issue of July 29.

Winston Promotes 4,500-Mile 'Phone Call With Eleanor Powell for "Honolulu"

Reported as a first time in Santurce, Puerto Rico, was trans-Carribean hookup arranged for "Honolulu" by Harold Winston, at the Metro Theatre when the local queen of Ponce de Leon Carnival of 1939 talked via long distance to Eleanor Powell, at the M-G-M studio, a distance of some 4,500 miles. Telephone company prepared equipment and loud speakers so that entire two-way conversation could be heard by all. Another highlight of the campaign was a "Honolulu Night" at leading beach club whereby Winston presented a Powell trophy to dance contest winners.

School Features "Mikado" Selections By Local at Graduation Exercises

A "Mikado" record album was presented by Erle Wright, at the Paramount, Syracuse, to the honor student of local school, which was paid for by the school and presented at the graduation exercises with speech about the picture opening at the Paramount soon. One of the members of the local Board of Education, who had had a leading role in three professional "Mikado" companies, rendered several numbers at the exercises and boosted the picture generally. Syracuse Journal interviewed the gentlemen, which brought story breaks.

Tompkins' Campaign for "Stagecoach" Clicks Without Newspaper Aid

Without the aid of newspapers and only by regular theatre methods such as screen, heralds, ballyhoo, etc., Chick Tompkins at the Voge in East Chicago, Ind., sold his "Stagecoach" opening to smart returns. Unique feature of the campaign was the preliminary and teaser ballyhoo with the appearance of a stagecoach with complete cast of cowboys and Indians. Two girls in cowgirl garb distributed handbills and 30 leading merchants were promoted for prizes and sales events during run, carrying signs inside and outside their stores. For a contest, each store was alloted a "Stagecoach Station" number which was conspicuously posted. In this connection lucky numbered heralds were distributed and to each recipient holding number which corresponded with that listed in any one store, prizes were awarded.

Reed Offers Trip to "Algiers" In Cooperation With Newspaper

An all-expense trip to Algiers was the prize offered by Manager James Reed through the sponsorship of the local Evening News in connection with a contest planted on that picture prior to its opening at the LaScala, in Glasgow, Scotland. For three days cooperating paper ran scene stills from earlier pictures and to those correctly placing them and adding a last line to a limerick run on day contest closed, the boat trip and promoted prizes from merchants were awarded.

Warnerites Invite Public Suggestions On Advertising Slant for "Angels"

Contests highlighted the "Only Angels Have Wings" campaign which was conducted by Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland. Through cooperation of the Cleveland Plain Dealer contestants were required to write what they believed to be the appropriate advertising copy to be used for this picture. Another contest was planted in the Heights-Shaker Press based upon what entrants considered the screen appeal of Carey Grant to be. Radio tieup was effected in cooperation with WGAR also in the nature of a contest with prizes awarded for the best reviews received on the picture. Abundant newspaper coverage was secured in addition to tieup with the Junior Aviation Squadron of the Cleveland Press which brought art and text breaks on the comic page ten days ahead, subsequent breaks following daily through to opening.

Rosenthal Stresses Music Tieins For Bridgeport Date on "Mikado"

Various musical organizations about town were circularized by Morris Rosenthal, Majestic, Bridgeport for "The Mikado" with a special announcement elaborately gotten up in double envelope similar to a wedding announcement. Station WELI which has a special request program for an hour cooperated by featuring a Mikado recording with appropriate tiein plugs. The Post devoted a half page illustrated feature story on the woman's page and the Telegram ran an editorial, all reviewers heaping praise on the attraction. All music stores in the city used 40 by 60 displays and pushed sale of Kenny Baker's records, while full cooperation was received from all branch libraries for cards and still displays.

STRESS CIVIC TIEINS

Under a proclamation issued by Mayor Alex Biemeret, Lincoln Days were celebrated locally on June 10, 11 and 12 as part of E. R. Brennan's campaign for "Young Mr. Lincoln" at the Orpheum, in Green Bay, Wis. The Neville Public Museum cooperated by arranging a display of Lincolnia for the occasion to coincide with the opening. Another highlight of Brennan's campaign was a special Saturday afternoon matinee at which admission was gained only on presentation of ten Lincoln pennies at the boxoffice. In addition 500 Lincoln pennies each mounted in aluminum good luck charm were given away through distribution of lucky numbered heralds.

Theatre front was dressed with scene stills, replica of Mayor's proclamation and list of clubs and organizations which acclaimed the picture. For his lobby, replica of wooden shack where Lincoln first practiced law was constructed. Also featured in the lobby was a miniature of cabin and rails made from wood cut on Lincoln's birthplace farm. Unique was Brennan's want ad idea asking for men who resembled Lincoln's build, over six feet and slender. Smart newspaper publicity was gained by a group picture of eight of the most likely in Lincoln costume, with the one bearing the closest resemblance used for extensive street work.

Benefiel Appointed General Chairman Of Local Top O' Texas Celebration

Having just recently completed the ninth annual Top O' Texas Fiesta celebration sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and serving this year as general chairman, C. F. Benefiel, of the LaNora Theatre, in Pampa, managed to hook in his current showing of "Man of Conquest" to the tune of plenty of extra publicity. A crowd of some several thousand persons saw George "Windy" Hayes, Nellie Walker, stunt girl, Walter Mattox, agent for Smiley Burnette and Gene Autry introduced in front of the theatre. They also witnessed the three impress their hand and shoeprints in a section of the concrete sidewalk freshly laid in front of the house. Theatre was the center of the celebration, employees dressed in costumes.

Jerry Ureles Stresses Novelties For Junior Managers' Week Tieins

Early in June, Manager Stan Meyers, United Artists, Pasadena, Cal., set aside a seven-day period titled, "Junior Manager's Week," in honor of assistant Jerry Ureles, during which time Ureles with his staff was given the operation of the house and all that goes with it. The attraction was "Only Angels Have Wings" and the advertising slant selected by the junior member leaned heavily on the novelty side.

For instance, pencils attached to imprinted cards and distributed to patrons suggested they mark down the date of the picture. Thrills were sold by means of a novelty button-hook card, copy advising the folks to button their shoes and fasten belts. A third novelty was an ordinary nail, copy tied in with the line "we've hit the nail on the head; we've found the perfect summer entertainment." Another idea was a safety-pin that suggested to readers for their own safety they keep their feet on the ground.

Toy metal planes, miniature clothespins, horns, Santa Claus figures were other novelty ideas utilized to call attention to the picture. Free offers of single dancing lessons and music lessons by leading local studios were also extended as a further buildup for the week.

Meyers also made much of the special occasion in his house program "The Showplace" in which the week was brought to the attention of the patrons with requests that in appreciation of the high quality of service given by Ureles and staff, letters of congratulations be addressed to the junior member.

Johnson Stages Three-Day Fete To Encourage Local Trading

A three-day bargain and entertainment festival among local merchants was staged recently by Round Tabler Bill Johnson at the Opera House, in Millinocket, Maine, each store stressing the outstanding array of merchandise available during the festival, theatre featuring special entertainment values. The theatre tieup came about through a special edition of the Millinocket News which, while stressing the three-day sale, also devoted generous space to the coming attractions at the theatre.

Red window cards were placed in local windows and tacked on street poles in surrounding towns within possible trading range of Millinocket. Entire promotion including the newspapers, cards as well as the distribution of both was paid for by merchant advertising. Plan included screen slides and special lobby and out-front displays. Johnson credits Roy Marsh, a newcomer to the circuit who was at the Opera House for a week's training, with aiding in putting over the stunt.

BANNAN ENCOURAGES "MISSOURI" SHOPPERS

The merchandising value of the title "I'm from Missouri" promoted George Bannan, Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, to sell his merchants on the idea of a full page coop ad, county wide contest and eight full windows at no cost to the theatre. Dubbed a "False Value Contest," passes were awarded to those who read the ads and checked the merchants windows for a false value, which was placed in some inconspicuous place therein.

Merchants approached were picked according to the value of their windows as advertising factors for the picture. Full page ad heading was "For shoppers who say I'm from Missouri, these values are offered." Two column eight-inch space in center was devoted to advertising the picture.

Because plenty of company is coming to your house and it's coming to stay month after month. They'll never leave you when they know that

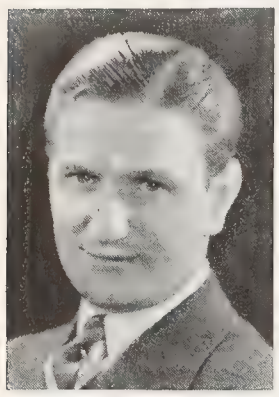
A Blackboard Discussion of Newspaper Advertising

The Second of An Illustrated Series By Representative Round Tabler Ad Heads



by E. V. DINERMAN

RKO Midwest Theatres, Cincinnati

The interesting article on this page and the ads opposite from "Dinny" Dinerman, ad chief in the RKO Cincinnati zone, under division head, Colonel Arthur Frudenfeld, make up the second of the Round Table series on the work of individual admen, inaugurated by Pat Patchen in last week's issue.

Newspaper displays by Dinerman, frequently published in these pages, indicate the importance of this form of advertising generally for the more than 20 theatres in the zone, and more importantly in the three Cincinnati dailies. "Dinny" knows whereof he speaks.

The various ad practices discussed in the article are illustrated by layouts of different kinds running from one-column to three.

Spending a little over a quarter of a million dollars a year, allocated among three daily newspapers, naturally makes us carefully cautious about how, where and why the money is going. No matter how unique, interesting and arresting the advertising campaign happens to be, if it doesn't bring back its proportionate return, then it's a wasted expenditure. Dealing as we are in a rapidly perishable commodity (individual first run pictures having a very definite time value), we've got to hit hard and fast, get over that selling K.O. for that opening business—or we're sunk. The thing to determine is not how much money to spend on an advertising campaign, but how little to spend consistent with getting the maximum possible return.

The Cincinnati "sales" department is divided into three component parts; publicity, exploitation and advertising. All three are of necessity so closely related that none can function independently of the other. In selling a single commodity, the sales angle must be devised pointedly. Pictures are discussed in the round table discussion before any actual selling is done on them. First, the publicity calculated to whet the appetite, then the exploitation to create curiosity, and then the advertising to hit directly at point of sale.

Ballyhoos Carefully Weighed

Often it becomes advisable to pass by lots of ballyhoos or contests that would garner reams of publicity space, but on the other hand would tend to react negatively as far as selling the picture goes. Naturally all prospective buyers are not alike, but generally, cities or communities as a whole will fall into the same channels of appeal. For instance, on "Goodbye Mr. Chips," we passed up a possible contest that sold the "old man's angle," because we were interested, after discussion, in selling primarily the romance and youthfulness of the picture and its stars. True, a lot of space would have been gathered for the picture, but on the other hand it would have constituted reading matter of a nature calculated to stress an angle that we felt was bad box-office prior to its opening. It is true, of course, that this does not apply en masse to the country, but from previous experience we knew that it would have been a poor selling angle as far as Cincinnati was concerned.

In the actual preparation of our advertising (paid space) Cincinnati operates a little differently from most cities. Primarily we stress layout, operating under the theory that unless the ad attracts attention its entire purpose has been lost. After discussing the angle of attack, the artist prepares his rough layout, which after final revision is made into the finished art layout. Only after this has been done is the copy written. Then the copy is cut and moulded to fit the layout specifications, rather than the procedure followed in most advertising agencies where the copy is first written and then the art work fitted in around the copy. Consequently our ads are primarily geared to attract attention, and then be readable with selling copy. This makes, we feel, for more attractive ads as well as allowing for greater layout variation, since the artist is not handicapped by forceful adaptation of "must" copy.

Finds Velox Process Cuts Costs

Mechanically, we take a great deal of concern in the making up of the ads. For halftones we use the velox process, doing considerable retouching on the original art as well as on the velox prior to the engravings. We find that by using this process we can safely use up to a 70 line screen and still get excellent reproduction despite a poor quality of news paper. This, of course, eliminates much of the coarseness that customarily accompanies combination halftones made by the engravers. The cost of the engravings is kept at a minimum by making our veloxes, wherever possible, in bulk, and the additional saving occurs by shooting all our plates as straight zincs, (through use of the screen veloxes) thus eliminating the high cost of combination line and halftone zincs. We use a typesetting service that functions on a 24-hour basis; consequently we can lay out our copy during the day while the artist is working on the ad; the type is set during the night and is back to us first thing in the morning ready for insertion by the artists. This also allows for further corrections in typography during the day. The same night service applies to our engravers. This allows our ads to go to the engravers during the late evening and they are ready for insertion in the newspapers on the following morning or afternoon. To facilitate the distribution and equal reproduction values, the mats are pulled by a firm that specializes in mats; and further, wherever possible, we even eliminate mats and try to supply the newspapers with the actual metal which, of course, gives the best reproduction of all.

Art Revised to Serve Locally

On some occasions we find that the art supplied by the studios isn't suitable to the angle we wish to use. On such occasions (and we find this to be the case quite often in films that are made abroad) we resort to making our own illustrations; eliminating the deficiency in that manner. For example, in the selling of "The Mikado," the makeup used by star Kenny Baker tended to make him look like he was severely in need of a haircut. We made a wash drawing of our handsome hero, working from a head star still that we had in the files from a previous picture, and attempted to doctor up the illustration as much as possible in keeping with the spirit of the show as we thought we could make it appealing.

Sometimes, instead of wash drawings, we will use pen-and-inks (woodcut treatment) although we do this seldom due to the laboriousness of the procedure as well as the fact that the pen-and-ink style too often fails to convey quickly as much fidelity to the star or stars as is possible under the half-tone process.

Teaser Campaigns Not Ignored

Occasionally pictures come along, where the method of approach is that of the "teaser" campaign. Such a possibility was foreseen in the difficult-to-sell "Pygmalion"; first done excellently by the Metro home office, then followed through on (after proving its efficiency) in its various engagements around the country. It was an excellent attack, well-devised, and sold the picture as probably no other angle could. Its plan was to "kid" the title, using cartoon illustrations, a minimum of copy, and "gagging" author George Bernard Shaw. A plan much along the same lines is now in the process of construction for use on Metro's forthcoming "Maisie." A plan such as this has its merits; however, one of its biggest drawbacks is that you can't use a teaser campaign of this type more than once or possibly twice a year or it automatically loses its novelty and hence its appeal.

The biggest drawback on ads that originate outside of the locale where they are scheduled to run is that what suits one town might not suit another. As a direct ex-

Round Tablers Set Fashion Revues To Stir July Grosses

With no cooling system to ballyhoo and sell to his customers, and with various children's activities going on previous to graduation, Glenn Nelson, at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, contacted a local dancing academy and sold them the idea of putting on a show at his house. Outside of a short announcement on the screen and plugs in the regular theatre newspaper ads, entire program was costless to the theatre. Dance studio plugged the show, furnished all the costumes for their students and everything else necessary for the production, in addition to lobby setpiece.

Building July up as the "star spangled month in our nation's proud history," David Dallas, manager of the new Kansan and Uptown Theatres in Parsons, Kan., featured a surprise midnight firecracker show in the form of a sneak prevue, patrons not knowing what the picture would be until they saw it. Another activity engaged in by this theatreman was a beach fashion show on stage through cooperation of local store in which the latest modes in bathing suits were modeled by leading localites. Cooperating merchant sold the show storewide and in his ads. Incidentally, mimeographed weekly by Dallas is his little theatre paper called "Picture Pointers" in which, addressed in letter form, his patrons get the lowdown on forthcoming attractions and various activities to be held at the theatre.

Moss Stages Fashion Revue

Various activities have been engaged in by Dick Moss, at the Fox Belmont, in Los Angeles, among which was tieup with local school of mannequins which presented a Summer Fashion Revue in the lobby without cost to the theatre. This served a twofold purpose, provided an interesting lobby attraction and helped "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Another costless stunt was the presentation of a preview of the World's Fair Frolics by the Bud Murrau starlets at a Saturday matinee performance. This attraction is now current at the San Francisco Fair.

For Mothers' Day, Moss promoted a $2,500 painting to display in his lobby in advance and also promoted flowers for each mother attending the show. Also arranged for is a tieup with local Junior College for stories in the motion picture column of the school paper on all pictures suitable for student consumption.

Pearlman Turns Horticulturist

For several years Manager Sam Pearlman of Loew's Apollo, New York, has been paying for vines and flowers to fill the boxes surrounding his open-air roof garden. This summer Sam tried his hand by placing sweet potatoes in Mason jars filled with water. The spuds have sprouted and long sweet-potato vines have taken the place of expensive posies. Cost—seventy-five cents as against seventy-five dollars.

"Shopping" Public Makes More Copy Advisable in Ads

ample, airplane pictures in most cities are sold primarily from the romance angle with an almost complete disregard for even so much as a hint towards the airplanes, much less an illustration of an airplane. Yet while this is excellent for Cincinnati audiences, we have found that exactly the opposite is true for our theatres in Dayton. It seems that the folk up in Dayton like their airplanes on the screen as well as they do on Wright Field.

Institutional Ads Sell Theatre

Faced with the problem of institutional advertising, we took advantage of Motion Pictures' Greatest year to use this angle throughout our entire campaign, and it fitted our needs perfectly. We were able through the free promotion of full page ads, to sell not only the Hollywood personalities and product, but also able to impress upon the Cincinnati audiences the fact that the local theatres were part and parcel of a thriving business that meant a great deal to the city's welfare; that the theatres employed so many thousand people, had so many millions invested in real estate holdings, etc. In short, we tried to make them feel that the theatres represented an actual part of the community welfare, pointing towards civic pride in that the rest of the nation turned their eyes towards Cincinnati.

"Keep Informed on Grosses"

Generally the standard type of ad is used, dependent upon its freshness of layout, coincidental use of white space, and clarity of copy. Lately we have been making an attempt to use more copy in the ads than formerly, feeling that today people are "shopping" more for their shows and as a consequence are more given towards actually reading the copy rather than merely glancing over it as was formerly the case.

It's good business to keep yourself well informed on grosses and compare them to the ads used. In this manner, you can keep an accurate check on "pulling power," not only of the type of the ad itself, but also on the possibilities of the billing order for star display values on future ads. For example, the same type of appealing layout may still be used on the next picture starring Mr. Robert Donat, but perhaps it might be well to use him below the title instead of above.

IN COURTS

RCA Wins Decision In Radio Discs Suit

RCA Manufacturing Company, complainant in an action against Paul Whiteman, and WBO Broadcasting Corporation, established its rights to control use by radio broadcasts of phonograph records of its manufacture, according to a decision of Judge Vincent L. Leibell of the United States district court of New York. Although not a party in the action, the National Association of Broadcasters' counsel was permitted by the court to argue the position of the broadcasting industry against that of the record manufacturer. Its counsel also filed briefs which were studied by the court.

The court issued an injunction in favor of RCA against WBO, Inc., operators of WNEW, New York City, permanently restraining the station from further unauthorized use of Victor and Bluebird records. Injunctive relief was also directed in favor of RCA and against Mr. Whiteman from further asserting, either directly or through the National Association of Performing Artists, that he has the right to prevent or permit radio broadcasts of Victor or Bluebird records embodying his performance unless an express reservation of this right was made in his contract of employment.

F&M Sues Lawyers For Return of Fee

Fanchon and Marco, Inc., and two Missouri incorporated subsidiaries have filed a suit in the St. Louis court against John A. Leahy, Sr., St. Louis attorney, and two of his associates, Lambert E. Walther and Harold F. Hecker, seeking $42,200 claimed to have been paid as a legal fee. Plaintiffs also ask the court to enjoin the defendants from selling or transferring a series of notes totaling $42,800 and to order their return.

The petition further claims that the Fanchon and Marco companies agreed to pay an additional fee of $25,000 to James P. Aylward, Kansas City attorney and Democratic Party leader in Missouri, after they were told that a Missouri anti-trust action against them could not be dismissed until Mr. Aylward's fee for legal services had been paid. Mr. Leahy, the petition states, advised that Mr. Aylward be retained.

Fritz Kuhn Appeals

Notice of appeal to the circuit court of appeals from the decision of Vincent L. Leibell, federal judge, denying a preliminary injunction restraining exhibition of the Warner Brothers picture, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," has been filed by Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader.

Wanger Suit Filed

Conly Keeney, Hollywood authoress, this week filed a suit in federal court in Los Angeles against Walter Wanger, Inc., Tay Garnett and others, claiming "Trade Winds" infringed upon her copyright novel, "Feather in the Wind."

Arnow with Wanger

Max Arnow is working at his new post: production executive for Walter Wanger, in Hollywood.

Pacific National Theatres Receivership Is Sought

A bill asking appointment of a receiver for the dissolved Pacific National Theatres, Inc., rather than the appointment of the directors as trustees in dissolution, has been filed in the court of chancery in Wilmington, Del., by two San Diego, Cal., stockholders. The plaintiffs are Margaret M. Stevens and W. Ernest Choate. The corporation was dissolved in April, 1937. Howard F. Duane represents the complainants.

Pacific National, the complainants claim, has since its dissolution been engaged in distributing to and among its shareholders one share of preferred stock of Preferred Theatres Corporation and five cents in cash for each share of stock of Pacific National Theatres, Inc. The complainants claim they have not received such distributive shares or dividends which they claim have been paid on the Preferred Theatres stock. An action brought by the same complainants is pending in the Los Angeles County superior court.

OBITUARIES

Frank Hill, Reading Theatre Man, Dies

Frank D. Hill, since the age of 15 a theatre man, and well known in Reading, Pa., as the manager at one time or another of most of the town's theatres, died on Monday in that city, aged 60, after a long illness.

Mr. Hill was born in Utica, New York. He began his theatrical career in the choruses of minstrel shows. In 1902, he became associated with the Wilmer and Vincent circuit, in Utica Hill. In 1905, they made him the manager of the Orpheum, in Reading. Between employment and while working, Mr. Hill found time to appear in stock and vaudeville. He operated the Lyric, in Reading, until 1922. He then went back to Wilmer and Vincent, managing the Capitol and the Rajah.

In 1927, he managed the Strand for the Franklin Theatre Company, but then rejoined the Rajah for Wilmer and Vincent. That was his last active connection with the theatre.

Mr. Hill was an intimate of many theatrical and vaudeville notables, and had many friends in Reading.

He is survived by his widow, Katherine, and brother-in-law, Harry.

Richard Gledhill

Richard Gledhill, upstate New York salesman for Twentieth Century-Fox, died July 12th of a heart attack. Mr. Gledhill was at the wheel of his car at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., when he collapsed. Mr. Gledhill, who had been in the industry for 25 years, joined Fox Film 15 years ago. Previously he had been with Paramount for 10 years. He was 55.

Clyde Tanner

Clyde K. Tanner, formerly manager of the Broadway-Capitol theatre and assistant at the Michigan for United Detroit Theatres, and his wife, were killed in an airplane accident near their home in Douglas, Ga., last weekend. He was an air pilot. Mrs. Tanner, the former Dorothy Downing, was pianist at the Michigan theatre and organist at various Detroit theatres.

Henry Updegraff

Henry J. (Upde) Updegraff, well-known Portland, Ore., exhibitor of the Roseway and other suburban houses, died there July 12th of a heart attack. He was 58.

Mrs. Mary Bruder

Mrs. Mary Bruder, 73, mother of Roy Bruder and Mrs. John Balaban, died in Chicago July 13th after a brief illness. Roy Bruder is the manager of the Chicago theatre.

Fanny Brice, screen and radio comedienne, filed suit in Chicago this week seeking $750,000 damages from Twentieth Century-Fox, Tyrone Power, Al Jolson, Alice Faye, eight theatre companies and officials of the film company. The plaintiff charged that the picture "Rose of Washington Square" defamed her character, invaded her private rights and libeled her by dialogue and scenes. The story, she claims, is her life story and was used without her permission. An injunction, restraining further showings of the film, is also sought.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

BOOKS

MOTION PICTURE SOUND ENGINEERING—547 pages; illustrated; covers every practical method and process in present-day sound engineering. Leading engineers explain every detail of apparatus and its arrangement, with diagrams, tables, charts and graphs. This manual comes straight from the workshops of the studios in Hollywood. It is indispensable to everyone working with sound equipment. $6.50 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP. Rockefeller Center, New York.

THE 1939-40 EDITION OF THE INDUSTRY'S international reference book, "Motion Picture Almanac," edited by Terry Ramsaye, is now on the press. It is indispensable to every executive in the industry. This issue contains more than 11,000 biographies of important film people. Send your order today with a check for $3.25 (postpaid) and a copy will be reserved in your name. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

NEW 567 PAGE BOOK ON AIR CONDITIONING by Charles A. Fuller, authority on the subject. Available for theatre owners contemplating engineering changes. Book is cloth bound with index and charts and covers every branch of the industry as well as codes and ordinances regulating installation. Order now at $4.00 a copy postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION. Just off the press! A second revision of the Sixth Edition of Richardson's Bluebook of Projection with a complete section of Sound Trouble—Shooting Charts as well as a host of additional up-to-the-minute text on the latest equipment. Price $7.25 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

BEAUTY and REALISM in COLOR

Your patrons wish to forget that they are looking at a picture. The closer they come to feeling that they are watching living and breathing people, the better they are pleased. Color is growing steadily in popularity because it adds much to this feeling of realism. But snow-white light is needed to give color features their full value. Low intensity projection falls short of realism because the yellowish tint distorts color values.

Simplified High Intensity projection gives a snow-white light which brings out the full beauty and realism of color features. It also supplies two and one-half times as much screen light as low intensity projection for the same power consumption. Black and white pictures, as well as color, are more effectively projected by this powerful projection light.

Should you still have low intensity lamps it will pay you to investigate modern, economical, high intensity projection, the light that pays its own way. Ask your dealer to show you how improved projection pays investment and operating costs.

Make your projection equal to that of any theater in the country.

MODERNIZED IN FORMS AS WELL AS DECORATION

HERE is an example of a striking transformation in the old Meralta theatre in Los Angeles, which incidentally was completed in seventeen days. The auditorium views especially indicate the extent of the alteration, involving not only substitution of new finishing material and decorative style, but a change in auditorium shape. The original wooden floor was also removed and replaced with a concrete floor having a bowl type, or "reversed", slope. The new auditorium scheme, employing acoustic plaster, is painted in colors predominantly salmon pink and green. Above the exits are decorative cutouts, and in the recessed sections of the ceiling are silver stars. The chairs, which are in the American "Bodiform" model, are upholstered in coral—the backs in mohair, the seats in imitation leather. Illumination throughout the theatre is principally by luminaires of glass and cast plaster in modern patterns. There is a "cry-room", reached through the women's lounge. . . . The principal change at the front was the erection of a modern vertical sign and marquee emphasizing the attraction boards, which are of Wagner silhouette-letter type extending across all sides. Marquee soffit and vestibule ceiling are illuminated integrally with exposed "Bird's-eye" reflector lamps. Display cases are recessed and lighted with "daylight" fluorescent lamps. Finish of the lobby is plaster, which is painted salmon pink and green with beige trim, with a wall base of scagiola (plaster simulating marble), and the ticket booth is of cast concrete with a scagiola base. . . . The Meralta is owned and operated by Jack Y. Berman. Designers and engineers for the remodeling were the Twentieth Century Construction Company of Los Angeles.

At right is shown the front of the Meralta before remodeling, and the auditorium shortly after the work had been started.

Half-Year Projects Reported Total 168

WITH A TOTAL of 168 new theatre projects reported, a strong trend toward smaller seating capacities is shown by an analysis of data compiled by BETTER THEATRES' Projects Bulletin Service, covering the first six months of 1939. Corresponding reports for the first half of the year 1938 gave the average seating, for all projects reporting that subject, as 900. This year the average is 698, a decline in seats per theatre of almost 25%. Construction costs, however, remained about on the 1938 level, averaging $50,500, against $50,000 for 1938.

The trend toward smaller houses became plainly apparent in the second half of 1938, and when all figures for that year were available, an average decline in floor space per theatre of more than 25% was plainly indicated. The 1938 figures, as compared with those of 1937, also showed some decrease in average construction costs, not, however, proportionate to the decrease in size. During the first half of the present year the trend has become more clearly defined as being simply in the direction of smaller houses, with no change in the cost of construction or equipment. The more intimate theatre merely costs more per seat, and nevertheless is preferred.

Most Areas Active

The figures show a decline in theatre projects for the country as a whole, as compared with the first half of 1938, principally because of a strong drop in activity in two areas only. Throughout all the rest of the nation new construction held very closely to the figures of the preceding year, and in some regions exceeded them. Brightest spot was the Pacific slope, with more than a 50% increase.

The Mountain states and the Middle Atlantic states held their own or did a little better. New England, the South Atlantic states, the East North Central states and the East South central states showed small declines. The national average was pulled down by the West North Central and West South Central areas. The former reports a decrease in activity of almost 70%, and the latter a decline exceeding 50%.

Among individual states California showed the greatest activity, and also a tendency toward the larger theatre at relatively low cost per seat, with twelve projects reported. Reported seating capacity averaged 994 at an average cost of $75,300.

By contrast the second most active state, Illinois, reports eleven projects with an average seating capacity of only 746, but average cost of $139,600. The six projects reported from Michigan show an average seating capacity of 685 and average cost of $100,800. Wisconsin indicates an average of 640 seats, cost not shown. Ohio, however, with seven projects at an average cost of $135,000, averages 1,070 seats. Texas, which last year showed no sign of shifting to smaller theatres now reports eight projects at an average cost of $59,000; the seven for which seating data is available averaging a capacity of 871. This is very closely in line with the new national trend.

British Theatres Move To Raise Standards

ESTABLISHMENT in Great Britain of standards for screen brightness and sound quality was proposed at the annual conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, held in Blackpool during the last week of June. The British Standards Institution and the International Standards Association were revealed, in an address by Leslie Knopp, as co-operating in an attmept to find quantitative levels adapted to British conditions.

Differences of lighting equipment in small and large theatres were cited as indicating the possible desirability of using two types of prints, dense and light, to be distributed according to the effectiveness of the lamphouse equipment in each theatre. Medical specialists are working with theatre technicians in an endeavor to find satisfactory ratings for screen illumination, and there is general agreement, according to Knopp, that British screens are materially under-illuminated.

Definite quality standards for sound tracks were also suggested as a means of overcoming "the troubles we have experienced during the past eighteen months."

Training for Projectionists

H. V. Field, principal of the Constantine Technical College of Middlesborough, addressed the conference on the subject of the technical training of projectionists, offering the cooperation of educational authorities in organizing and in helping to finance technical training courses. The speaker presented a report on courses already in existence, covering electrical engineering, elementary mathematics through trigonometry, general physics and detailed study of projection equipments.

A total of 285 students were stated to have been enrolled for courses covering two and three years, with classes held during morning hours.

Laws Limit Number And Size of Theatres

MUNICIPAL ordinances limiting the size and number of motion picture theatres come to light in New England and in Illinois.

In Mt. Morris, Ill., the city council has decreed that no theatre costing less than $40,000 may be erected in that town of 2,600 population. The purpose of the ordinance is said to be to limit the city's theatre facilities to the one house now operating and the second theatre currently under construction.

In Middletown, Conn., Salvatore Adorno planned a 1,000-seat airdrome theatre, but was obliged to construct it to hold only 300 seats because of a local ordinance requiring that all theatres of more than 300 capacity must front on a city street. Construction on the smaller scale has been completed accordingly, but at last reports Adorno was still waiting for official permission to operate.

Move Church Services to Air-Conditioned Theatre

BOTH CHURCH attendance and theatre patronage in Estill, S. C., were materially increased when Charles Harper installed air-conditioning in his theatre. Although containing only 304 seats, the house was equipped with a Carrier system providing complete summer conditioning, whereupon Mr. Harper offered the use of his auditorium for religious worship during the hot months. Local ministers welcomed the invitation, organized joint services, and reported a remarkable increase in attendance.

Mr. Harper, whose theatre may well be the smallest in the country to boast a complete conditioning installation, found that either through appreciation or because more people had become acquainted with the comforts he offered, box receipts on weekdays increased following the services.

Advancing the Art

¶ The new methods and equipment refinements in projection have been reported singly, as they came: Here is an appraisal of the sum of them—and they add up to just this: More selling conviction for screen entertainment at comparatively less cost in operation and maintenance

A SUMMARY of the advances in projection equipment which have been achieved in the past few years shows that progress has not been confined to a narrow front, but that substantially every single item of projection and sound apparatus has undergone notable improvement. One result of all these advances is to make possible, today, a show that is in every respect superior to that of relatively a few years ago. More striking is the fact that the progress made has been of such nature that the small theatre, working on a limited budget, shares in it to a disproportionately large extent. The gap in performance between what was possible to a large theatre and what was possible in a small one has been almost obliterated. The smaller house can now put on a show which approaches the results obtained in the largest more nearly than ever before in motion picture history.

Those technical advances which relate to maintenance and general operating costs have also been of such nature that the advantages realized are fully shared as between larger and smaller houses. There is always an economic differential based on the fact that a generous budget can afford investments for ultimate economy which are beyond the reach of a more limited appropriation. Most of the recent advances have, however, resulted in an outstanding reduction in first costs as well as in long-run operating charges, and small as well as large theatres can benefit accordingly.

The technical changes responsible for this alteration of conditions extend from projectors and amplifiers to such accessories as rewinders and film cabinets. The projection room has had an overhauling that reaches almost every detail, even to as small a trifle as film cement. Component parts of apparatus have been swept along in the same stream of progress—tubes, carbons, sprocket strippers, take-ups and a host of other individual items are better, more effective in doing their work, or cheaper to use, or both. Often both.

¶ Sound Fidelity

Examples can be found in every corner of the projection set-up. To choose one at random—practically all sound systems produced during the past year or more contain some inexpensive automatic provision for cancelling distortion. Universal today, such provisions were unknown in the theatre field three years ago, and two years ago could be found in the product of only one manufacturer. In their absence, the best system was subject to momentary periods of rasping sound as a result of exceptionally loud passages of recording, temporary carelessness with the volume control, or both. Today's smallest, cheapest amplifier contains reverse feedback or some other arrangement to provide self-acting, internal compensation for distortion. In addition, it is able to go into Class AB operation during periods of extreme volume, and therefore is much less likely to overload. Still further, amplifiers are so inexpensive that the smallest house can afford to buy reserve volume capacity.

This same freedom from overload distortion has been achieved in connection with loudspeaker units. Many earlier

PROJECTION CHECK-UP

• Improvement in the design of projection equipment, including sound and projection accessories, has been taking place at an accelerated rate. A comparison of the projection plant of only relatively a few years ago with one representative of projection technique today would demonstrate the advances made in the interests of a better performance at a higher level of efficiency. If you were to check up your projection facilities, would you find, for example—

of Motion Picture Presentation

models of excellent quality rattled at high volume even more readily than they burnt out, and did both at the least excuse. A little alteration in the design of the voice coil slot, substitution in some systems of units of slightly different construction, a change in the chemistry of voice coil cement —and speakers today handle much greater volume per unit without distortion and very seldom burn out under any circumstances.

¶ Better Lighted Image

Improvements in projection have been even more plainly evident to the audience. The progress of the last few years in screen lighting is of course known to all. All theatres can now have better light at lower cost—light so much better that patrons can easily be given greater convenience and safety in higher levels of general house illumination.

In this connection the smaller house is particularly favored. The day when "super-deluxe" theatres could have white projection light, while most theatres had yellow, is gone. Pictorial appeal and beauty are, or can easily be made, identical in all theatres. The smaller theatre pays less for lamphouse, carbons and current only in proportion as its screen is smaller, not because its show is inferior. All visibly enormous progress, resulting from a small change in the material of carbon cores, and the construction of lamps able to take advantage of it.

The benefits of the d.c. arc have likewise been extended in recent years to theatres that once regarded it as a luxury they couldn't afford. Current rectification equipment is much more flexible. The alternative to the motor-generator set is no longer the tricky, stuttering, untrustworthy mercury-arc rectifier. Modern rectifying tubes and metallic rectifying materials are now built into apparatus units suited to theatres of every size. They cost less, are infinitely more reliable; some of them need so little attention they can be installed in the cellar, and are. And the motor-generator has been redesigned to serve efficiently the low-voltage high-intensity arc.

¶ Reduced Vibration

To improved lighting, the modern projection room adds a steadier picture, resulting from the use of both better projectors and superior projection bases. Much more immune to vibration than the old, one-legged pedestal, all new bases, high-priced or low-priced, are rigidly braced at several points. The resultant enormous reduction in vibration not only improves the show, picture and sound, but obviously lessens wear at every point of the projection assemblage, cutting maintenance accordingly. Many of the new bases in the lowest price class are not only rigid, but constitute four-sided enclosures with electric wiring inside them protected physically and perfectly shielded. Certain types of electrical troubles are thus reduced.

The advent of recent low-cost projectors, including some models announced or to be announced in the summer of 1939, helps doom the day when the exhibitor working on a close budget had to be content with more or less reconditioned second-hand mechanisms discarded by his richer competitors as useless. Better mechanical design, resulting not only from longer experience in the theatre field, but also from the general progress of mechanical engineering, produces a steadier picture as well as a longer-wearing mechanism. Shutters are now likely to be less wasteful of light. Centralized lubrication in one form or another, protecting moving parts against damage resulting from oversight, is used wholly or in part in even low-cost new models.

¶ Easier Maintenance

Interior lights and the almost universal style of white-enamelled interiors, relatively slight changes, have had a remarkable effect in facilitating and encouraging cleanliness. The improved steadiness of projection also tends to eliminate a very important cause of sound trouble—namely, soundhead vibration and its accompanying sound noise, a condition that formerly was always difficult to remedy and could never be cured entirely by even elaborate effort.

Projectors are also easier to maintain by virtue of an important improvement in soundheads — again a relatively slight change, involving only minor mechanical modifications, but one that eliminates "lining up." With some of the newest soundheads, the projector can be taken off and put back between reels, if necessary. Advance in this matter has been progressive. With the earliest heads, lining up the projector was a job that might take anywhere from several hours to all night, and there are still theatres where that condition obtains. Proper maintenance is discouraged accordingly.

In the soundhead itself, film motion is now really stabilized, and audible flutter essentially a thing of the past. The sound gate modeled after the projection gate, although it was faced with requirements of very different nature, has been eliminated in favor of other devices better adapted to the nature of the work to be done. With soundheads of a type still used in a number of theatres it is another all-night job to get flutter down, not to where it is inaudible by any means, but merely to where it is tolerable.

Co-operating with the soundhead in elimination of flutter is today's more reliable, more effective take-up. The new models are larger in diameter, more adaptable to reels of different size, and give better, steadier operation with 2,000-foot reels than the old ones were able to give with 1,000-foot reels. In some models the old-fashioned leather disc, prone to wear and to cause trouble, has been replaced with a fibre plate that is trouble-free and has shown practically indefinite life. (This case is, however, against the general trend in that first cost has been increased, not reduced, and ultimate economy results only from reduction of maintenance cost.) Very recently announced is a new take-up using an oil-type friction clutch.

Projection accessories have kept pace with the apparatus proper. A new film cabinet has compartments individually fire-insulated by the comparatively inexpensive process of pouring a liquid asbestos compound into the intervening space. The compound hardens in place into an officially approved fire-resistant solid. Comparatively recent motor-driven rewinders include among other improvements safety devices that protect the film in case of breakage. Advances incorporated in both the design and (in some cases) the location of modern changeovers give quicker switching and a smoother-running performance. Quicker and much smoother action is also provided by modern automatic curtain controls, which additionally are proof against jamming. New stereopticons are more efficient in utilizing light, as much as 50% more efficient in some cases; and are equipped with more effective controls, better designed and more accessibly located.

Projector drive motors underwent spectacular improvement some years ago, be-

Auditorium Design

FUNCTIONAL DECORATION

TREATMENT of the auditorium involves two functions, and they are integral. The design must provide an environment altogether attractive and specifically conducive to the spirit of leisure, recreation, flights of fancy. This very same design must also be adjusted, delicately, to the mechanism of sound reproduction. The auditorium, indeed, is part of the whole machinery that renders the film into entertainment.

Because of this inevitable blending of decoration and acoustics certain materials have peculiarly lent themselves to the practicable solution of auditorium design. This article, and its accompanying pictorial suggestions, is the first of a group of editorial features devoted to such materials, with acoustical data prepared in collaboration with C. C. Potwin, acoustics consultant.

Immediately above is a photographic representation of Calicel tile, and in the auditorium view we see it applied to the Monte Vista theatre in Pleasant Ridge, a suburb of Cincinnati. Neutral in itself, Calicel blends readily with other materials, and full use of this characteristic is made in the Monte Vista alternate bandings. Calicel somewhat resembles petrified sponge, or it can be likened to stone in surface texture. Its sound absorption characteristics are derived from its cellular structure.

1. The Celotex Group

AMONG THE pressed or prepared fibrous and mineral materials adapted to both acoustic treatment and decorative finish, the Celotex tiles and boards have long been widely used in theatres. There are several types suited to both purposes, and others which are more specifically applicable to acoustic correction alone, and to thermal insulation. Attention is given here largely to those which combine decorative qualities (if used tastefully, as suggested in accompanying photographs) with characteristics meeting the requirements of the motion picture auditorium.

¶ CALICEL

Calicel is a cellular mineral stone having the texture of stone and is therefore best suited decoratively to monumental touches —simulating masonry, for example. Its ability to absorb sound is due to air cells within its structure, and it therefore is specifically adapted to noise reduction. Its greatest sound-absorbing efficiency lies in the high and middle frequencies. To extend its efficiency to meet overall requirements, including the low frequencies, application with mechanical support, so as to provide air space behind the material, is recommended.

In general it may be said that Calicel is indicated when its masonry texture is desirable from the point of view of architectural design, and when a small amount of acoustic correction is needed.

If it is desired decoratively, and acoustic requirements are beyond the range of its characteristics, it may be readily combined with other materials which provide the specific absorption sought.

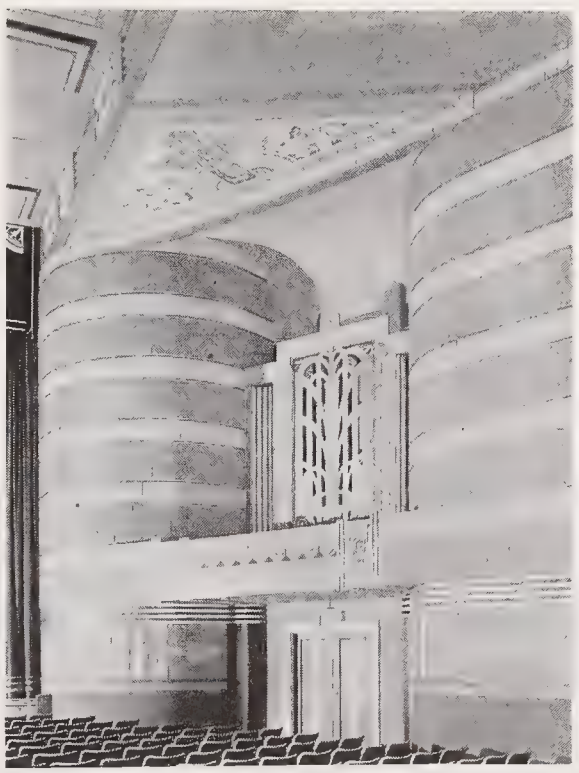
There is additionally Calicel Acoustical Castone, which is well adapted to coffers, intricate detailed panels, mouldings, pilasters and other decorative features. By mixing in variously colored aggregates, a variety of interesting surface textures may be obtained.

Calicel is not regarded as readily paintable, but the Castone may be painted when new with only moderate reduction in acoustical efficiency.

Calicel is fully fireproof.

¶ ACOUSTI-CELOTEX TILE

Acousti-Celotex tile (the so-called C-series) was one of the first of the tiles to be used in theatres when sound brought its acoustical problems; it is of cane fibre composition and is procurable in a variety of types covering the full range of frequencies.



Its acoustic efficiency is derived from its composition plus perforations which extend the area of the absorbing surface, and its availability in various thicknesses makes it an exceedingly flexible material in acoustic correction. The perforations are not in its favor from a decorative point of view, but the fact that any desired gradation of sound absorption can be obtained with this single type of material, has induced architects to exercise some ingenuity in its decorative application, and examples of effective results are shown in accompanying photographs.

As indicated, the thickness of the material is to be taken into account with respect to specific acoustic and structural problems. Acousti-Celotex ½-inch and ⅝-inch thick have strong absorption characteristics when to Serve Both Sound and Decoration

Above and below are illustrated distinctive auditorium designs employing Acousti-Celotex and cane fiber boards. Above is shown the Avalon theatre in Minneapolis (Percy Crosier, architect), in which the auditorium walls are treated with Acousti-Celotex. This is a perforated material, yet here the designer has overcome, through sensitivity to pattern and knowledge of his material, the difficulties presented by the perforations, which after all represent a functional efficiency to be made full use of. The left-hand view below is of the Ambassador theatre in Baltimore (John J. Zink, architect), in which Celotex cane fiber board has been used in a bold pattern. The other picture shows a detail of an auditorium wall in the Registertown theatre, Registertown, Md. (John Eyeing, architect); here Acousti-Celotex has been employed with frank functionalism, but for decorative relief cane fiber board has been grooved in a cornice figuration.

mounted on 1-inch furring strips, and this mounting is recommending to obtain maximum low-frequency absorption. In those cases requiring considerable acoustical treatment, the most efficient distribution often suggests the use of thicknesses of $\frac{13}{16}$-inch and $1\frac{1}{4}$-inch on the rear wall, the $\frac{5}{8}$-inch on the rear side walls, and the $\frac{1}{2}$-inch on the forward side walls—in the amounts, of course, that are required by each individual set of conditions.

Acousti-Celotex is available in rolled-ivory and varnish-hot-rolled finishes. The former is particularly well adapted to areas subject to impact or wear.

Acousti-Celotex tiles may be painted with any standard type of paint without affecting its sound-absorption characteristics.

¶ BOARDS AND PLANKS

While well adapted to the finishing of rooms such as lounges, where they lend themselves to very interesting treatments while at the same time providing desirable noise reduction, Celotex Tile Board, Insulating Plank and Insulating Board have varying degrees of efficiency as auditorium sound absorbents, depending upon the manner in which they are applied. When properly mounted, they may be used with other materials for balance.

In general, it may be here pointed out that if an acoustical board is mounted flat against a structurally solid surface, it tends to absorb only the middle range and high frequencies, and has very little effect on the low frequencies. If an air space is provided behind the board, its absorption co-efficients are increased at the low frequencies, usually to the point where they equal the co-efficients at the middle range and high frequencies. Yet this air space, which is so essential for proper low-frequency absorption, can contribute to inferior acoustical results if the board (Standard Insulating Type) is inadequately or incorrectly mounted. The method of mounting must be such as to eliminate accentuated resonance at certain frequencies in the lower register, as this would produce a condition of sound distortion in the theatre. This condition has been experienced in cases where the acoustical board was applied directly to studding uniformly spaced at dimensions more than 24 inches on centers.

Here is a simple design nakedly devoted enough to the fundamental purpose of the auditorium to please the most insistent exponent of pure cinematic function. This is the auditorium of the Beverly theatre in Chicago (Ronald F. Perry, architect). Its walls were treated with Absorbex (a detail photograph of which appears at left), which then was spray-painted. Absorbex is composed of wood fibers bound with cement, and its normal acoustic properties, which are especially characterized by absorption of medium and high frequencies, are due to air passages.

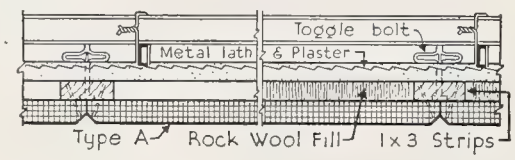
When lumber is omitted as a sub-finishing material for the interior, and the board is applied directly to the studding, one of two methods of mounting is suggested in order to minimize resonance. Either the board should be applied to furring strips, non-uniformly spaced and nailed to the studding; or horizontal and diagonal stiffeners, non-uniformly spaced, should be nailed in between the verticals, to which the acoustical board also may be attached if it is to be applied directly to the studding.

In very few cases are acoustical boards adequate for the rear wall surface. They may be suitable for the side walls or the ceiling, but do not usually overcome direct reflections from the rear wall.



The acoustical boards manufactured in tile form are usually available pre-colored so that they need not be painted when installed. Painting is often detrimental to acoustical boards unless done lightly with water colors or stains and with extreme care in application. Examples of the decorative possibilities are:

Using board over complete surface area and tinting portions with oil paint, leaving the natural surface (by adjustment of absorption requirements and decorative pattern) for sound correction.

Using board in combination with other efficient acoustical materials and stenciling or grooving the board in some design.

¶ ABSORBEX

This material is of wood fiber composition with a cement binder; accordingly it has great structural strength and is fireproof. Its acoustic-correction properties are derived from air passages within the material. In general, Absorbex is best suited to noise reduction applications. When mounted flat on a surface, its efficiency lies well within high and middle frequency ranges, and its low-frequency value increases only slightly when mounted on furring strips providing, say 1 inch of air space behind it. However, the low-frequency absorption can be greatly increased by mounting it as shown in the accompanying drawing. Additionally, when applied to suspended ceiling construction, Absorbex is highly efficient at the low frequencies.

Mounting flat or on 1-inch furring strips is feasible only when small amounts are being used principally for reasons of design and absorption above the low's. Absorbex may also be used successfully in combination with tile board, which will often make up the necessary absorption in the low's.

Absorbex may be painted, but extreme care should be used, and water color tints or sprayed casein paint are indicated if more than moderate absorption, as for noise reduction, is desired.

There are a number of other materials in the Celotex group which should be noted. One of these is Acousti-Celotex Mineral Fiber Tile, which is a fireproof perforated and paintable material with frequency absorption characteristics good in the 1¼-inch thickness.

Another is Calistone, which is similar to Calicel, having the appearance of stone, but it is harder than Calicel. In the 2-inch thickness, it has a favorable frequency absorption characteristic (the 1-inch is deficient in the low's), and decoratively it is adapted to about the uses noted for Calicel. It is made in sizes and shapes well adapted to special patterns.

Thermax is a material similar to Absorbex, but has larger fibers. Low in cost, one-inch Thermax has favorable acoustic-correction characteristics when backed up with a 1-inch blanket of mineral wool.

"BUILT TO EXCEL—NOT JUST TO COMPETE"

A Modern Revision of Colonial

The new Kennedy theatre in Washington, D. C., presents an interesting departure from conventional modern treatments in that the basis of the design is Colonial Georgian. Located in an exclusive residential section, it is an addition to the Warner circuit, having been leased for a long term from Harris Shapero. Designed by John Eberson, New York theatre architect, the theatre proper has a cubage of 353,000 feet and seats 968 on one floor. Construction cost is placed at approximately $100,000. The equipment cost $25,000, including air-conditioning system.

FRONT: The Colonial Georgian front of the theatre employs regular red-faced brick with limestone placed in quoins on the corners with clean straightforward effect. Due to local regulations the theatre sign was applied to the face of the building and the use of Old English Letters was decided upon as being most indicative of the Colonial period. The marquee, because of the character of the neighborhood, is used only as a weather protection and its soffit is gracefully illuminated with incandescent lamps arranged in a typical Georgian geometric pattern. The shadow box over the front entrance doors is sufficiently large enough to provide ample display space for the running attraction. Colonial copper hoods serve as a protection over the exterior display frames built into the face of the structure. These attractive hoods also contain the lighting units for the displays. In the vestibule, doors, poster frames and box office are of natural finish Tupela wood.

LOBBY: The lobby floor is covered with red, 3/8-inch corrugated and perforated rubber mats set into brass strip retainers. The wooden poster frames and doors are in Colonial design and the walls, above the painted plaster wood trim wainscoting, are covered with damask fabric. Above both lines of doors leading to both the auditorium and street there have been placed display boxes with sliding partitions that can be rearranged as required.

FOYER: The foyer is separated from the auditorium proper by standee rails of which the center bank rail is mounted with a white painted, Colonial type, fluted pillar wooden frame containing Venetian Blinds to eliminate screen interference during the day through the doors leading from the lobby into the foyer-auditorium. Into the cream ceiling formed by the projection booth, are set sunken paneled opaque glass lighting fixtures. To the right and left are the women's and men's lounges with attractively framed open entrances formed by pylons on either side of the open curtain draped doorways. The foyer carpeting of an unusual design in green, gold, white, red and black is the first theatre installation of fluorescent treated carpeting. Although the flooring fabrics' fluorescent properties are exploited only in the auditorium proper, the vigorous coloring of the design results in a telling effect in the foyer portion of the theatre under regular lighting conditions.

AUDITORIUM: The auditorium walls are of furred construction with rockwool mounted on metal lath covered by blue damask fabric in a gold tassel and cord design. On either side of the stage are large French (Adam Style) windows lighted from within by soft tones of blue and old rose. Effectively outlined by hanging drapes these windows incorporate the emergency exit doors into the general design. The ceiling is of hardened plaster painted in a Georgian pattern and effectively integrated into the decorations are three plaques acting as diffusers for the air ventilation outlets. Arranged in three banks and spaced 35" apart back to back are 968 auditorium seats none less than 20" wide and wherever possible some as wide as 22". These seats with their metal backs, upholstered in an attractive shade of blue mohair on the cushion as well as the back are of box spring construction for maximum comfort. The end standards are also in blue and with the raised decorative cream colored striping form a pleasing decorative contrast with the special silver aisle light louvres and ash blonde wood armrests. The aisles are carpeted with same flooring fabric as in the foyer and it is in the auditorium that all of the advantages in the fluorescent dye treated carpet are displayed. Making use of the low light levels in the auditorium, in place of regular aisle illumination two 2½-watt Argon glow lamps were installed in specially adapted aisle light louvres in order to activate the luminescent properties of the carpet.

LOUNGES: The women's and men's lounges present an innovation in the construction of these two public spaces. Instead of ordinarily plastered walls, 1-inch slab rockwool mounted on metal lath was attached to the furring and wallpaper was applied directly to the rockwool slab surface with not only a considerable saving over the regular plaster type finish, but with the added advantage of having the lounges excellently soundproofed, a necessity in view of their close proximity to the auditorium. The men's lounge has a rubber tile floor with a darker contrasting color laid out directionally so as not to show traffic dirt marks from the entrance to the foyer through to the lavatory door. Drum styled lampshades and a ceiling lighting fixture with three calabash pipes as ornaments serve to suggest the masculine atmosphere. The women's lounge has broadloom carpeting, simply designed wallpaper and is furnished with Swedish modern blonde wood and cane-framed chairs.

.about PEOPLE of the THEATRE

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

MRS. MARK ATTWOOD has sold the Amuse-U theatre at Fordyce, Ark., to the Lee Williams Theatres Corporation of Oklahoma City, Okla. R. B. HARDY, in charge for the new owners, has announced that the company planned to open another theatre in Fordyce in addition to remodeling the Amuse-U.

A. M. BOWLES, manager of the Northern California division of Fox West Coast Theatres, has been made a director of the Market Street Association in San Francisco.

J. C. TUNE has started the remodeling of a building in Shelbyville, Tenn., for a new theatre which he will operate with TONY SUDEKUM.

The Central States Theatre Corporation have leased a building in Burlington, Ia., to be remodeled as a 700-seat theatre. According to HARRY M. WARREN, general manager of the company, the project will cost $40,000. Wetherell & Harrison, architects of Des Moines, have been retained to draw the plans.

Warners have announced the transfer of HOWARD PETTINGILL of the Warner in Worcester, Mass., to the managership of the Warner in Bridgeport, Conn., and the transfer of EDWARD LYNCH from Bridgeport to replace Mr. Pettingill in Worcester. SAMUEL COOPERSTEIN of the contact department at New Haven, Conn., has been assigned as the new assistant manager at the Warner in Worcester.

RUSS LEDDY, formerly district manager for Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises, Inc., in Milwaukee, has been named manager of the circuit's Orpheum theatre in Green Bay, Wis., former manager of which was ELMER BRENNAN.

The Roxie Amusement Company, Inc., has been incorporated at San Francisco, by CHARLES GRAY and F. E. CANNON.

MR. AND MRS. RAY BALTZLEY, operators of the Bussey at Bussey, Ia., have changed the name of the house to Rayola, a combination of the owners' first names, Ray and Lola.

A permit for the erection of a negro theatre in Pahokee, Fla., has been issued to LOUIS GOLD. The house will be of frame and stucco construction.

HERBERT HERR of East Haven, Conn., has entered into partnership with WILLIAM HOYT for the operation of the 748-seat Capitol. ABEL JACOCKS, associated with Mr. Hoyt for the past seven years, has retired from the motion picture business. Mr. Herr is new to theatre operation.

Fred W. Wentker (left) and W. L. Jones, long with the RCA Photophone organization, who have been appointed assistant division manager and national service manager, respectively. Announcement of the new positions was made by Edward C. Cahill, RCA Photophone division manager, who continues to supervise operations of the sound equipment servicing organization nationally. Mr. Wentker joined the RCA service staff in 1928. Mr. Jones became affiliated with the company in 1929, when he became manager of the Philadelphia installation and service office.

W. CLYDE SMITH, prominent theatre operator of Hot Springs, Ark., has been named general chairman of the Chamber of Commerce $100,000 membership-advertising campaign in that noted spa.

OSCAR S. OLDKNOWN, vice president of the National Theatre Supply Company, has returned to the Coast, after a two-week visit to the home offices in New York, where he conferred with the organization's president, W. E. Green, and other company executives. Mr. Oldknown is in charge of National's western branches, with headquarters in Los Angeles.

GEORGE W. WILKINSON, operator of the Wilkinson theatre, Wallingford, Conn., and in showbusiness in that town since 1890, recently was given a testimonial luncheon at the Racebrook Country Club in New Haven, Conn., by a large number of exchange men, exhibitors and other friends. Mr. Wilkinson was presented with a testimonial scroll and other gifts.

WILLIAM EXTON, manager of Standard Theatres' Kenosha and Gateway theatres in Kenosha, Wis., has resigned after five years to operate his own theatre, the Roosevelt. The house has been leased from CHARLES COLLINS. It was reopened July 15 after having been closed for several weeks for remodeling.

K. Lee Williams Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Oklahoma City, Okla., recently opened a new house in Nashville, Ark. The house, formerly known as the Gem, was completely remodeled and renamed the Howard. LOUIS LITTLEFAIR is the manager. He formerly operated houses in Winters and Ballinger, Texas, for the Griffith Amusement Company.

FRANK BICKERSTAFF has assumed his new duties as manager of the Bijou theatre in Savannah, Ga. Mr. Bickerstaff was formerly assistant manager of the Palace, Athens, Ga.

R. E. Griffith Theatres are spending about $50,000 on two new houses in New Mexico. One theatre, at Hobbs, will seat 780. The other is located at Clovis and will seat 900.

DAVE GARVIN is the new manager of the Strand theatre in Spartanburg, S. C. He was formerly manager of the Carolina in High Point, S. C.

DAN TOCCHINI of Santa Rosa, Calif., has purchased the State in Lovermore, Calif., from J. A. HARVEY, JR.

J. F. GOLDMAN, head of the Roosevelt and Lincoln theatres in Cincinnati, has acquired a new house, the Beecher, in that city. It will be remodeled.

RICHARD DEVRIES, manager of the Ritz theatre in Correctionville, Ia., recently married the former Miss Jessie Elder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Elder of Belmond, Ia.

General Theatre Company has taken over the former Rex theatre at Oshkosh, Wis., and has renamed it the Time. CHARLES LOW is the new manager.

H. E. BUCHAN, theatre operator in Hendersonville, N. C., has been elected Exalted Ruler of the local Elks Club.

RALPH PRATT, owner of the State in Washington, Ia., is remodeling the theatre after a fire. Improvements include the remodeling of the front.

Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises, Inc., is renovating its Beverly and Myers theatres at Janesville, Wis., and its Lyric in Stevens Point. The circuit is planning to expend $45,000 on improvements for the Myers, including new seats, lounges, enlarged lobby, new marquee, porcelain enamel front, and new carpeting. Improvements on the Beverly, costing $5,000, consist in the installation of an air-conditioning plant. At the Lyric, a Trane air-conditioning system, new carpeting, and new Heywood-Wakefield auditorium seating have been installed. The designer for the improvements made in all three theatres was George H. Brown of the Fox-Wisconsin circuit.

JACK SCHWARTZ has reopened his 700-seat West End theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., after it had been closed for renovation. Interior decoration was done by Muirhead's of that city, with Modern Theatre Equipment supplying the projectors, and National Theatre Supply installing an American Blower ventilating system.

New Simplex projectors have recently been installed in the Egyptian theatre at DeKalb, Ill.

The Rialto theatre in Walsenburg, Col., has been reopened after having been closed for some time. The house is one of the Fox Intermountain Group.

HARVEY KNY, formerly manager of Warner's Rialto at Racine, Wis., has been named manager of the circuit's Venetian in that city, succeeding DON NICHOLS, who has been transferred to the east. STANLEY LAMBERT, former manager of Warner's Shore theatre in Chicago, has been transferred to the Rialto.

the new 950-seat Kentucky at Latonia, Ky. The house is equipped with Brenkert projectors. It was built by the F. & Y. Building Service of Columbus, Ohio, and is of modern design throughout.

Tom Valos has taken over the Fargo theatre at Geneva, Ill., from Glen Lekanter. After remodeling, the house will be opened under the name of the Geneva. Mr. Lekanter is now associated with the Anderson Circuit, as manager of the Arcade theatre in St. Charles, Ill.

Louis Nanos, co-owner with George Pliakos of the Criterion theatre, St. Louis, Mo., recently died.

The new Hollywood theatre, a new 350-seat house at Estherville, Ia., built by Harold Aldinger and Carl Furstnow, has been opened.

The Crest theatre, Crestline, Ohio, has been opened by R. T. Kemper.

J. D. Coughlin, formerly of Sioux City, Ia., has taken over the lease of the Alta theatre in Alta, Ia. Mr. Coughlin has redecorated the theatre and has renamed it the Roxy.

Roy L. Rollier, operator of the Amita theatre in Lamont, Okla., has installed a Sirocco cooling system in his theatre.

Dale Leifheit, for many years manager of Anderson Circuit theatres in DeKalb, Ill., has retired from show business.

The Bode theatre has been opened at Bode, Ia., by K. D. Long.

Larry Starsmore, Colorado manager for Westland theatres, and Cecelia Heid of Colorado Springs, Col., were married in Taos, N. M. The couple will make their home in Colorado Springs.

Ed Recknagel, owner of the Amusu theatre in Fonda, Ia., has new Ultraphone sound equipment, which replaces apparatus badly damaged by a recent fire.

Sam Sigoloff, projectionist at the Union theatre, St. Louis, Mo., spent his recent vacation in Hollywood.

Bob Lucas is now managing the State in Sandwick, Ill. Mr. Lucas formerly was located in Morris, Ill.

Arthur Fiddler, whose theatre at Dorris, Calif., was recently destroyed by fire, plans to rebuild.

An air-conditioning system and new heating plant have been installed in the Fargo at Sycamore, Ill., according to Stuart Tomber, manager.

Lou Harris has disposed of the Rialto theatre in Stockton, Calif., to Fox West Coast Theatres.

Maker of Theatre Equipment 28 Years

The marketing of a projector by the Brenkert Light Projection Company, which is expected to get fully underway in August, coincides with the completion of Karl Brenkert's 28th year as a manufacturer of motion picture projection equipment. Mr. Brenkert founded the firm on August 10, 1911, manufacturing a stereopticon. Since then he has brought out, in the order named, a spotlight, an effect machine (the famous Brenograph), a projection lamp, a rectifier (now being distributed by the Brenwood Linze Company of St. Louis), and now a projector.

In 1926, Mr. Brenkert brought his two brothers, Wayne and Neal, into the organization.

Just a few months ago the Brenkert company entered into a sales arrangement with RCA by which each organization has the dealer and field facilities of the other for exhibitor contacts. Each company, however, does its own servicing.

Charles A. Shaffer, who operated a theatre at Oceanside, Calif., died recently.

L. H. Kahn, owner of the Grand theatre at Des Moines, has remodeled the front of his house as the first step in general modernization.

Frank and Louise Uanero have purchased the West theatre in Delano, Calif., from Arthur Fukanda and J. G. Takeuchi.

Consolidated Theatres, Inc., affiliated company of the Griffith Amusement Company circuit, recently acquired two theatres in Lubbock, Texas, from Andy Milnar.

Fred Fritz has opened the Wilton in Wilton Junction, Ia. He recently opened the Oxford theatre in Oxford Junction, Iowa, after modernizing the house.

Operation of the Eaton theatre, Eaton, Col., has been taken over by Annabelle Hogue, owner of the building.

George Woods, formerly of Kingsley, Ia., has bought the Ritz at Panora, Ia.

Russell Armentrout plans to open his new Clark theatre at Barry, Ill., about September 1. Contracts for the chairs, lighting fixtures, Mohawk carpet, and draperies were awarded to the Exhibitors Supply Company of St. Louis.

Ray Davis, district manager for Fox, has announced that $50,000 will be spent on the remodeling of the Empress theatre at Laramie, Wyo. When completed, the house will be of modern architecture and will seat 840. The circuit is also remodeling the Strand at Cheyenne Wyo.

Harry L. Nace and James A. Adams plan to open a theatre at Telleson, Ariz.

Will Cross, operator of the King theatre in Ida Grove, Ia., has completed the remodeling of the front.

S. E. Pirtle of Jerseyville, Ill., has placed an order with the Exhibitors Supply Company of St. Louis, Mo., for 650 Ideal chairs for his Princess theatre at Bearstown, Ill.

Dave Davis, circuit manager for Atlas Theatre Company, has announced that Ralph Hamilton, recently manager of the Gem in Golden, Col., has been named manager of the Santa Fe in Denver. Mr. Hamilton succeeds Frank Milton, who resigned. Alvin Quint, formerly assistant city manager at Salida, Col., is the new manager of the Gem.

The Southwestern Amusement Company has been incorporated at Douglas, Ariz., with a capital stock of $150,000, by William E. Whalley, Jr., of Phoenix, Ariz., and Agie J. Beaty.

The National Theatre Supply Company of St. Louis, will equip the new State theatre in Alton, Ill., which is to be opened soon by D. L. Glover. The equipment will include Simplex projectors and Simplex 4-Star sound system, 500 Irwin chairs, and Crestwood carpet.

V. B. Combs has been appointed manager of the Strand theatre in Mountain City, Tenn.

P. D. Hogue has taken over the Bell theatre at Johnson, Kas., from Forrest Walker.

Work on the new Red Bud theatre in Red Bud, Ill., is progressing rapidly and the house is expected to be opened the early part of September. The theatre is being built by C. T. Cusinberre, formerly sound engineer with RCA Photophone.

Ben Cohen of Pittsburgh, has purchased the Savoy and Superior theatres in Cleveland, from Meyer Kaplan. Mr. Kaplan will continue to serve as booker for the two houses.

C. D. Peck, owner and operator of the Southwest Theatre Equipment Company of Wichita, Kas., has purchased a half interest in the business of J. O. Buckles, operated under the name of the Projection Maintenance Service Company.

Reuben De Gruy, manager of the Strand theatre at Laurel, Miss., has donated an old organ to the city for use in the Civic Center.

The Cost of Projection Light

● The first of a group of articles based on actual operating data and practical tests, offering authentic aid in the formation of maintenance policy

By HENRY D. BEHR

IN DEALING with some of the factors controlling the operation of projection equipment, exhibitors should never lose sight of the relationship between operating standards, actual operating costs, and the quality of the image projected on the screen. How many exhibitors, theatre managers and projectionists really ascertain the relative efficiency of power for ultimate consumption at the arc in comparison to power actually delivered to the arc? More than likely a true picture of the facts would amaze many of them.

Nobody would ever tolerate the burning continuously of from 1,000 watts to 10,000 watts of lighting equipment in some hidden place, such as a generator room or organ chamber, without serving any useful purpose, yet waste of this kind goes on undetected in many theatres every minute of their operation.

Waste of Current

Deficiencies in current sources, arc lamp equipment, condenser systems, reflectors, lenses and screens, produce the same extravagant and wasteful result as would the continuous and unnecessary burning of many incandescent bulbs. Theatre managers are frequently "on the carpet," particularly in these times, because every expenditure is closely scrutinized by their executives, who strive for more efficiency.

Many a hard-pressed manager, driven to desperation, starts on another one of his almost futile wattage reduction campaigns. The result of his painstaking efforts is the elimination of, or reduction in the wattage of, a few bulbs here and there, with doubtful advantage to the theatre.
